[2] VPP participants are not normally removed from the unemployment register.

In addition, in the area including Bury, Prestwich and Radcliffe up to 31 March 1987, 1,035 people started YTS training and in Bury, 562 people started adult training courses. The gross cost per filled place for YTS in 1986-87 is estimated to be £2,600. Similar information for adult training is not available.

Tourism

Mr. Sumberg asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the performance of tourism in 1986 and prospects for the coming year.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have today published a leaflet entitled "A bumper year for tourism", which provides information on tourism performance in 1986. This shows that there was strong growth in domestic tourism spending with overseas tourism earnings equalling the record £5·5 billion spent in 1985. On the basis of recovery in the numbers of overseas visitors in the last quarter of 1986 and the high level of forward bookings, prospects for 1987 look good.

Research and Development

Sir David Price asked the Paymaster General what is his Department's planned expenditure on research and development for 1987-88; and what are the main areas of research selected by his Department under the Rothschild principles of the customer-contractor relationship.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 7 April 1987, c.154]: My Department's planned expenditure on research and development for 1987-88 is shown in table A and that of the Manpower Services Commission in table B.

All research and development work conducted by my Department and the Manpower Services Commission is designed to assist with the achievement of the publicly stated objectives of the Department of Employment group.

ENVIRONMENT

London Docklands Development Corporation (Site Sales)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a list of sites sold by the London Docklands Development Corporation since 1981, itemising how much each was sold for, and the amount of London Docklands Development Corporation funds spent on site work, reclamation and infrastructure.

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will provide a list of sites sold by the London Docklands Development Corporation since 1981, itemising the price at which the sale was made, and the amount of London Docklands Development Corporation funds spent on site works, reclamation and infrastructure.

Mr. John Patten: Appropriate information is being collated by the LDDC. I will write to the hon. Members when it is available.

London Docklands

Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many firms have moved out of the Docklands urban development area or have closed down since July 1981; and how many people were employed in those firms.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 6 April 1987, at column 26.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list the principal grants made towards sports facilities in each of the counties of Cleveland, Durham, Northumbria and Tyne and Wear since 1979.

Mr. Tracey: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Accommodation Agencies

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many accommodation agencies have continued to trade after successful prosecution; and how many directors of accommodation agencies have continued to trade after a successful prosecution.

Mr. Tracey: We have no evidence that accommodation agencies or their directors have continued to trade after having been successfully prosecuted.

Local Authorities (Overtime Payments)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to restrict the amount of overtime payments which may be earned by local authority employees to no more than 50 per cent. of their basic remuneration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government have no plans to introduce such legislation.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the central Government rate support grant per head of population for 1986-87 and 1987-88 for (a) Northamptonshire, (b) Derbyshire, (c) Leicestershire, (d) Bedfordshire, and (e) Cambridgeshire.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested are as follows:

	1986-87 RSG £p/h	1987-88 RSG £p/h
Northamptonshire	145·2	133·8
Derbyshire	123·3	133·4
Leicestershire	150·7	143·5
Bedfordshire	90·4	58·2
Cambridgeshire	105·1	91·1

Rate support comprises block grant and domestic rate relief grant. Counties do not receive domestic rate relief grant.

The figures for 1986-87 are authorities' entitlements based on budgeted expenditure information at first supplementary report.

The figures for 1987-88 are authorities' initial entitlements to grant based on expenditure figures returned on form BG78, modified if necessary to include an estimate of the cost of the teachers' pay settlement.

River Pollution

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy towards control of river pollution in the light of the recent research results published by Greenpeace, a copy of which has been sent to him, showing that 35·5 per cent. of all the flounders examined in the inner region of the Thames were diseased or abnormal in their appearance.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am aware of this report which was released at the time of the recent Water Research Centre conference on the North sea. However, I do not see the results of this study as having any direct implications for my Department's general policy on the control of river pollution, which is to restore and maintain the wholesomeness of our rivers. To this end, we rely on part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 which provides a comprehensive system of controls covering all significant waters. In addition, the Government have put forward a number of detailed proposals to strengthen these controls in the context of our privatisation proposals, and these are actively being considered.

The setting up last week of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution with a specific water pollution inspector capability, will considerably strengthen the Department's role in the enforcement of controls which in turn should lead to further improvements in water quality.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish the interim results of the survey of the quality of bathing waters he announced on 3 December 1985; and if, in the light of these results, he is satisfied with the quality of the United Kingdom's bathing waters.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those of the 1,500 sites investigated for the storage of low or intermediate level nuclear waste that were in the constituency of Leyton or in adjoining constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any site in south Yorkshire has been included in a list of possibly suitable sites for the disposal of low level or intermediate level radioactive waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Members to the answers I gave on 6 April at column 29, to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) and the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Miss Maynard).

Financial Management Initiative

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the effect on his Department of the financial management initiative.

Mr. Ridley: The approach embodied in the FMI is changing working assumptions throughout my Department. Results are reported annually to the House in the public expenditure White Paper (currently, Cmnd. 56) as well as in such reports as the White Papers on the FMI and the annual reports by major sponsored bodies.

The range of systems reflecting this approach include:

The MINIS top management system which reviews the progress against objectives and the future targets of all parts of the Department.

Line management systems (LMS) in all parts of the Department, giving positive reporting on delegated responsibilities.

An organisation for financial management (OFM) system of delegations identifying responsibilities in the policy line for financial management of each public expenditure sub-programme and vote sub-head. This system is being extended to running costs. Six hundred officials have been trained in financial management.

Devolved budgeting and monitoring throughout the Department for an increasing range of running costs. This system has recently been simplified, and the scope for virement between budget centres improved.

In common with the rest of the Civil Service, annual staff reports now review progress against the personal objectives and work plans agreed at the start of the reporting period.

Similar systems are in operation in the Property Services Agency, adapted to suit the agency's roles of managing the civil and defence estates and providing the Government's accommodation services. The major changes over the last eight years have been the introduction on the civil estate of the property repayment services scheme which has transferred to the client the responsibility for funding most accommodation services and the introduction in the defence estate of local works maintenance budgets.

For the longer term, we shall shortly be getting the results of a study of improvements to the agency's accounting systems which I hope will lead to a more commercial approach to its operations and an ability to compare PSA services directly with those provided by the private sector.

Effective corporate planning processes link the Department to all its major sponsored bodies. These focus on ministerial objectives, progress towards them and cost-effectiveness.

Outside the Department, the independent Audit Commission for local authorities is spreading the many lessons that can be learnt from the best of local authority financial management.

Since 1979, manpower has fallen by 35 per cent. in the Property Services Agency, including the Crown Suppliers. Other departmental staff have been reduced by 42 per cent., 2,500 of the savings being due to improved efficiency. Productivity is still rising.

Defective Housing

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the beacon rents for defective houses in the Yorkshire and east midlands registration areas;

(2) how many houses which are identified within the Housing Defects Act 1984 have been registered for fair rents.

Mr. Tracey: Information on registered rents does not show whether the properties concerned have been designed under the Housing Defects Act 1984 (now Housing Act 1985), and there is not beacon rent specifically for defective houses. Beacon rents are assessed only for four standard property types. The July 1986 beacon rents for modernised 1930s three bedroom semi-detached houses, which may be of a broadly similar size to some of the common types of defective houses, range from £20·75 to £26·73 per week in Yorkshire, and from £20·75 to £23·75 in the east midlands.

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the recommendation by the Building Research Establishment that defective houses should be examined at least every five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Building Research Establishment has recommended that designated unrepaired PRC properties first be inspected and tested as necessary, and then, in the light of that assessment, re-inspected periodically (not necessarily at five-year intervals). We have received no recent representations on this advice.

Falkland Islands (Equipment Sale)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was realised at the sale in Liverpool on 7 April of equipment from the Falkland Islands; to what use the proceeds of that sale will be put; what proportion of the equipment has been re-exported as a result of the sale; and on what basis the port of Liverpool was selected as the agents for this auction.

Mr. Chope: The sale in Liverpool on 7 April was privately organised and the Department was not involved. At the end of the Mount Pleasant airport contract Laing Mowlem ARC Joint Venture, the main contractor, sold its surplus plant and equipment to a company which arranged and paid for its transportation to the United Kingdom. The purchaser arranged the sale at Liverpool (through a firm of auctioneers) and the proceeds belong to him.

Derbyshire (Expenditure)

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) by how much gross county council expenditure has risen in Derbyshire, in real terms, between (a) 1980-81 and (b) 1981-82 and the latest date for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with the average gross county council expenditure rises over the same period of time;

(2) by how much current county council expenditure has risen in Derbyshire, in real terms, between (a) 1980-81 and (b) 1981-82 and the latest date for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with the average current county council expenditure rises over the same period of time.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Local Authority Services (Tendering)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on which activities he proposes to exclude from his forthcoming legislation requiring tendering for local authority services.

Dr. Boyson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 2 February at column 491. Application of the legislation in Scotland will, of course, be the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Playboard

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what initiatives his Department has taken since the inception of Playboard to promote and develop its responsibilities;

(2) what alternatives he considered for the future of Playboard prior to September 1986; and why he rejected them;

(3) if he will make a statement about the representations he received from organisations interested in the future of Playboard.

Mr. Tracey: Playboard itself was set up to pursue initiatives for children's play through funding from this Department. since 1983 the Department's contribution has amounted to £2·4 million. In addition, the Department has maintained support for children's play through the urban programme (over £6 million each year). since 1983, the Department of Health and Social Security has spent £6·5 million on initiatives for the Under-fives while maintaining its financial support, with the Department of Education and Science, for other voluntary organisations concerned with children's play.

Apart from the preferred option of merging Playboard's role and functions with the Sports Council's, a number of other options were considered, including maintaining support for Playboard, ceasing support altogether, and transferring the resources to the urban programme. The representations I have received from interested organisations about the "merger" primarily have been concerned with two issues: the case for the independence of play from sport, and with the scale of future funding.

I understand those concerns, but do not believe that the merger proposal preclude a separate identity for children's play. Nor does it affect in any way the support for play through the urban programme or from other Departments. Following Playboard's decision to go into liquidation, I am pursuing urgently with the Sports Council how best early arrangements can be put into place for achieving greater benefits for children's play in a more cost-effective way.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many families were in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in each borough in London in March 1987; and what are the equivalent figures for 1986 and 1985 respectively.

Mr. Tracey: The statistical publication "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England—Results for the fourth quarter 1986", which is to be published on 10 April, will include in table 7 the numbers, reported to this Department by the boroughs, of the households in bed-and-breakfast accommodation at the end of December: a copy will be placed in the Library.

Figures for December 1984 and December 1985 appear in corresponding publications for the second half of 1984 and the fourth quarter of 1985, respectively: these are available in the Library. Since publication of those reports, the following late returns have been received:

Brent—677 December 1984
Lambeth—98 December 1984 and 173 December 1985
Merton—7 December 1985

In addition, the number at December 1985 for Haringey has been revised to 195.

Homeless Families

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why guidelines are issued to housing authorities on the acceptance of homeless families who were from overseas;

(2) what representations he has received concerning Bangladeshi families in bed and breakfast accommodation in London;

(3) what advice his Department has issued to the London borough of Tower Hamlets concerning the application of the intentionally homeless rule under the Homeless Persons Act.

Mr. Tracey: Guidance to all local authorities on the exercise of their functions under part III of the Housing Act 1985 is contained in the Department's code of guidance (a copy of which is in the Library). Paragraphs 2.13-2.20 of that code are concerned with intentional homelessness, and paragraph A.2.2 is relevant to the treatment of people from overseas. Section 71(1) of the 1985 Act requires local authorities to have regard to the guidance in the code. Recent representations about the housing of Bangladeshi families in bed and breakfast accommodation have been from the London boroughs of Tower Hamlets and Westminster.

Smaller Building Contracts

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a interim report on the progress made by the working party which he has established to review the carrying out by the building industry of smaller building contracts, including the effects of competition from the black economy.

Mr. John Patten: The working party have met twice. At its next meetings it will be considering the scope for industry-wide warranty/guarantee schemes and the marketing of firms trading legitimately.

Stockbridge Village Trust

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the financial position of the Stockbridge village trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Stockbridge Village Trust was set up in 1983, with the full agreement of residents, to take over and refurbish what had been one of the most rundown local authority estates in the country. Using a mixture of public and private finance, the trust embarked on a unique redevelopment programme involving the repair and remodelling of the bulk of the existing tenanted housing and selling vacant plots of land for new housing, both for sale and for rent.

By September 1985 the trust had made substantial progress with this physical programme and, equally importantly, the trust had gained its tenants' confidence as a responsible and efficient landlord. In contrast to pre-trust days when over 10 per cent. of the estate had been vacant, the estate was now fully occupied with a waiting list of some 300 applicants.

Experience suggested that some of the initial assumptions and financial projections needed revision. We therefore appointed the consultants Ernst and Whinney to carry out a comprehensive appraisal of the trust's position and long-term prospects. It reported that the trust was managing the estate efficiently and carrying out its capital programme effectively, but it recommended some restructuring in the interests of long-term financial stability.

My Department discussed a package of measures, with the trust and its backers — Abbey National building society, Barclays Bank and Knowsley MBC, and I can now announce that full agreement has been reached by all the parties. These measures will enable the trust to complete its redevelopment of the estate. To complement them, there will be a continuing programme of new building for private sale, including sale on shared ownership terms. The Stockbridge Village housing association's programme of new build for fair rent is now largely complete. The metropolitan district of Knowsley will, with urban programme support, demolish the three Denes tower blocks in the centre of the estate and build a major leisure facility in their place.

I am pleased that all parties have reaffirmed their commitment to this trail-blazing initiative. The trust has already achieved a great deal, in refurbishing large areas of the estate, in building a new shopping centre, and in creating confidence in an area where around 200 residents have now bought their homes under the right to buy, and over 120 new homes have been built for owner-occupation. I look forward to the trust completing its programme successfully.

Eldon Hill (Quarrying)

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in the light of his recent decision to refuse to allow an extension of quarrying at Eldon Hill in the Peak District, he will make a statement on his policy on working and winning of minerals in national parks.

Mr. Waldegrave: All applications for development whether inside or outside national parks must be considered on their own merits. However, it is also the Secretary of State's policy as expressed in DOE Circular 4/76 that, because of the serious impact mineral working may have on the natural beauty of the parks, applications for the extraction of minerals in national parks must be subject to the most rigorous examination. In his view extraction should be demonstrated to be in the public interest, and consideration of such applications should therefore normally include an assessment of:

(i) the need for the development, including the extraction of the mineral, in terms of national considerations and the impact of permitting or refusing it upon the local economy;

(ii) the availability and cost of alternative sources of supply;

(iii) any detrimental effect on the environment and the landscape and the extent to which that could and should be moderated;

(iv) whether in the light of this assessment the proposed development would be justified in the public interest.

Local authorities should have regard to this policy in the preparation of, and alterations to, their development plans.

Zoological Society

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will announce details of further financial support to the Zoological Society of London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am pleased to say that the Government and the Zoological Society of London have agreed on both the level of funding for 1987-88 and the mounting of a radical study of the options for the future management and funding of London zoo and Whipsnade park. My right hon. Friend therefore intends to grant to ZSL £2 million in 1987-88 as revenue support plus a sum of up to £150,000 to match money raised by ZSL from private sources in 1986-87.

In addition ZSL has agreed that before the end of 1987-88 it will see whether there is a basis for submitting firm proposals for attracting new capital. In order to assist it, ZSL will, jointly with DOE, commission a firm of consultants to investigate the options. The study, which will be part paid for by the Government, will have the following terms of reference:

(i) To advise on the kinds of zoos which ZSL might appropriately develop for future visitors.

(ii) To identify the scope for introducing private capital into the zoo operation, in association with measures to increase revenue from visitors.

(iii) To draw up a prospectus which can be used by ZSL as a basis for attracting potential investors.

We shall consider the need for any further Government support for ZSL in the light of the outcome of the study and ZSL's own proposals.

Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981

Sir John Wells asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the Government's views on the reviews of the financial guidelines for management agreements under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: A study of the operation of the financial guidelines was carried out by consultants in 1985. We have carefully studied their report and concluded that the basis of the present system is sound and that the guidelines do not require major amendment. However, we do propose to accept a number of the consultants' recommendations for improvements to the guidelines to assist conservation authorities in securing value for money. A consultation paper is being issued today explaining our proposals in detail and seeking the views of interested parties. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

European Year of the Environment

Sir Hugh Rossi asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what his Department is contributing to the European Year of the Environment.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1987, c. 518]: Application forms will be available shortly for the funds available to grant aid projects within the EYE programme, and my Department will pay grant as early as possible on schemes recommended by the UK EYE committee. Pending parliamentary approval of the main Supply Estimate urgent expenditure estimated at £150,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmers (Income)

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average income of a cereal farmer in each of the last five years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The estimated average net farm income of specialist cereal farms in England and Scotland during each of the last five years for which data are available is as follows:

Year	Average net farm income of specialist cereal farms (£'000 per farm)
1981-82	9·7
1982-83	16·1
1983-84	16·5
1984-85	19·8
1985-86	2·3

Note: Figures given are the latest obtained from the Survey for the year in question.

Hill Sheep Farming

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the Commission of the European Communities since 1 January concerning the state of hill sheep farming in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The sheep sector generally is prospering under the regime we negotiated in 1980. Production has expanded: market prices are rising seasonally and producers are receiving the benefit of the variable premium. Sheep producers in the hills have benefited in recent months from the HLCA payments and from the special 75 per cent. advance payments of sheep annual premium. The European Commission has proposed that the annul premium should be limited to the first 1,000 sheep in any flock in the less-favoured areas, a proposal which we resisted successfully last year and which we have continued to resist this year.

Dairy Farms

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the Commission of the European Communities since 1 January concerning the state of smaller dairy farms in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: In my approach to discussion of milk issues in the Community since 1 January I have aimed to take account of the interests of all sectors of the United Kingdom dairy industry.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any proposals for a review of milk quota leasing arrangements for tenant farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The European Commission has expressed serious doubts about the legality of our quota leasing arrangements. I am trying hard to change its mind on this and I am in direct communication with the Commission on the problem.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what literage of milk quota was transferred in the financial year 1986-87 by (a) sale and (b) leasing in England and Wales.

Mr. Jopling: For the milk quota year 1986-87 the provisional total volume of quota sold or leased with land was 430 million litres. 199 million litres was temporarily reallocated through the short term leasing scheme operated by the MMB.

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to put the leasing system for milk quotas back into operation.

Mr. Jopling: The European Commission has expressed serious doubts about the legality of our quita leasing arrangements. I am trying hard to change its mind on this and am in direct communication with the Commission on the problem.

Poultry Industry

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement as to the present state and future prospects of the poultry rearing industry.

Mr. Jopling: Demand for poultrymeat has been expanding rapidly and prices have remained strong. Egg consumption has shown a long-term decline; egg prices were weak last year due to over-supply but have shown some strengthening recently. The future prospects of our poultry producers will depend essentially on their ability to match production to the needs of the market-place.

Wine Production

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make it his policy to resist any attempts to impose rectified concentrated grape must in the production of English wine until such time as enrichment is necessary and permitted;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that only English-produced sugar and not rectified concentrated grape must from Italy is permitted to be added to the fermentation process of English wine until such time as enrichment is necessary or permitted;

(3) if he will consider making grants available for the establishment of English vineyards for (a) the purchase of vines, (b) their support, (c) trellissing, (d) wiring and (e) windbreaks;

(4) what grants are currently available for the establishment of English vineyards and ancillary purposes in the light of his alternative land use policy;

(5) what is his policy regarding the manifestation of phylloxera in English vineyards;

(6) if he will abandon his policy of attempted eradication of phylloxera in English vineyards.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Quick Frozen Food

Mr. Craigen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the cost implications of the European Community's proposal on quick frozen food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We consider that this directive will impose unjustifiable costs on businesses, and retailers in particular, if adopted in its present form. For this reason the United Kingdom has repeatedly asked the EC Commission for a cost-benefit analysis of their proposals but none has been forthcoming to date. We will continue to seek modification to the proposals to make them more acceptable to the United Kingdom.

Agricultural Houses

Mr. Richard Page asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has completed consultations on charging for non-statutory advice to local planning authorities for appraisals relating to agricultural dwelling houses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Following consultations with interested parties my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have decided to proceed with our proposals to charge for this service with effect from 1 May 1987. A charge of £28 per hour plus VAT will apply to advice by MAFF and WOAD on applications for the building of agricultural dwelling houses and for the lifting of agricultural occupancy conditions on existing houses. However, it is envisaged that in future such advice will only be sought in the more complex cases. The majority of cases will be capable of determination by the local planning authorities with whom responsibility rests.

No charges are to be introduced for statutory advice on planning applications for agricultural development and the new charges are not expected to affect planning decisions or planning policy.

SCOTLAND

Rates

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to compensate the churches in Scotland for the loss, with the introduction of the community charge, of the exemption from rates of domestic premises occupied by ministers of religion or priests under section 4 of the Local Government (Financial Provisions etc.) (Scotland) Act 1962; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Rifkind: I have no such plans. As an essential element of our proposals to replace domestic rates, all adults aged 18 or over will be required to pay a personal community charge and this will, of course, apply to ministers of religion and their families.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the value of the exemption from rates for domestic premises occupied by ministers of religion or priests under section 4 of the Local Government (Financial Provisions etc.) (Scotland) Act 1962 to churches in Scotland together with the number of properties benefitting from this for the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will give any breakdown on the basis of the value of the exemption or number of premises exempted for the Church of Scotland, Roman Catholic Church and other denominations, respectively.

Mr. Rifkind: Information on the value of rates exemptions under section 4 of the 1962 Act is not held centrally.

Interpreters for the Deaf

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give for each of the last five years the total grant paid by central Government under section 9 and section 10, respectively, of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 or under any other heading to the Scottish Association of Interpreters for the Deaf;

(2) how many qualified interpreters for the deaf there are in Scotland; and how many of these hold the certificate in communication with the deaf as a result of attendance at the courses run at Moray House college of Education.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Visits)

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the rights of prisoners serving long-term sentences in Scottish prisons in terms of visits from family and friends.

Mr. Rifkind: The Prisons (Scotland) Standing Orders specify a minimum visit entitlement of two 30-miniute visits every calendar month for sentenced prisoners. Up to three visitors may be present at any one visit. Long-term prisoners may also be transferred to a more convenient prison temporarily in order to receive accumulated visits.

Details of these entitlements are set out in Standing Order M. The minimum entitlement to visits was increased to the current level in 1984. Copies of Standing Order M are available to inmates in all penal establishments.

The frequency and length of visits may exceed the minimum entitlement where facilities and demand for visits at a particular establishment permit.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the rules governing the issue of passes to families and friends of prisoners to allow visits to be made; and if, in particular, he will explain who is entitled to such a pass, what expenses are covered and how often one individual applicant can obtain such a pass.

Mr. Malcolm Rifkind: The family and friends of a convicted prisoner require visiting orders in order to be admitted to a penal establishment to make a visit. Each visiting order may admit up to three people.

Financial assistance for fares and, where necessary, the cost of overnight accommodation and meals, for visits to prisoners may be provided under the prisons assisted visits scheme. The scheme is administered in Scotland by local social security offices on behalf of the Scottish Home and Health Department. Spouses and other close relatives may be granted assistance for up to 13 visits each year, provided they are receiving supplementary benefit (or, otherwise are in receipt of low income and not in full-time work), and wish to visit a convicted prisoner who is serving a sentence of more than three months or an unconvicted prisoner who has been in custody four weeks or longer. (The same prisons assisted visits scheme operates in England and Wales.)

Licensing Boards

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether guidance is given by his Department to chairmen and members of licensing boards in Scotland to assist them in the performance of their duties.

Mr. Lang: While the Scottish Home and Health Department has offered guidance to licensing boards on the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976, under that Act it is for each board to determine how its provisions should be applied within its area.

School Books

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by each local education authority in Scotland on the purchase of text books in each year since 1978-79 in terms of (a) current prices and (b) 1978-79 prices.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland which authorities or bodies made representations to him prior to the award of his authorisation to Babcock-Thorn to dispose of radioactive waste at Rosyth dockyard.

Mr. Ancram: The following local authorities and public bodies responded to consultation:

Fife Regional Council
Fife Health Board
Dunfermline District Council
Forth River Purification Board
Lothian Regional Council

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland which bodies were invited to make representations about the award of the nuclear site licence to Babcock-Thorn.

Mr. Lang: Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate sought the views of the Ministry of Defence, the Industry Department for Scotland, the Scottish Development Department and Babcock-Thorn.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland on what occasions since 1974 nuclear site licences have been awarded without any consultative process.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate that during the period in question no licence has been awarded in respect of a new nuclear installation without consultation.

Housing Waiting Lists

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons were on the housing waiting list of each islands and district council in Scotland in May 1979, May 1983 and the most recent month for which figures are available.

Mr. Ancram: Reliable information on a consistent basis is not available centrally.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will tighten the requirements for competitive tendering for local authority road works in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has now considered the results of a survey of roads authorities in Scotland, and has decided to reduce from £50,000 to £25,000, with effect from 1 April 1988, the threshold above which all general roads works in Scotland must be put out to tender. Subject to the outcome of a further survey of the performance of Scottish roads authorities over the period 1986-87, regulations to make this change will be laid in due course. We are satisfied that this further measure of competition will help to secure better value for money expended by local authorities on roads work.

Suicides

Mr. McTaggert asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the number of suicides in Scotland under the age of 25 years for each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Deaths from suicide of persons aged under 25, Scotland, 1981-85

	Number
1982	59
1983	52
1984	55
1985	68

Population Statistics

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express by sex the percentage of the Scottish population in each socio-economic group.

Mr. Lang: The latest information available comes from the 1981 census of population and is as follows:

Education (Statistics)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the sex and socio-economic background of the school-leaving population with one or more highers; and how this compares with 10 years ago.

Mr. John MacKay: The available information is set out in the table.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express by sex the percentage of the post-16 years of age school population in each socio-economic group; and what were the equivalent figures for 10 years ago.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is not available.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on education in each of the past 10 years in cash and constant price terms.

Mr. John MacKay: Information is not available in the form requested.

Prisoners (Life Sentences)

Mr. Mates asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons sentenced to life imprisonment or detention during Her Majesty's pleasure are currently serving such sentences in Scotland; and how many were serving such sentences (a) 10, (b) 20 and (c) 30 years ago.

Mr. Lang: At 31 December 1986, 414 persons were serving sentences of life imprisonment or detention during Her Majesty's pleasure. The corresponding figure for 31 December 1977 was 341. No comparable figures are available for earlier dates.

Mr. Mates asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average length of sentence served by prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The time spent in custody by persons released on licence from life sentences is given in appendix D of the report of the Parole Board for Scotland 1985, of which a copy follows:

Health Statistics

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department has from the general household survey of the percentage of the population in Scotland reporting chronic and acute sickness by social class or socio-economic group.

Mrs. Currie: I have been asked to reply.

The table shows the percentages reporting long-standing illness, limiting long-standing illness and restricted activity by age and socio-economic group, for Scotland. The data are taken from the 1985 general household survey.

Members of the Armed Forces, persons in inadequately described occupations and all persons who have never worked are not shown as separate categories but are included in the figures for all persons.

Deportation Orders

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deportation orders were made in Scotland in each year since 1979 to the latest date.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies given today to his questions to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many kidney transplants have taken place over the past five years; how many failed; how many lasted six months, six months to two years, two years to five years, five years to 10 years and longer than 10 years; and if he will give similar figures for heart and lung transplants and for liver transplants.

Mrs. Currie: According to the latest information provided by the United Kingdom Transplant Service (UKTS), the number of cadaveric kidney transplants performed in the United Kingdom within the National Health Service during the five years up to 31 December 1986, was 6,449[1]. The UKTS has been notified of the failure of 1,669 of these grafts.

The remaining information for which my hon. Friend asked is not available in exactly the form requested. A detailed analysis has been possible only on 6,191 patients. Of these, a total of 4,528 grafts were known to have survived for at least six months, and 2,631 to have survived for at least two years. These figures cannot be used to calculate accurate survival rates because they exclude grafts performed less than six months and less than two years respectively before the end of the period. Reliable data are not available to calculate graft survival over a five or 10-year period.

During the same five-year period 518 heart transplants, 99 heart/lung transplants, three lung transplants and 307 liver transplants were carried out. Information on graft survival for these transplants is not available centrally.

[1] Following recent discussions with the UKTS about the source of data quoted in earlier answers and late notifications of transplants performed in recent years, some adjustments have been made to the annual total numbers. The years affected and the revised figures for the numbers of cadaveric transplants performed are:

	Number
1982	1,033
1985	1,336
1986	[1]1,493

[1] Notified to date, additional notifications may necessitate further revision.

These have been included in the five-year total given.

St. Paul's Eye Hospital, Liverpool

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the longest time a patient has been kept on the waiting list for treatment at St. Paul's eye hospital, Liverpool.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not available from the sample information held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Liverpool district health authority for the information requested.

National Insurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply dated 25 March, Official Report, columns 196-97, concerning class 2 and class 4 contributions, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (i) the numbers with earnings-profits above the upper level and (ii) his estimate of the distribution by range of income in each case for 1987-88 or for the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information on the actual number of class 4 contributors who earn more than the upper profits limit is not available but the estimates shown in the table, which have been derived from the Inland Revenue's income survey for the latest available year, give a good indication of the numbers involved. They will contain some overstatement, which is unlikely to be substantial, as they include those self-employed people not liable to pay class 4 contributions because of being over retirement age or of being concurrently employed earners and paying the maximum National Insurance in class 1 and class 2 contributions.

People with income from self-employment greater than the upper profits limit for class 4 National Insurance contributions (thousands) (United Kingdom) 1984-85

Ranges of self-employment income:	Number
Upper profits limit (£13,000) to £14,999	57
£15,000 to £19,999	98
£20,000 to £24,999	61
£25,000 or above	83
Total number with incomes above the upper profits limit	299

1. The Inland Revenue's income survey is a statistical sample survey of taxpayer's records.
2. Income is defined net of losses, stock relief and capital allowances.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply dated 25 March, Official Report, column 197-98, concerning the cost of a reduction of one percentage point in national insurance contributions, whether he will publish in the Official Report, a table accounting for (i) the difference between the employers' and employees' contributions in terms of higher earnings or reduced rates and (ii) the figure for the employees' contribution at reduced rates; and if he will add figures for the self-employed.

Mr. Major: The information is as follows:

	£ million
Estimated cost of one percentage point reduction in employers' contribution rates in 1987-88	1,770
Estimated cost of one percentage point reduction in employees' contribution rates in 1987-88	1,590
Difference	180
Accounted for by:
Cut in employers' contributions in respect of earnings above the Upper Earnings Limit	105
Cut in employers' contributions in respect of married women who pay the reduced rate: (rate for employees assumed to be static)	60
Cut in employers' contributions in respect of employed earners who do not pay primary contributions	15

A reduction of one percentage point in the reduced rate paid by married women and widows in 1987-88 would cost about £60 million for the full year in reduced employee contributions.

Class 2 contributions for the self-employed are not levied on a percentage basis but a reduction of one percentage point in the class 4 (self-employed) contribution rate in 1987-88 would cost about £60 million for the full year.

Clinical Waste

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance his Department issues to health authorities with regard to procedures to be adopted for the disposal of clinical waste; and whether there have been any amendments to these to guard against the spread of AIDS.

Mr. Newton: Health Notice HN(82)22, a copy of which is in the Library, commended to health authorities a Health and Safety Commission code of guidance "The Safe Disposal of Clinical Waste". The procedures in this code, if followed correctly, are sufficient to guard against the spread of AIDS, although the need for further guidance is kept under consideration.

NHS (Staff Shortages)

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the most recent total expenditures by each health authority in England and Wales on agency nursing to fill staff shortages.

Mr. Newton: The figures for English authorities were given in my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 17 December 1986, at columns 574-78. These provisional figures are now confirmed. Expenditure by Welsh authorities is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Irradiated Food

Mr. Aitken asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is yet in a position to report on the outcome of his consideration of the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods report on irradiated food.

Mrs. Currie: No. The Advisory Committee has only recently given Health and Agriculture Ministers its further advice in the light of comments made on its original report. Ministers are now considering the report.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of people in bed-and-breakfast accommodation paid for by his Department in (a) Ilford, North, (b) Ilford, South, (c) Barking and (d) Dagenham; and what is the cost in each case over the last 12 months.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not collected by individual local offices and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Allowances

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were in receipt of (a) mobility allowance, (b) war pensioners' mobility supplement, (c) attendance allowance at the lower rate, (d) attendance allowance at the higher rate, (e) invalid care allowance and (f) severe disablement allowance at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: The information requested is set out in the table:

Benefit	Latest date for which figures are available	Number of recipients
Mobility allowance	April 1987	474,000
War pensioners mobility supplement	December 1986	[1]13,000
Attendance allowance
Lower rate	March 1986	[1]348,000
Higher rate	March 1986	[1]237,000
Invalid care allowance	March 1987	56,000
Severe disablement allowance	April 1986	[2]261,000

[2] Provisional estimate.

Brighton General Hospital

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what new facilities have been added to the Brighton general hospital in each of the last eight years; and what has been the cost in both capital and revenue terms;

(2) what is the estimated site value of Brighton general hospital; and what has been the annual total revenue and capital expenditure on the hospital for each of the last 10 years;

(3) how many students are trained in both graduate and post graduate studies in the Brighton general hospital;

(4) how many (a) nursing staff, (b) medical staff, (c) auxilliary care staff, (d) catering staff, (e) cleaners and support staff and (f) technical support staff have been employed in the Brighton general hospital for each of the last three years;

(5) what plans exist for repair and maintenance work and for development of the Brighton general hospital.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. Information at this level of detail is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Brighton health authority for the information requested.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when Brighton general hospital was first opened; how many beds are currently open in the hospital; and what is the breakdown of bed usage by medical care provided.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member full and current information in the form requested. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Brighton health authority for the information he seeks.

Financial Management Initiative

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement on the effect on his Department of the financial management initiative.

Mr. Fowler: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Benefits (Appeals)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, what is (a) the average and (b) the longest time for (i) an appeal against an adjudication officer's decision to be heard by a social security appeal tribunal and (ii) the results of such an appeal to be made known to the appellant, in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: The most recent figures available are for the quarter ended 30 September 1986 when the average time taken for an appeal to be heard in Scotland was 14·6 weeks. Of the appeals heard in the same quarter, the longest time taken for one to be heard was 151·1 weeks. The delay was a result of requests by the claimant for further time to obtain evidence in support of the appeal. Information on the longest time taken for an appeal to be heard where the actual hearing occurred in a quarter prior to quarter ended 30 September 1986 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Statistics on the length of time taken to advise an appellant of the results of an appeal to a social security appeal tribunal are not available and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Council for Advancement of Communication for Deaf People

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the support given by his Department to the Council for Advancement of Communication for Deaf People in each of the last three years and specify what part of each sum has been given specifically for training and administrative expenses.

Mr. Major: In each of the last three years we have granted the council a total of £40,000 as a contribution towards central administration expenses.

Prison Visits (Travel Passes)

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of travel passes given to applicants living in Scotland to allow visits to relatives in prison in Scotland and England, respectively, for the latest convenient period for which figures are available and the total cost to his Department of such passes in the same period.

Mr. Lyell: During the period 1 March 1987 to 31 March 1987 the Department issued 349 travel warrants to applicants living in Scotland; 301 were for visits to Scottish prisons and 48 to English prisons. The total value of the warrants was £6,720·15.

Maternity Payments

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Wolverhampton, North-East constituency claimed maternity grant in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested.

The Wolverhampton, North-East constituency is covered by the Department's local offices at Wolverhampton, North and Wolverhampton, South although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of claims for maternity grant received at these two offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Wolverhampton, North	2,066
Wolverhampton, South	2,072

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: The numbers of claims for maternity grant received during the 1986 calendar year at the Department's local offices at Kirkwall and Lerwick, which cover the constituency, were 216 and 356 respectively.

Unemployed People (Dependants)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the numbers dependent on unemployed persons in receipt of unemployment benefit or supplementary benefit; and if he will identify how many are (a) spouses, (b) children under 16 years and (c) children over 16 years.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available information is given in the table:

	Number of Dependants (000s)
	Adult	Under 19 years
Claimant in receipt of Unemployment benefit only	[1]75·7	n.a.
Unemployment benefit and Supplementary benefit	[2]135	[3]209
Supplementary benefit only	[2]581	[3]916

[1] As at November 1986. Figure includes persons having care of claimant's child as well as spouse.
[2] Estimate as at February 1986. Figures are for partners.
[3] Estimate as at February 1986. No age breakdown of the numbers of children available.

West Midlands RHA (Food Contracts)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which firms hold contracts to supply food to the West Midlands regional health authority.

Mrs. Currie: West Midlands regional health authority does not have any formal contracts for food items, but has arranged many purchasing agreements covering a comprehensive range of foodstuffs and related items. Individual hospital locations call off their own specific needs as required from companies with whom such arrangements have been made.

NHS (Charges)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the revenue from National Health Service charges in each year until 1990; and adopting Government assumptions about inflation, what prescription charges will be in each year until 1990.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is:

£ million

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Estimated NHS charge revenue (England)	487	520	550

It would be inappropriate to engage in speculative calculations about the level of prescription charges in future years, since there is no automatic presumption that they will be increased in line with general inflation, and no decisions about their future levels have been taken.

Overseas Health Services

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list visits, showing at what ministerial or official level, which have taken place to (a) France, (b) New Zealand, (c) the United States of America and (d) Australia since 1983 to examine aspects of their health services;

(2) what consideration has been given to, and what studies have taken place into, aspects of health service management or practice in (i) France, (ii) New Zealand, (iii) the United States of America and (iv) Australia since June 1983.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have the information that is available as soon as possible.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate, for each region, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom as a whole of (a) the numbers claiming supplementary benefit, (b) the numbers dependent on claims for suppplementary benefit, (c) the numbers claiming housing benefit, and (d) the numbers dependent on claims for housing benefit.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will uprate the proposed new basic benefit levels and premium levels contained in the technical appendix of his "Social Security Reform" White Paper (a) to April 1987 levels and prices and (b) taking into account the Treasury assumptions for price rises in 1987-88, at April 1988 levels and prices; and if he will estimate the difference between premium payments for each of the categories of beneficiary.

Mr. Major: The rates given in the technical annex to the White Paper were illustrative only, and a simple scaling of the figures in line with an assumed movement in prices would be misleading, the actual rates to be used in April 1988 will be decided nearer the time in the light of all the information then available.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons previously registering as unemployed and claiming unemployment or supplementary benefit have, in the last 12 months been transferred to sickness benefit claims.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to change the rules governing the payment of suppplementary benefit to women who have received compensation for having been raped.

Mr. Major: Payments made by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to victims of rape are treated for supplementary benefit purposes in the same way as any other payment of compensation for personal or criminal injury. They can be disregarded for up to two years, or even longer where it is considered reasonable to do so, if the money is put into a trust fund. They are then subject to the normal capital rules: benefit is not payable if a person has more than £3,000 capital.

We have no immediate plans to change this, but we are proposing changes in the income support scheme, which replaces supplementary benefit from April 1988, which would be beneficial to anyone receiving compensation for criminal injury. The two-year disregard of money put into a trust fund will be allowed automatically. In addition, the capital limit will be doubled from £3,000 to £6,000, but an income will be assumed for each band of £250 between £3,000 and £6,000. There must, however, be a limit to the value of capital that can be disregarded in an income-related benefit scheme, and we consider that these proposals strike a reasonable balance between the aims of a scheme that provides compensation from public funds and an income replacement scheme.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide estimates of the numbers of (a) family income supplement recipients and (b) standard housing benefit recipients by earnings distribution using the following ranges of gross weekly earnings: (i) below £80, (ii) £80 to £90, (iii) £90 to £100, (iv) £100 to £110, (v) £110 to £120 and (vi) above £120; and if he will indicate the average amount of benefit paid to those falling within each of these ranges.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 656]: The following table gives the information for family income supplement recipients, except that it is not possible to give a breakdown of weekly earnings above £90.

Analysis of FIS families by gross earnings[1] of head—April 1986—Great Britain

Gross earnings of head	Number of families in receipt of FIS	Average payment of FIS
Below £80	115,000	18·20
£80 to £89·99	34,000	8·70
£90 and above	51,000	6·10
All	200,000	13·50

[1] Earnings include profits from self-employment and relate to the date of FIS claim.

I regret that it is not possible to provide reliable figures for housing benefit recipients in work.

Health Expenditure (London)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) 2 April, Official Report, column 1221, he will tabulate in the Official Report, for each of the London region health authorities and health districts, respectively, the expenditure of each in real terms in 1979 and in 1986 showing the percentage increase or decrease stating or using the same statistical criteria.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Pensions and Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will express (a) the basic pension and

(b) the single person's supplementary benefit level if unemployed as a percentage of average earnings in (i) 1957, (ii) 1979 and (iii) 1987.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the value at 1987 prices and as a percentage of the total of (a) Government contributions and (b) employers' contributions to the national insurance fund in 1979 and 1986; and what is his estimate of these contributions for each year until 1990, using Treasury assumptions.

Mr. Major: Employers' contributions and the Treasury supplement to the national insurance fund in 1979-80, 1986-87 and 1987-88 (at 1987-88 prices), are as follows:

Great Britain

	1979-80		1986-87		1987-88
	Amount	Percentage share of Fund income	Amount	Percentage share of Fund income	Amount	Percentage share of Fund income
Employers Contributions	10,750	46·5	11,550	44·5	11,800	45
Treasury Supplement	4,050	17·5	2,500	9·5	2,030	7·5

Contribution rates and the size of the Treasury supplement are determined annually in the light of circumstances at the time. The Government do not make forward estimates of the individual elements of income to the national insurance fund.

Children's Allowances

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to maintain the real value of all children's allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We have no plans to alter the existing flexible arrangements for the uprating of children's allowances. The main children's allowances were increased in line with the percentage increase in the appropriate index from 6 April, demonstrating the Government's commitment to continuing support for families with children.

AIDS

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will authorise compensation for haemophiliacs who have contracted AIDS from infected factor VIII; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Fallon) and the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 15 January, at column 302.

Leigham Clinic

Mr. William Shelton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services who were the representatives of the proprietors of the Leigham Clinic in Leigham Court road, Streatham who met officials of his Department on 2 August 1985, in connection with alleged late abortions.

Mr. Newton: I suggest that my hon. Friend approach the proprietors direct.

Mr. William Shelton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the dates when his officials have inspected the Leigham Clinic in Leigham Court road, Streatham, during the last five years in connection with the Abortion Act.

Mr. Newton: During the last five years officials have inspected the Leigham Clinic in connection with the Abortion Act on the following dates:

11 November 1982
17 May 1983
6 October 1983
15 February 1984
1 November 1984
6 August 1985
14 October 1985

Nurses and Midwives (Pay)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has received in support of the full recommended pay award to nurses and midwives to be proposed by the review body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Department has received some 90 letters on this point.

Maternity Units

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate the number of general practitioner maternity units which have closed since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: The numbers of National Health Service hospital general practitioner maternity units in 1979 and 1985 were 256 and 214 respectively.

Attendance Allowance Board

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to begin publishing the guidance and instructions of the Attendance Allowance Board.

Mr. Major: The Attendance Allowance Board intends to publish in the summer a full revision of the handbook for its delegated medical practitioners.

Hip Operations

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the percentage of patients in the North West Thames region who in 1980 waited for more than a year for a hip operation; and what was the comparable percentage of patients waiting for this period of time in 1985.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend the information he seeks. It is not available from the sample information held centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairman of the North West Thames regional health authority for the information requested.

Nurses

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of qualified state enrolled nurses and of qualified state registered nurses employed by the National Health Service, for each year since 1974.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1987, c. 236]: The table shows all enrolled nurses and registered nurses and midwives working in National Health Service hospitals and in primary health care in England, from September 1974 to September 1985 inclusive (the latest date for which such detail is available).

Kidney Dialysis

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients are currently undergoing kidney dialysis treatment on Merseyside; how many patients are on the waiting list; and what is the longest period of time which has elapsed since any of the outstanding cases were referred for dialysis treatment.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 25 March 1987, c. 210]: Information in the form requested is not available centrally. The latest data available to the Department are supplied by the European Dialysis and Transplant Association. These show that at the end of December 1985 there were 229 patients on haemodialysis in the Mersey region. Currently, all demand for dialysis treatment in the region is being met and the regional health authority expects to keep pace with that demand in the future.

Abortions

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the numbers of legal abortions performed in England and Wales on women resident in each health and social services board area in Northern Ireland in 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 108]: The table shows the information which is available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Board-and-Lodging Changes

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will be changing the arrangements for paying benefit to people in lodgings following the issue of the consultative document "Help with Board and Lodging Charges for People on Low Incomes"; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The consultative document proposed that from April 1988 unemployed people in lodgings should be eligible for housing benefit to meet their accommodation costs and income support for their other needs. This change would replace existing provision whereby supplementary benefit meets both housing and living costs.

Over 170 responses were received. There was widespread acceptance of the principle that any differences between benefits payable to boarders not in work and other claimants should be based on actual differences in their circumstances. Most who commented recognised that change on the lines proposed was logical but a number of practical concerns were raised. The local authority associations, in particular, argued strongly that the change should not be made in April 1988 when local authorities will be fully occupied in starting to administer the new housing benefit scheme.

The Government accept the force of this argument, and have decided to implement the change from April 1989, one year later than originally proposed. In the run-up to the new system, detailed arrangements for the transition will be worked out with local authorities, especially those in areas with high concentrations of boarder claimants. Discussions will also continue with local authority and other interests on the position of boarders in supported lodging schemes, on whose behalf it has been argued that similar considerations arise to those affecting hostels. As indicated in the consultative document, the Government intend to defer a final decision on arrangements for hostels in order to set them in the context of the current work on related aspects of community care. The position of people in supported lodgings will also be considered in this context.

There is clear research evidence that the lifestyle and circumstances of boarders are close to those of the far larger number living in other multiply occupied dwellings. Paying higher rates of income support to some or all boarders, as some have suggested, would simply perpetuate the distortions our proposals are designed to rectify. The Government have therefore decided that, from April 1989, the generality of people not in work in ordinary board and lodgings should qualify for income support and housing benefit in the same way as everyone else. For ease of administration and certainty for claimants, deductions from housing benefit in respect of meals provided will be fixed at standard rates. This is the course preferred by local authorities. On the basis of current information about food costs, the deduction for breakfasts only would be of the order of £1, and for full board £11·50.

During the interim period from April 1988, boarders will continue to receive benefit on broadly the same lines as now with some adjustments to align these provisions with the new structure of income support. Time limits will continue to apply to benefit for younger boarders until the new system is introduced.

The Government remain committed to provision for boarders which will enable real needs to be met while keeping expenditure under control and curbing abuse. The system to be introduced from April 1989 will not only achieve those ends, but remove a source of distortion in the housing market and secure equity between boarders in and out of work, and income support claimants in all types of tenure.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Kampuchea

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral development aid his Department has provided to Kampuchea since 1979.

Mr. Chris Patten: British bilateral aid to Cambodia for 1979-85 was as follows:

Figures for multilateral aid are available in an OECD Statistical publication "Geographical Distribution of Financial Flows for Developing Countries" a copy of which is available in the Library.

Since 1979 Britain has provided, largely through international organisations, over £13 million to the international relief effort for refugee camps on the Thai-Cambodian border.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Mates asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons sentenced to life imprisonment or detention during Her Majesty's pleasure are currently serving such sentences in England and Wales; and how many were serving such sentences (a) 10, (b) 20 and (c) 30 years ago.

[3] Including prisoners who had been recalled after having been released on licence.

Mr. Mates asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of sentence served by prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the distribution of time served under sentence by life sentence prisoners received since 1965 is published in Table 4(e) of "Prison Statistics England and Wales 1985", Cmnd. 9903.

AIDS

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new guidelines or instructions have been issued to immigration officials concerning entry clearance of persons known or suspected to be suffering from AIDS or who are HIV positive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have nothing to add to my reply to the hon. Member's question on 2 March at column 468.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 468, what information he has as to the intended purpose of the visit by the airline steward refused entry at Gatwick airport.

Mr. Waddington: In the case reported in the press the passenger sought entry as a tourist.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many out of the total number of persons treated as illegal entrants in 1986 who were granted temporary entrance subsequently absconded.

Mr. Waddington: Out of 613 illegal entrants who were given temporary admission in 1986, a total of 51 absconded.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total number of passengers granted temporary admission in 1986; and how many of these subsequently absconded;

(2) what was the total number of passengers detained overnight under Immigration Act powers during 1986, by nationality;

(3) how many people were detained overnight during 1986 in (a) Harmondsworth detention centre, (b) Queen's Building, Heathrow and (c) Beehive, Gatwick.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will provide, for the latest convenient date, a table indicating the total number or persons detained under Immigration Act powers in prison department establishments, by category and individual prison establishment;

(2) if he will provide, for the latest convenient date, a table indicating the period of time spent in prison department establishments by persons detained under Immigration Act powers showing the numbers detained for not more than one, two, three, four, five, six and more than six months, respectively.

Remands

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the introduction of time limits for the length of time a prisoner may be remanded in custody referred to in paragraph 3 of the "Government Reply to the Third Report from the Social Services Committee, Session 1985-86", Cm. 115.

Mr. Mellor: As a first step, statutory time limits on periods in custody in criminal proceedings were introduced on 1 April, in three police areas: Avon and Somerset, Kent and the west midlands.

Prisons (Medical Services)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members of the working group set up by the president of the Royal College of Physicians to advise the director of prison medical services on qualifications and training for prison medical officers.

Mr. Mellor: The following comprise the President of the Royal College of Physicians' working group.

Sir Raymond Hoffenberg, KBE, MD, PRCP, (Chairman)
Dr. H. Baderman, FRCP (Honorary Secretary)
H-J. B. Galbraith Esq. MD, FRCP
M. R. Baker Esq. MD, MFCM
T. H. Bewley Esq. MD, PRCPsych
Dr. J. Higgins, FRCPsych, DPM
Dr. J. L. Kilgour, CB, FFCM, MRCGP
R. Lancaster Esq. SRN (Royal College of Nursing)
Dr. E. E. J. Martin, MA, FRCGP
Dr. K. H. Nickol, FRCP, FFOM, DIH
Dr. Richard Smith, MB MHB
Mrs. E. Whitaker, OBE, JP, (Board of Visitors, Wakefield Prison)

Observers
Dr. Pamela G. W. Mason, FRCPsych, DPM, (DHSS)
K. R. North Esq. (Home Office)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made since

July 1985 in establishing a unified nursing service for prison establishments, indicating the numbers of nursing staff currently holding formal nursing qualifications and the numbers training exclusively in service.

Mr. Mellor: An essential first stage in the development of a unified service is the recruitment of men and women with nursing qualifications to train as prison hospital officers (uniformed staff combining custodial management and nursing skills). Since July 1985 there has been a 60 per cent. increase in the number of hospital officers who hold a nursing qualification. Currently just under 300 members of the prison nursing service hold a qualification, including some 160 hospital officers. On 9 April, four qualified nurses were receiving or had been accepted for prison officer training with a view to becoming hospital officers and over 100 applications were under consideration.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the proposals for changes in prison service medical documentation which have been endorsed by Ministers, indicating what changes have so far been implemented.

Mr. Mellor: The proposals centre on a system of discrete medical files for individual prisoners which transfer with them from one establishment to another under sealed cover for the attention of the medical officer. In addition to the modification of various medical documents, other proposed changes include a central storage facility for the medical files of discharged inmates. Medical officers will be further encouraged to seek previous medical histories on any new inmate, irrespective of category, whenever there is reason to think that to be clinically indicated. The Department will clarify with DHSS opportunities for conveying to general practitioners medical information arising during the currency of imprisonment.

Managing medical officers have been asked to introduce the central proposal; most of them have done so and the remainder are working to that end.

Metropolitan Police (Equal Opportunities Unit)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many officers of the Metropolitan police force's equal opportunities unit, and what ranks, deal with (a) sexual and (b) racial discrimination.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the designated Equal Opportunities Officer is a Deputy Assistant Commissioner, who chairs the force working parties on sexual and racial discrimination. The equal opportunities unit reports to a commander, and has one inspector and one sergeant dealing full time with sexual discrimination and one inspector dealing full time with racial discrimination.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average daily prison population of those detained under Immigration Act powers in 1986.

Mr. Mellor: In 1986 the average population of persons detained under the Immigration Act 1971 in Prison Department establishments in England and Wales was 132.

Special Constables

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police authorities authorise the wearing of reinforced helmets by special constables; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The equipment issued to special constables is a matter for each chief officer of police, and the information requested is not held centrally.

Bilingual Forms

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that all coroners in Wales issue coroners' certificates in a bilingual format; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is not sufficient demand to justify this. Coroners in Wales will arrange to issue certificates in bilingual format in any particular case, if requested to do so.

Mr. Wigley: asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that the provisions of the Registration of Births, Still Births and Deaths (Welsh Language) Regulations 1969 and the Coroners (Welsh Forms) Rules 1970 are fully observed in Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is no evidence of non-compliance with either of these permissive regulations.

Coroners (Wales)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to how many of Her Majesty's coroners currently holding office in Wales, are Welsh-speaking; and how many are not Welsh speaking.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not readily available and I will reply as soon as possible.

West German State Lottery

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate a publicity campaign to advice United Kingdom residents that it is contrary to the law to participate in the West German state lottery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. While the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976 prohibits a number of activities in connection with lotteries promoted overseas, including advertising, it is not unlawful to take part in any such lottery. The Gaming Board for Great Britain draws attention to the law where there is evidence that it may have been broken.

Maguire Case

Mr. Heffer asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Surrey as to the precise date on which police inquiries into the matters raised in paragraph 39 of his Department's memorandum on the Maguire case were completed.

Mr. Mellor: The inquiries on which the sixth sentence of paragraph 39 is based were made by the Metropolitan police, who first arrested the Maguire family. At the time when the memorandum was drawn up, the Metropolitan police had reported that they had no written record of Vincent Maguire showing them a stick of chalk or any similar object. Subsequently, on 10 February, we were informed that none of the Metropolitan police officers involved in the case could verify his account of the matter (on which evidence had been offered at the trial).

In the light of comments since made on paragraph 39 of the memorandum, we shall be consulting the chief constable of Surrey.

Mr. Denis Wilkinson

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the representations made to him by the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill, about the evidence provided by Mr. Denis Wilkinson which secured the conviction of a number of defendants.

Mr. Mellor: We have arranged for inquiries to be made into the allegations about the evidence provided by Mr. Wilkinson. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as I can.

Constituency Boundaries

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received any further recommendations from the Boundary Commission regarding minor review proposals for parliamentary constituency boundaries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have not received any further reports from the parliamentary boundary commissions since the English commission submitted a report on 40 constituencies on 9 February 1987. In that report the commission said that it would submit a separate report on two constituencies which had been the subject of a local inquiry in February 1987. I understand that this report will be submitted very shortly. The English commission informed us on 10 December 1986 of an interim review of 55 constituencies, including Burnley. I understand that a report on 53 of these 55 constituencies will be submitted in a few weeks. The Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales informed us of an interim review of 21 Welsh constituencies on 17 February 1986 and I understand that a report on this review is also expected within the next few weeks.

Police (Helicopters)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many times during the past 12 months a Metropolitan police helicopter has been used in Newham; what incidents were involved; and what arrests resulted from information received from the helicopter crew.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1987, c. 218]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the Metropolitan police air support unit answered 165 calls in the London borough of Newham in 1986. These calls concerned various matters, including robberies, burglaries, traffic and searches for missing persons. Forty two arrests resulted from the incidents in which the helicopters were used.

Salvador Mendoza and Reynaldo Blanco

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why Salvador Mendoza and Reynaldo Blanco, members of the El Salvador Human Rights Commission, were stopped and searched by immigration officals when they arrived from Ostend on 29 March.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 12]: Mr. Reynaldo Blanco Rojas and another Salvadorean national arrived together at Dover from Ostend on 29 March at 2.30 pm. The immigration officer examined them for the purpose of determining whether they qualified for leave to enter in accordance with the immigration rules. They at first claimed to be students and sought entry as tourists for a period of three days. The immigration officer was not at that stage satisfied that they were genuine visitors and required them to submit to further examination. At 4 pm, after further questioning and examination of their luggage and personal effects, the immigration officer decided that they could properly be admitted as visitors and granted them leave to enter the United Kingdom for a period of one month.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Sixth Form

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what, on the basis of present local authority plans for tertiary education, are the Department's estimates of the effect on the number of places taken up in traditional sixth forms;

(2) what effect the introduction of tertiary colleges has had on the number of places taken up in conventional sixth form provision over the last seven years.

Mr. Dunn: Information is not available in the form requested.

Brent (HMI Report)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to publish the report of Her Majesty's inspectors on education in Brent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has not yet received the report from Her Majesty's inspectors. He hopes to do so by Easter. He will then consider in the normal way whether to publish it.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the progress of the establishment of city technology colleges and their funding.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Dixons Group plc announced on 8 April that it would provide sponsorship of £1 million for the establishment of a second city technology college to be located in south Yorkshire. This is a further indication of the imaginative and encouraging response my right hon. Friend's proposals have received. Discussions with other prospective sponsors are well advanced and my right hon. Friend hopes soon to announce details of further city technology colleges.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table grouping local education authorities into those controlled on 1 January 1986 by the Conservative party, those controlled by the Labour party, those controlled by the alliance parties and those with no overall control, showing for each authority, the average for each group and the overall average (a) the average primary school class size for January 1985 and January 1986, (b) the average secondary school class size for pupils under 14 in January 1985 and January 1986 and (c) the average secondary school class size for pupils over 14 in January 1985 and January 1986.

Mr. Dunn: I shall reply as soon as possible.

St. Anne's Secondary School, Heaton Chapel

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions there have been between Stockport metropolitan borough, the Salford diocese and himself about the rebuilding of the fire-damaged section of St. Anne's secondary school, Heaton Chapel; and when he expects the work to be completed.

Mr. Dunn: Discussions are currently in progress between the Salford diocese and Stockport metropolitan borough council about the rebuilding of the school's science block, for completion by September 1988.

School Leavers (Easter)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many persons left school on the Easter leaving date in 1983, and in 1986; and what is his best estimate of the numbers who will leave school at Easter 1987.

Mr. Dunn: Information for the academic year 1985-86 is not yet available. There were 45,400 pupils reported as leaving English schools in the Spring term of 1985. The corresponding figure for 1983 was 47,100. No estimate is available for 1987.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many persons leaving school at Easter in 1986 registered to take O-level or other examinations during 1986.

Mr. Dunn: Information for the academic year 1985-86 is not yet available. There were 15,300 pupils reported as leaving English schools in the Spring term of 1985 who attempted GCE O-level or CSE examinations in the summer of that year.

Autistic Children

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the annual amount paid by his Department on research into autistic problems in education for each year over the past eight years indicating the local education authorities to which it was paid, the research projects involved and the number of teachers specially trained as teachers for autistic children.

Mr. Dunn: No research into the educational aspects of autism has been funded over the past eight years. There are no specific qualifications for teaching autistic children.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report those local education authorities which have (a) special schools, (b) centres or (c) special arrangements for the teaching of autistic children, indicating which provide boarding accommodation.

Mr. Dunn: The information is not available. Since 1983 special schools have not been classified in accordance with the categories of the handicap of the pupils for which they cater. No central record is maintained of centres or other arrangements for teaching children with special educational needs.

WALES

Children (Special Educational Needs)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representatives he has received concerning the training and further professional development of teachers of children with special educational needs; whether he intends making changes to established practices in this sphere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have received one letter from a group of lecturers in Wales who are concerned about this matter, and five letters from hon. Members. The Government have accepted the recommendation of the Advisory Committee for the Supply and Education of Teachers that specialist qualifications to teach deaf children, as well as children with other disabilities, should be acquired after qualification as a teacher in the normal way and after a period of experience of teaching in an ordinary school. Under the new local education authority training grants scheme, which came into operation on 1 April 1987, over £200,000 has been allocated to authorities in Wales for the training of existing teachers to meet the special educational needs of pupils with learning difficulties. The Welsh Office will be monitoring what use the local education authorities make of these funds.

Ysbyty Gwynedd (Opening Ceremony)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost to the Welsh Office arising from the official opening ceremony of Ysbyty Gwynedd undertaken by the Prime Minister in March.

Mr. Mark Robinson: One official responsible for health matters represented the Welsh Office at a cost of less than £200 in travel and subsistence. In addition, two Welsh Office press officers accompanied the Prime Minister throughout her official tour of north Wales. It would not be meaningful to attempt to allocate a cost to their time spent at Ysbyty Gwynedd.

PRIME MINISTER

West German State Lottery

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the practice of the Government of West Germany of issuing letters in the English language to United Kingdom residents inviting them to participate in illegal lotteries designed solely to provide revenue for the West German Government; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. We are pursuing this matter with the appropriate authorities within the relevant states of the Federal Republic of Germany.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Newspapers (Takeovers and Mergers)

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints have been received by the Director of Fair Trading in relation to newspaper takeovers and mergers in each of the years 1980 to 1986;

(2) how many complaints have been received by his Department in each of the years 1980 to 1986 in relation to undertakings given to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission regarding newspaper takeovers and mergers.

Mr. Pattie: The Director General of Fair Trading has no statutory functions in relation to newspaper takeovers and mergers. Any assurances which may be given to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission regarding newspaper takeovers and mergers have no statutory underpinning. It is, however, open to the Commission to recommend that conditions should be attached to the Secretary of State's consent to a newspaper transfer; and it is in turn open to the Secretary of State to attach to his consent such conditions as he sees fit.

My Department does not keep records of the number of complaints which are received concerning undertakings to the Commission or the observance of conditions attached to the Secretary of State's consent. But recently my Department has received one complaint concerning an undertaking to the Commission which was reflected neither in a condition recommended by the Commission nor in a condition attached to the Secretary of State's consent and since 1985 six complaints related to conditions attached to a consent given by the Secretary of State.

Business Improvement Scheme (West Penwith)

Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress of the business improvement scheme for West Penwith.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The business improvement services scheme in the Penzance and St. Ives travel-to-work area started operating in July 1986. Since then 89 offers of assistance have been made to applicants, worth £394,412.

I am pleased to see that the scheme has been well received locally.

South Africa

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the European Economic Community code of conduct on South Africa applies to British companies with interests in South Africa which employ more than 20 black Africans; and what is his position if these employees are located at different enterprises, none of which individually employs as many as 20 black Africans.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department looks for the submission of a full report in all cases where a British company holds 50 per cent. or more of the equity of a South African company. The Government recognise that provision of detailed reports would be inappropriate where the South African company's total employment includes fewer than 20 black Africans.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the minimum wage recommended in the European Economic Community code of conduct on South Africa is calculated for a family of five; and what regard is paid to (a) sex, (b) marital status or (c) age.

Mr. Alan Clark: The minimum wage recommendations in the EC code of conduct refer companies to the supplemented living level figures produced by the University of South Africa. UNISA's figures are based on survey data and calculated for families of varying sizes, including a family of five, which is the recommended minimum wage level in the EC code, regardless of sex, marital status or age.

Housing (London)

Mr. Raymond asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what evidence he based the claim, in the Government's booklet in support of locating the European Community Trade Marks Office in London, that inexpensive housing is available in plenty both in and out of London.

Mr. Pattie: The booklet's purpose is to demonstrate the advantages of London as the location of the proposed Community trade marks office relative to other European cities contending for this Office. Houses in London are not expensive when compared with houses of a similar type and in similar areas in other contending cities.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report on the Internal Market Council held on 7 April.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Council continued discussion on proposals for Directives on the controls and formalities applicable to EC nationals at intra-Community borders, on a right of residence for EC nationals in other member states, and on a general system for the recognition of higher education diplomas for the purposes of professional qualifications.

Rover Group

Mr. Sumberg asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on progress on the disposal of Rover Group truck and bus activities.

Mr. Giles Shaw: On 19 February my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry informed the House that the Government had accepted the Rover Group's recommendation that Leyland Trucks, Freight Rover, and the related parts operations and overseas subsidiaries of the Rover Group should combine with DAF Trucks in a new joint venture company. The agreement between Rover Group and DAF to transfer these businesses to the new merged company, Leyland DAF Ltd, was completed on 6 April.

On 13 January I informed the House that the sale of Leyland Bus to a management-led consortium had been completed. The Government have now accepted the Rover Group's proposal to dispose of Leyland DAB, the Group's wholly-owned bus manufacturing subsidiary in Denmark, to its management, subject to final negotiations and procedures at the annual general meeting of Leyland DAB on 14 April.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held between Britain and Vietnam over the past 12 months concerning the future of Vietnamese refugees.

Mr. Renton: We have held no formal discussions with the Vietnamese Government on this subject.

Hong Kong

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received about the Hong Kong law about the publication of false news; and what consultations have been held with the Hong Kong Government on the subject.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 3 April at column 643. While this is primarily a matter for the Hong Kong Government, they have kept us fully informed of developments.

Bahrein

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British assistance to Bahrein.

Mr. Renton: No money has been allocated to Bahrein from the British aid programme. There are no British loan service personnel in Bahrain at present, though some have in the past undertaken training there.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the supply by British companies of security specialists or former British military personnel to the Government of Bahrein.

Mr. Renton: We are aware that a number of British citizens have been directly recruited by the Government of Bahrain. Their employment is a private commercial arrangement between them and the government of an independent country.

Gaza Strip

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the continuing role of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency in the Gaza strip and the status of refugees there.

Mr. Renton: We fully support United Nations Relief and Works Agency's vital humanitarian work on behalf of Palestinian refugees in the Gaza strip.

British Summer Time

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he proposes to seek the consent of the European Economic Community to extend British summer time.

Mr. Renton: No.

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received in support of the extension of British summer time.

Mr. Renton: We have received no such representations. The primary responsibility for British summer time rests with my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

West German State Lottery

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the result of the representations which his Department made to the West German authorities regarding the literature sent by the West German state lottery to the hon. Member for Southend, East and to other British citizens inviting them to participate in an illegal lottery designed to provide funds for the West German Government, details of which were supplied to the Home Secretary and the Minister for Consumer Affairs in February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Following representations made by the British Consulate General in Hamburg, the authorities who run the North West German lottery on behalf of the six states in the Federal Republic of Germany have instructed all agencies involved in promoting the lottery to take note of the relevant parts of the Lotteries and Amusements Act of 1976.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will invite the European Economic Community Commission to determine whether member states are empowered to prevent the distribution of lottery tickets being issued by member states in the same way as they can take action against such materials being issued by non-European Economic Community Governments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. The terms of the Lotteries and Amusements Act of 1976 apply equally to lotteries promoted in European Community member states and in other countries.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will invite the Government of West Germany to return to the United Kingdom all payments made by United Kingdom residents in response to invitations sent by the West German state lottery to United Kingdom citizens asking for contributions to their official lottery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. The lottery is the responsibility of states' governments rather than the Federal Government.

Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there have been any changes in the amount, value and disposition of gold held under the control of the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold in the past three years.

Mr. Renton: The amount and disposition of the gold have remained unchanged. Its value has changed only in accordance with changes in world prices.

Mr. Jeff Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will list the proposed recipients of the gold held by the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold after settlement of outstanding claims and state what steps he has taken to inform the proposed recipients of the procedure being used for its distribution.

Mr. Renton: The allocated amounts of gold have all been delivered, except that for Albania. Once that has been delivered, the remaining gold will be distributed among the claimant countries (Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland, Yugoslavia) in proportion to their allocations. This final distribution will be conducted in accordance with procedures to be established by the tripartite commission.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if there have been any changes in the British commissioner to the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold in the past three years.

Mr. Renton: No. The current British commissioner is Mr. M. B. Collins OBE, commercial counsellor at the British embassy in Brussels.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any meetings of the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold have taken place since his reply of 3 November 1986, Official Report, column 309.

Mr. Renton: No.

Diplomatic Staff

Mr. Dicks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff accredited with diplomatic status work in the offices of the British High Commissioner in (a) Australia, (b) India and (c) Canada.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 643]:

	Number
(a) Australia	26
(b) India	101
(c) Canada	22

The figures include immigration and British Council staff. They also include subordinate posts in India but not in Australia or Canada, where staff have consular rather than diplomatic status.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Training Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will list those bodies and organisations which have applied to become managing agents for the new job training scheme in each manpower services commission area; and in each case which of those listed have been selected.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Manpower Services Commission are currently negotiating and signing contracts with managing agents. As soon as the relevant information has been assembled, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General if he will specify the precise dates on which each of the administrative changes made to the compilation of the unemployment figures since 1979 was introduced.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The following changes have been made to the compilation of the monthly instalment figures since 1979:

Date for which unadjusted count was first affected

11 November 1982
Switch from count of registrants at jobcentres and careers offices to count of benefit claimants, following introduction of voluntary registration at jobcentres.

6 March 1986
Delay in compilation by two weeks to remove mistaken over-recording caused by late arrival of information about the status of claimants.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will provide the figures for the numbers of people who have been (a) continuously unemployed since May 1979, (b) continuously unemployed since June 1983 and (c) who have never had a job since leaving school; and if he will provide figures for each region, and for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Lee: Information is not available in the form requested. The following table gives the number of claimants in the regions of the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for over four years on 8 January 1987, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available (information on those unemployed over eight years is not available). It also shows for those areas the numbers of unemployed claimants of all ages who had not had a job since leaving full-time education at 12 February 1987, together with those aged under 18 years.

Region	Unemployed Over 4 years 8 January 1987	Full-time education leavers 12 February 1987
		All ages	Aged under 18 years
South East (Including Greater London)	71,218 (39,965)	51,379 (33,586)	10,869 (5,904)
East Anglia	7,870	4,268	1,236
South West	17,842	10,438	3,051
West Midlands	54,920	32,766	8,806
East Midlands	22,960	4,583	4,379
Yorkshire and Humberside	38,172	30,914	9,787

Region	Unemployed Over 4 years 8 January 1987	Full-time education leavers 12 February 1987 All ages	Aged under 18 years
North West	65,436	41,663	10,825
North	34,877	20,347	6,073
Wales	22,699	15,044	4,266
Scotland	45,126	40,636	18,751
Northern Ireland	23,833	8,968	1,893
United Kingdom	404,953	271,006	79,936

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will list, for each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom (a) the number unemployed in May 1979, in June 1983 and at the last date for which figures are available, (b) the long-term unemployed on these dates and (c) the percentage increase in unemployed and in long-term unemployed from both May 1979 and June 1983.

Mr. Lee: I am sending the hon. Member the available information which is also in the Library. The information relates to the number of unemployed claimants in each parliamentary constituency of Great Britain in June 1983 (not available for Northern Ireland constituencies) and of the United Kingdom on 12 February 1987. It is difficult to compare these figures directly because of seasonal factors and changes in the coverage of the data.

Statistics of unemployment for parliamentary constituencies are derived from the ward-based system and are available only from June 1983. Analyses of unemployment by duration are not available for February or June: statistics for constituencies of Great Britain at July 1983 and January 1987 are available in the Library.

Mr. George asked the Paymaster General on what dates the measures taken to revise the method of computing the number of unemployed took effect; what were the measures; and how many were removed from the register.

Mr. Trippier: In recent years the following changes have been made to the compilation of the monthly unemployment figures:

	Date on which unadjusted count was first affected	Approximate average effect on the unadjusted count when the change occurred
Switch from count of registrants at jobcentres and careers offices to count of benefit claimants, following inroduction of voluntary registration at jobcentres.	11 November 1982	−190,000
Delay in compilation by two weeks to remove mistaken over-recording caused by late arrival of information about the status of claimants.	6 March 1986	−50,000

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will list the number of employees in 1981 and 1984, and any estimate he has for 1986, and the numbers employed in (a) manufacturing, (b) construction, (c) metal manufacturing, and (d) engineering and allied industries in each Parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1987, c. 240-41]: Constituency figures can be provided only for those dates when censuses of employment are taken and the most recent are for September 1981. The September 1984 small area census estimates are expected to become available shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library.

The currently available information from the 1981 census given in the table below relates only to numbers of people employed excluding self employed people, in constituencies in Great Britain. An industry breakdown and an estimate of the number of self-employed people is not available for each constituency.

The figures are therefore not a measure of the number of jobs in each constituency.

Restart

Mr. Spearing asked the Paymaster General if he will review the rule that prevents a young person being employed under a Manpower Services Commission scheme who has gained the relevant skills under the restart programme.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have no knowledge of such a rule.

Employment Census

Mr. Meacher asked the Paymaster General to what factors he attributes the delay in the availability to regional planning authorities of the county, borough and ward level data from the employment census 1984, known as ER2 data; and whether he is able to give a date on which those data will be made available to the greater Manchester district authorities.

Mr. Lee: The processing of the 1984 census estimates for small areas has been delayed as a result of the difficulties arising out of sampling in the census. However, it is hoped that these estimates will become available for release within about a month or so. My officials will be writing to local planning authorities later this month to advise them as to availability.

Labour Force Survey

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General what consideration is being given to, or what consultations have taken place on, the future of the labour force survey; and if he proposes to conduct it on a more frequent basis.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My officials continually assess the quality of the Department's statistical series and seek ways to improve them. I have taken no decision to alter the present frequency of the labour force survey.

Part-time Work

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many men and women he estimates to be in search of part-time work.

Mr. Lee: Preliminary labour force survey results for the spring of 1986 indicate that of those unemployed according to the definition conventionally used in measuring the labour force 72,000 men and 411,000 women were looking for work as part-time employees.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General (1) what is his estimate for the United Kingdom for June 1983 and presently of (a) the number of married women or cohabitees who are out of work but not included in the benefit claimants monthly count and (b) the number of married men or cohabitees who are out of work but not included in the benefit claimants monthly count;

(2) how many persons over 60 years he estimates to be out of work but not required to register as unemployed to claim benefit for the following dates: June 1983, February 1986 and February 1987.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General what new proposals he is considering, or what consultations are taking place, in relation to the accuracy of the monthly count of unemployed benefit claimants.

Mr. Lee: There are no such proposals being considered or consultations taking place.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General what proportion of his Department's budget for advertising and promotion is spent on regional and local newspaper advertising; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The proportion of the Department of Employment's advertising budget spent on regional and local newspaper advertising is 4·1 per cent.

Job Creation Programmes

Mr. George asked the Paymaster General how many people are engaged in the following special employment and training measures within the employment area covering the Walsall, South constituency. (a) community industry, (b) community programme, (c) the YTS, (d) the young workers scheme, (e) the job release scheme, (f) the job-splitting scheme and (g) the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to give a precise total figure because of the various basis on which local information is collated. The number of people participating in the following employment training and enterprise measures are:

Programme	Date	Number	Area
Community Programme	31 March 1987	2,148	Walsall Metropolitan Borough
Job Release Scheme	1 March 1987	148	Walsall Travel to Work Area
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	7 April 1987	812	Wolverhampton and Walsall Area
YTS	5 April 1987	2,688	Walsall Local Authority District

There are currently no people on community industry, the young workers scheme or the job splitting scheme in the Walsall area.

Availability-for-Work Test

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many people have been interviewed under the new availability-for-work procedures; how many have had their claims for benefit stopped, how many appeals have been made; and how many have been successful.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 37]: Claimants to unemployment benefit have always been disallowed benefit by independent statutory adjudicating authorities, in accordance with long-standing legal rules adopted by successive Governments, where they are not available for work. There have therefore always been some interviews and some refusals of claims for as long as the national insurance system has operated since its establishment in its present form in 1947. If the hon. Member is asking for information about the position since we last modified the procedures and revised the form which has always been used to enforce the rules, the answer as at 27 February 1987 is as follows:

	Number
Numbers of claimants who have completed the latest version of the availability questionnaire (UB 671)	1,077,836
Number of claimants who have been disallowed benefit.	8,866

Information is not readily available about the number of appeals made against disallowance of benefit or their outcome.

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General how many people have been refused full or partial unemployment benefit as a result of information obtained by the new availability-for-work test in Leicester and the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 37]: Ever since the national insurance system in its present form was set up in 1947, some claimants to unemployment benefit have always been disallowed benefit by independent statutory adjudicating authorities, in accordance with long standing legal rules adopted by successive Governments, where they are not available for work.

If the hon. and learned Member is asking how many claims have been disallowed in this way since we last modified the procedures and revised the form which has always been used to enforce the rules, the answer, as at 27 February 1987, is 78 claimants in Leicester and 8,866 claimants in Great Britain.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General (1) when he expects to announce revised local unemployment rates, based on the employment figures contained in the 1984 census of employment;

(2) if he will publish the revised national and regional unemployment rates for each month since June 1983, based on his updated employment figures contained in the 1984 census of employment.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: Revised unemployment rates incorporating employment estimates which take account of the 1984 census of employment results will be published within the next two months. At that time revised national and regional rates will be available in the Library.

Bradford (Job Clubs)

Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General how much the Manpower Services Commission is paying the Norfolk Gardens hotel in Bradford to establish a job club; how many job clubs have been established in the Bradford district in private premises and at what cost in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Nine job clubs had been opened in the Bradford metropolitan district by 31 March as part of the Manpower Services Commission's expansion to 1,000 job clubs nationally. Two of these job clubs, run by MSC staff, are temporarily located in accommodation rented from the Norfolk Gardens hotel, pending a move to permanent premises. Negotiations for such premises are at an advanced stage.

In addition, seven job clubs are run on the commission's behalf by external organisations.

I regret that information about individual financial and contracting arrangements is confidential, but the average cost of job clubs in the Bradford metropolitan district is £18,600 per annum.

ENERGY

Pollution

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if any experiments on the introduction of metallic elements into the flame areas of boilers using untreated fuel oil in power stations in order to reduce the formation of acidic gases have been conducted by the Central Electricity Generating Board or by any body for which he is responsible;

(2) what has been the outcome of experiments at the Coal Research Establishment on the addition of anti-fouling additives in terms of the quantity of oxides of nitrogen produced by combustion in coal-fired boilers of the kind used in power stations;

(3) if consideration has been given to the treatment of fuels prior to combustion in power stations as a means of inhibiting acid rain.

Mr. Goodlad: The Central Electricity Generating Board maintains a wide ranging programme of research into methods of reducing acid emissions from power stations including the treatment of fuels prior to combustion. I understand that the evidence to date does not support the use of such techniques for emission control at the board's plant. I also understand that the introduction of metal compounds into the flame area of oil fired boilers has been found to be effective as a means of reducing acid dewpoint corrosion in the plant and the formation of acid smuts but not as a means of reducing emissions of sulphur and nitrogen oxides.

British Coal informs me that the coal research establishment has not undertaken any tests on the effect of anti-fouling additives in boilers of the type used in a large modern power plant. Such tests are under way for industrial boilers but the results, in terms of the quantity of oxides of nitrogen emitted, have not been promising.

Coal Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) pursuant to his answer of 6 April, Official Report, column 6, if he will take steps to produce details of all fatal accidents which have occurred in the coal industry for the year 1986-87, broken down according to coalfield areas, as soon as possible;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 6 April, Official Report, column 7, if he will take steps to produce details of all serious accidents which have occurred in the coal industry for the full year 1986-87, broken down according to coalfield areas, as soon as possible.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall publish the information requested when it becomes available.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Accommodation Agencies

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Attorney-General for each year since 1975, (a) how many accommodation agencies have had summonses issued against them under the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953, (b) how many accommodation agencies have been successfully prosecuted under the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953, (c) how many directors of accommodation agencies have had summonses issued against them under the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 and (d) how many directors of accommodation agencies have been successfully prosecuted under the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

Information in the form requested is not available. The information readily available to me, which may be incomplete, is given in the following table:

Licensed Conveyancers

Mr. Harris asked the Attorney-General what information the Lord Chancellor has as to the number of licensed conveyancers who have so far registered with the Council for Licensed Conveyancers under the transitional arrangements and as to the number of applications for registration.

The Attorney-General: Two hundred and forty five notices of intention to apply for a licence have been received by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers. The council cannot issue licences until the relevant statutory provisions comes into force.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Self-Employed Persons

Ms. Clare Short asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of self-employed in each tax band in each year since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information from the survey of personal incomes is as follows:

Single people and married couples liable to tax with main source self employment income

[2] Figures for 1979-80 are on a slightly different basis from that for later years. As a result, the total of those liable at 25 and 30 per cent. may be understated relative to later years by about 20,000. Differences for higher rates are negligible.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Bright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why investment trust companies are excluded from participating in the provision of personal equity plans.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The prime aim of the personal equity plan is to encourage direct investment in British companies. Holdings of investment trusts in personal equity plans are allowed up to £420 a year or 25 per cent. of investors' annual subscriptions, whichever is the higher. The purpose of this limit is to enable small investors to have a reasonable spread of risk, without undermining the main objective of the scheme. Though investment trusts are companies under law, they cannot provide a sufficiently close relationship between the investor and the companies in which the trust invests. Also, many investment trusts have large holdings in foreign companies and gilts.

Reliefs and Allowances

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1987-88 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the cases of a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum, making an annual investment of £40,000 from his earnings under the business expansion scheme and claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £281·25, (b) the maximum contribution to a personal pension scheme from 4 January 1988, having no contracted-out employer's scheme prior to that date, (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £1,000 and (d) the maximum monthly tax-free investment into a personal equity plan;

(2) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1987-88 as a proportion of earnings together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the case of a married man with earnings of £30,000 per annum, and making an annual investment from his earnings of £5,000 under the business expansion scheme as well as claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £281·25, (b) the maximum contribution to a personal pension scheme from 4 January 1988, having no contracted-out employer's scheme prior to that date, (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £200 and (d) the maximum monthly tax-free investment into a personal equity plan;

(3) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1987-88 as a proportion of earnings together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the cases of (a) a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum, (b) a married man on the level of average male earnings assumed for 1987 and (c) a single person earning £100 per week.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Leeds-Bradford Airport (Customs Clearance)

Mr. Madden asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from Freight Forwarders in the Leeds-Bradford area about its proposals to introduce a system of customs clearance by direct computer link covering Leeds-Bradford Airport and Leeds Containers base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. O'Brien asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received proposing the development of a customs and excise depot at the Leeds-Bradford Airport.

Mr. Peter Brooke: I shall let the hon. Members have replies as soon as possible.

Pensions

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, following his Budget proposals, any of the pension rights secured by additional voluntary contributions can be commuted into a tax-free lump sum, whether any restrictions will apply only to contributions paid after 17 March 1987 regardless of when the arrangements to pay such contributions was entered into; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1987, c. 108]: I regret the delay in replying. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given in my written reply on 7 April 1987 to my hon. Friend the Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Mr. Howarth) at columns 164-65.

Tax Exemption

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the rate of tax payable in the current financial year on (a) interest and (b) dividends paid to overseas holders of United Kingdom securities; and if he will provide a forecast of the yield in each case together with his estimate of the amount of tax forgone by virtue of exemption granted in the case of interest paid on certain government stocks;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report his estimate of the saving to the Exchequer in 1987-88 of ending the tax exemption on the interest paid on gilt-edged securities to overseas residents.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1987, c. 213]: The rate at which tax is payable on interest paid to non-resident holders of United Kingdom securities will depend on the nature of the security and the terms of any double taxation agreement between the United Kingdom and the country of residence of the recipient. Interest on certain British Government securities is not liable to income tax. Under the imputation system of corporation tax, the shareholders' liability to basic rate income tax on dividends paid by United Kingdom companies is regarded as met by the advance corporation tax payable by the company in respect of the distributions made by it. If, under the terms of a double taxation agreement a non-resident recipient is entitled to a tax credit, the aggregate of the dividend and the tax credit is taxed at the restricted rate specified in the agreement.

The information required to forecast the tax yield from interest paid to overseas holders of United Kingdom securities is not available. The yield from the taxation of dividends paid to overseas holders of United Kingdom securities and their accompanying tax credits was approximately £150 million in 1985-86, the latest year for which this information is available.

The estimated reduction in tax liabilities in 1986-87 resulting from the exemption for overseas holders of British Government securities is £350 million. A figure for 1987-88 is not available.

Tax and National Insurance

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update to 1987-88 the information on tax and national insurance contributions provided in his reply of 30 January to the hon. Member for Thurrock, Official Report, columns 413-16.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1987, c. 216]: The following table shows (a) income tax plus national insurance contributions less child benefit at current prices and (b) income tax plus national insurance contributions less child benefit as a percentage of gross income. The calculations assume that the taxpayer has no reliefs other than the appropriate personal allowances and that national insurance contributions are at the contracted-in rate. Average earnings are those for full time males and part-time females paid at adult rates whose pay was not affected by absence. Figures for 1986-87 and 1987-88 are provisional.

Allowances

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the cost to the Exchequer of an increase of £100 in each of the allowances at the standard rate of income tax.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 76]: The estimated direct revenue costs in a full year at 1987-88 income levels for each of the main personal allowances are as follows. The calculation assumes that the increase in each allowance would reduce liability at the basic rate of tax only.

Allowance	Cost at 1987-88 income levels £ millions
Single person's	250
Wife's earned income	105
Married man's	275

Pension Schemes (Approvals)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the superannuation funds office has returned to employers' pension schemes submitted to them for approval before Budget day.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: I assume my hon. Friend has in mind the decision of the Inland Revenue superannuation funds office not to give formal tax approval to occupational pension schemes until the Finance Bill has received Royal Assent. This is because the tax reform package for pensions announced in the Budget requires pension schemes to have rules which conform with the Budget proposals and, until the Finance Bill is enacted, the precise form of these rules cannot be known. However, schemes established before Royal Assent should generally benefit from the usual tax reliefs on a provisional basis until such time as they can finalise their rules and obtain approval.

Privatisation

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's policy towards the eventual privatisation of all nationalised industries and public corporations.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: It is the Government's policy to privatise most of the remaining state-owned sector of industry in the rest of this Parliament and the next.

TRANSPORT

Light Dues

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish in the Official Report the increase in constant price terms of light dues for shipping for the years 1970-71, 1974-75, 1978-79 and 1985-86.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The table shows, for each financial year since 1970-71, the percentage difference in constant price terms between the 1987-88 light dues rates and the rates in earlier years. In calculating these differences the latest Treasury GDP deflators have been used:

	Percentage
1970-71	19·9
1971-72	12·5
1972-73	21·1
1973-74	23·3

1985-86	11·8
1986-87	8·8
1987-88

[1] This increase took effect on 26 September 1975 and subsumed a smaller increase effective from 1 April 1975.

Coaches (Vehicle Excise Duty)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the net yield of payments made by the express coach service sector through vehicle excise duty and fuel duty, taking into account the rebate which is claimed by operators, in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. David Mitchell: Vehicle excise duty and fuel duty receipts are not collected separately for the express coach service sector.

British Transport Police

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to increase the manpower available to British Transport police in the South Wales area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a matter for the railways board and the British Transport police. I understand that they have no immediate plans to increase police manpower in South Wales, but the situation is under review.

Trains (Vandalism)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has of the number of incidents of vandalism on late evening trains in South Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand from the British Transport Police that in the first 3 months of 1987 there have been 14 reported offences involving criminal damage on late evening trains in South Wales.

Petroleum (Cetane Value)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on proposals to reduce the cetane value in petroleum products and on the effect of this on the environment.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Following discussions with Government Departments and the industries concerned proposals have been made by the British Standards Institution to amend the standard for diesel fuel for road vehicles BS 2869. The proposals follow changes in the quality of crude oil available, the mix of oil products in demand and the technical possibilities for controlling various characteristics of diesel fuel. The minimum cetane number would be reduced from 50 CN to 48 CN, a figure nearer the European average. It is expected that this would result in marginal increases in smoke and noise emission from some engines. On the other hand new density limits, a stability requirement and tighter viscosity and distillation characteristics would be introduced to act as a safeguard against diesel fuel quality declining in other respects. On balance we believe this package of changes will best secure the needs of industry and the protection of the environment.

Railways (Consultative Committees)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued to British Rail management concerning the making of representations by it about transport consultative committee appointments.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have neither issued any guidance to, nor received any representations from, British Rail on TUCC appointments. TUCC appointments are, in any case, entirely a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Roads (Safety)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department is seeking low-cost safety measures for implementation on roads taken over from the former Greater London council.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. A top priority on taking over these roads was to review their safety record. Our current programme will put in remedial schemes at the rate of two a week right across the London trunk road network throughout the coming year. This is part of our expanding programme of low-cost accident prevention measures which will pay high dividends in terms of lives saved.

Borough Traffic Orders

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the rate of clearance of borough traffic orders by his Department; and how it compares with the clearance rate by the former Greater London council.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: An object of giving boroughs their own traffic management powers was to cut out wasteful delays. Boroughs have been making good use of their new freedom to get ahead speedily with local schemes to handle traffic more effectively and safely. Where orders have to come to this Department, they are cleared within a maximum of one month and generally far less. This compares favourably with the many months some GLC orders used to take.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals have been made by consultants concerning the operation of the Woolwich free ferry; what changes in hours of service are envisaged; what effects there would be on manpower; and what would be the estimated savings in one year in actual and percentage terms.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At a meeting with me yesterday afternoon, Greenwich council undertook to complete its input to the consultants final report as quickly as possible. I hope to have the consultants' proposals soon.

Vehicle Passengers (Risks)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the relative risk of accident and injury for passengers travelling in (a) minibuses (b) motor caravans and (c) passenger service vehicles and coaches.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Relative injury-rates for these categories are not available, because: (i) the STATS 19 accident report form does not distinguish between (a) and (b); and (ii) traffic figures giving vehicle kilometres of exposure include (b) with traffic, and (a) with either car traffic or with (c).

In plain English: not much.

Minibuses (Safety)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to lay down standards for the safety of minibuses equivalent to that required for the occupants of other forms of fare-paying passenger transport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Each class of vehicle used for fare paying passenger transport is subject to appropriate safety standards which have regard to the particular constructional characteristics of that class. The requirements for minibuses are set out in the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will initiate any studies to monitor the effect of increased minibus passenger travel on the rate of accidents involving minibuses.

Mr. David Mitchell: Accidents involving minibuses are monitored through the accident reporting system, and I shall watch the situation carefully.

Road Accident Statistics

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to amend STATS 19 forms to allow a distinction to be made between minibus and motor car accidents as part of the process of monitoring the effects of bus-deregulation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The existing STATS 19 form distinguishes between (i) cars, (ii) minibuses-motor-caravans, and (iii) larger buses. There is no distinction under (ii) between private motor caravans and minibuses running on public services. We hope to obtain agreement from the Association of Chief Police Officers to record seating capacity of type (ii) vehicles. This should help in the monitoring of bus-deregulation.

Minibuses (Passenger Mileage)

127. Mr. Gareth Wardell : asked the Secretary of State for Transport, what information he has about minibus passenger mileage for 1985; and what information he proposes to collect to facilitate monitoring of the effects of bus de-regulation.

Mr. David Mitchell: No separate information is available for minibus passenger mileage for 1985. The Department has a programme for monitoring the effects of bus deregulation covering national data, area and case studies. The first report was published in January of this year and a further report is expected in the summer which will include general information on the development of minibus services in the study areas.

DEFENCE

Scottish Universities (Contracts)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department has placed with each Scottish university in the past three years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Research agreements and contracts have been placed by MOD with a wide range of Scottish universities as follows.

	Number
1984	10
1985	23
1986	29

It is for the universities concerned to confirm their individual involvement.

Project Zircon

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, in preparing his forthcoming defence White Paper, he will make it his policy to identify separately expenditure on project Zircon; and if he will provide similar information for previous years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

AWACS

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department intends to build hardened shelters for United Kingdom-based airborne warning and control system aircraft.

Mr. Freeman: My Department has no intention to build hardened shelters for United Kingdom-based airborne warning and control system aircraft.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether airborne warning and control system aircraft will be able to refuel from Victor K2 tankers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. All Victor K2 tankers are fitted with an E-3 compatible refuelling system.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether airborne warning and control system aircraft will be able to refuel from VC10 K1 tankers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no VC10 K1 aircraft in service. However, the United Kingdom's VC10 K2 and VC10 K3 tanker fleet will be compatible with the United Kingdom E-3 force.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether airborne warning and control systems aircraft will be able to refuel from Tristar Q1 tankers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence for how many hours airborne warning and control system aircraft will be able to remain on station with air-to-air refuelling.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to reveal details of operational capabilities.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence how long the airborne warning and control system mission system avionics can be kept in operation in the air without need for maintenance.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to reveal details of operational capabilities. However, most elements of the mission system are duplicated providing an automatic in-flight redundancy thereby ensuring a high degree of efficiency in the MSA.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many hours Royal Air Force airborne warning and control system aircraft will be able to stay on station over the Faroes/Iceland area of the North sea without air-to-air refulling.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to reveal details of operational capabilities.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the vulnerability of Royal Air Force advanced warning and control system aircraft on the ground in the event of war.

Mr. Stanley: I will write to the right hon. Gentleman.

Tanker Aircraft

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many squadrons of tanker aircraft are currently in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Stanley: Three.

Air-to-Air Refuelling

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions his Department has had with the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies on air-to-air refuelling capability.

Mr. Stanley: Recent discussions have been held with the United States on air-to-air refuelling interoperability. This and other aspects of air-to-air refuelling have been, and will be, under discussion in various NATO fora.

Sea Wolf

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the reason for the delay in awarding the Sea Wolf missile contracts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A review of Sea Wolf missile stocks and future requirements is currently underway. On successful completion of this review a decision will be made on the timing of any further contract awards.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when orders will be placed for Sea Wolf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Many individual orders have been placed under under the Sea Wolf programme since its inception in the 1970s. It is not possible to be precise about the timing of further such orders.

Invincible Class Vessels (Refurbishment)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist for the refurbishment of ships in the Invincible class over the next three years; and what timetable exists for the undertaking of the necessary work.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: HMS Invincible is currently undergoing a refit at Devonport dockyard. For all vessels of the class, maintenance in dock will be undertaken at approximately six-monthly intervals. Refit plans are under review.

Atomic Weapon Trials, Australia

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the history of the British atomic weapons trials in Australia, published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The book "A Very Special Relationship" provides a factual account of the British atomic weapon trials in Australia based mainly on a large volume of contemporary material, and also evidence provided during the inquiries of the Australian Royal Commission. It has been written by Lorna Arnold, a research assistant under Professor Margaret Gowing at the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. I have placed a copy in the Library today.

Tactical Missile System

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about United Kingdom involvement in plans for a new tactical missile system.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 1987 c. 304]: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Defence Budget

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of state for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 1987, Official Report, column 602, why the savings made in his budget during 1986-87 are not expected for 1987-88; what criteria he uses for the slection of priorities; what assessment he has made of the implications for progress towards the Government's energy efficiency targets of the reduction in the budget for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 88.]: The savings in the 1986-87 budget arose on fuel Votes as a result of engergy efficiency measures previously introduced. The fuel Votes have now been reduced to reflect the lower and more efficient consumption levels.

Energy efficiency measures are normally funded from works budgets and may at times have to give way to building projects which operationally are of greater urgency. Such building projects will increase energy efficiency on the defence estate over and above the measures for which funds have been specifically allocated, although the cost is not separately identifiable.

Within the Government's overall energy efficiency initiative the Ministry of Defence has set a target of a 25 per cent. reduction in usage of non-operational energy over the 5 year period 1986-87 to 1990-91. The reduction in the 1987-88 budget should not prejudice achievement of this target.

Greenham Common (Vehicle Transfer)

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to why 10 Dodge Ram support vehicles were transferred from Greenham common to Alconbury on 1 April; and to what use they will be put.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 7 April 1987, c. 172.]: I am informed by the United States authorities that they are not aware of any transfer of USAF Dodge Ram vehicles from RAF Greenham Common to RAF Alconbury on 1 April.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to the purpose for which United States service personnel were transferred from Greenham common to Alconbury on 1st April.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 7 April 1987, c. 172.]: I am informed by the United States authorities that they are not aware of any transfer of United States service personnel from RAF Greenham common to RAF Alconbury on 1 April.

Publications

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much has been spent by his Department in each of the past five years on publications for: (a) free distribution and (b) sale under £1;

(2) what has been the total cost of producing publications on aspects of Her Majesty's Government's defence policies in each of the past five years.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1987]: In the time available it is not possible to produce figures in the precise form requested. or for a full five-year period. However, all material produced on public relations Votes is free of charge and in the last three financial years expenditure was as follows:

1984-85	340,125
1985-86	269,440
1996-87	[1]408,273

[1] Forecast of outturn.

In addition the MOD produces considerable amounts of material in support of recruitment to the armed forces. Figures over the same period are, as follows:

1986-87	1,302,000

The MOD produces a wide range of material for sale both through HMSO, the Crown Publishers, and on a repayment basis through the single service forms and publications stores. The amounts spent in each of the past five years on publications for sale at less than £1, and on aspects of defence policies separately from other MOD publications, cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Community Charge

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he proposes to take to ensure that the introduction of the community charge does not deter students from outside Scotland applying to take courses at Scottish universities.

Mr. Ancram: My noble Friend the Minister of State at the Scottish Office agreed, during discussion of the Abolition of Domestic Rates etc., (Scotland) Bill at Committee Stage in the House of Lords on Thursday 2 April, to consider the position of students, including students from outside Scotland, under the proposals to replace domestic rates by a system of community charges. I do not however consider that the proposals will represent a significant disincentive to students from outside Scotland undertaking university and college courses in Scotland.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report how many people under the age of 25 years (a) are unemployed and (b) have been unemployed for more than six months in (i) Glasgow, Central and (ii) the whole of Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The information requested, for the latest available date, is given in the table:

Unemployed claimants aged under 25 years as at 8 January 1987

	Unemployed over 6 months	Total
Glasgow Central parliamentary constituency	1,545	2,825
Scotland	64,906	142,439

Private Medicine (Glasgow)

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list how many general practitioners are carrying out private work in health centres in the Glasgow area; and what is the proportion of private to Health Service general practice care in the Greater Glasgow health board area.

Mr. John MacKay: I understand that the number of general practitioners authorised to undertake private practice in health centres in the area of the Greater Glasgow health board was 156 at the end of March 1987. Information about the proportion of private to Health Service general practice in the board's area is not available centrally.

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on education in each of the past 10 years in cash and constant price terms.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is set out in the table:

Total expenditure on education within Secretary of State for Scotland's responsibility

£ million

Financial year	Cash	Constant price[1] terms
1976-77	754	1,796
1977-78	805	1,684

[2] Provisional outturn figure based on most recent information from local authorities.

Education (Statistics)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scotland's gross domestic product was spent on education in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. John MacKay: The information, in respect of the education expenditure within my right hon. and learned Friend's responsibility is set out in the table below:

	Per cent.
1982	7·5
[1]1984	7·0
[1]1985	6·6

[1] Figures are provisional.

Notes:

(1) GDP figures used are at factor cost by calendar year, expenditure figures are for financial years, ie the 1981 percentage is expenditure in 1981-82 as a percentage of GDP in 1981.

(2) The average cash growth in GDP for the years quoted was 8·6 per cent., while the average cash growth in education spending was 4·1 per cent., hence the latter declines as a percentage of the former.

Tourism

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what funds were made available in cash and real terms to the Scottish tourist board in the years 1978-79 and 1982-83; and how much has been provided for the year ahead.

Mr. Lang: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 2 March at column 485.

Children (Health and Development)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what evidence from surveys his Department has about the relative standard of health and development of children of the unemployed compared with the rest of the population.

Mr. John MacKay: No surveys designed to determine the existence of any relationship between child health and development and parental unemployment have been carried out in Scotland.

Cigarette Smoking

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the incidence of cigarette smoking by percentage by social class in Scotland at the latest date and 10 years previously.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the standardised mortality rates of men of working age by social class in Dundee and Tayside at the latest available date or period.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on standardised mortality ratios by social class for men aged 20-64 for Tayside for the period 1979-83 is as follows. The ratios are based on information from death registrations and the 1981 Census, and are subject to error because of different methods of collecting information on occupation. Information for Dundee is not available.

Mr. John MacKay: The latest information is contained in "Mortality Differentials in Scotland and England and Wales in Manual/Non-Manual Occupational Groups 1969-73 to 1979-83" which was published in the vital statistics return to the Registrar General for Scotland, Weeks 41-44, 1986. A copy of this publication is in the Library.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the standardised mortality rate of women aged 20 to 59 years by social class in Dundee and Tayside at the latest available date or period.

Radioactive Waste (Storage)

Mr. Home Roberston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if any sites in East Lothian have been considered for the storage of low level radio active waste material; and if any such sites are being considered for the storage of intermediate level radioactive waste material.

Mr. Ancram: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the permanent disposal of waste. The selection of sites for geological investigation as a possible shallow burial repository for the disposal of low level waste is a matter for UK NIREX Ltd. Neither the Government nor NIREX consider that it would be appropriate to release details of all the sites considered before the four currently under investigation in England were selected.

NIREX are currently considering possible options for the disposal of intermediate level waste, including deep burial in a repository on land, tunnelling beneath the seabed from the shore and disposal into the seabed from a sea-based rig. A number of alternative sites will be considered by NIREX. At this stage, no area has been ruled out.

Salmon

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional staff his Department is making available to support the advisory committee on salmon stocks.

Mr. John McKay: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is in the process of recruiting an additional principal scientific officer to assist in the consideration of scientific matters raised by the salmon advisory committee. Existing scientific staff will also contribute to that work. In addition, the Department provides the committee's deputy secretary from existing staff resources.

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the organisations whose applications for grant assistance for 1987-88 under the National Heritage (Scotland) Act 1985 have been approved; and what are the sums to be made available to those organisations.

Mr. John MacKay: Grants available under the National Heritage (Scotland) Act 1985 for the financial year ending 31 March 1988 are as follows:

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the numbers waiting for (a) hip joint and (b) knee joint operations in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the average waiting time for knee and hip joint replacement operations; and what are the authorities which have the longest waiting times.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not available in precisely the form requested. The table gives the mean waiting time (in days) for those who received treatment in 1985 for knee and hip joint replacement after admission from the waiting list and were discharged in that year.

Kidney Dialysis

Mr. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons are waiting for kidney dialysis treatment in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: All patients referred for treatment for end-stage renal failure who are considered likely to benefit from renal dialysis are receiving appropriate treatment, and there are no waiting lists.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to lay a commencement order bringing sections 4, 8(1), 9 and 10 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 into force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: As indicated in my written reply of 10 February 1987 to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie) at columns 67-8 my right hon. and learned Friend hopes to implement a number of provisions in the Act with relatively slight resource implications in the course of 1987-88 including those referred to in the question. Consultations have taken place with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities only very recently and he expects to indicate the timing he proposes immediately following the Easter recess.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the Scottish Development Agency's annual budget for all promotional purposes for each of the last five years; and what percentage of its total budget these figures represent;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report, the total value of work of all kinds put out to consultants by the Scottish Development Agency for each of the last five years, the name of each company and the value of each contract awarded; whether the contract was awarded on the basis of tenders in each case; and if he will give the reasons in those cases where tenders were not invited.

Mr. Lang: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Correspondence

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 8 April, what is his practice with regard to causing replies to be sent on his behalf by his Private Secretary to official letters addressed to him as Secretary of State; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: My private secretary operates in accordance with my instructions. These ensure that I have the opportunity to see and approve the replies to correspondents which he sends on my behalf.

Criminal Statistics

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, following the publication of the crime figures for Scotland 1986, he will list in respect of each police force area in Scotland in 1986 the total number of (a) offences notified to the police, (b) offences of violence against the person, (c) burglaries, (d) thefts, (e) offences of fraud and forgery and (f) offences of criminal damage.

Mr. Lang: The table sets out the requested figures on crimes recorded by the police, using the best available approximations in the Scottish crime classification to the categories listed in the question.

'Fraud and Forgery': fraud, forgery and uttering, bankruptcy and currency offences.

Rating Reform

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has as to how the current produce of domestic rates in Scotland and in each of the regions in Scotland might be raised through community charge or local income tax with and without resource equalisation in the cases of (a) a single person on 125 per cent. of an average male manual worker's wage, (b) a married man with earnings as in (a), whose wife's earnings are the average for women in full-time employment, (c) a married man with earnings as in (a), whose wife's earnings are the average for women in part-time employment, (d) a married man with earnings as in (a), whose wife has no income, (e) a married couple with earnings as in (b), living with a son or daughter aged over 18 years whose earnings are the average for full-time workers in the 18-24 year age group, (f) a married couple with earnings as in (b), living with a son or daughter aged 18-24 years who is unemployed, (g) a single person on 100 per cent. of an average male non-manual worker's wage and (h) a married man with earnings as in (g), whose wife's earnings are the average for women in full-time employment.

Notes:

(1) The average community charges for 1985-86 used in the tables were published in the Official Report on 20 February 1986.

(2) The underlying local income tax rates (with resource equalisation) have been estimated on the assumption that some form of resource equalisation would make the yield of 1p in the £ the same per adult in all areas.

(3) Published information on taxable resources in local authority areas is only available up to 1982-83. The sample size is small and the regional pattern shows considerable variation from year to year. Estimates of local income tax rates without resource equalisation are therefore subject to some uncertainty. Those in the table have been produced by applying the pattern of unequalised tax rates calculated for 1982-83 to 1985-86 average earnings.

(4) Estimates of average gross earnings have been taken from the 1985 New Earnings Survey. The average figures for Scotland have been used in each case with the exception of average earnings for the 18-24 year age group, where only GB figures were readily available.

(5) In applying local income tax rates to cases (a) to (h) it is assumed that earnings are the only sources of income and that only personal tax allowances apply.

(6) In case (f) it has been assumed that the unemployed son or daughter will be in receipt of unemployment benefit.

Food Consumption

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department has on food consumption in Scotland by income group at the latest date and 10 years previously for the following foods: (a) white bread, (b) brown bread (including wholemeal), (c) sugar, (d) total fats, (e) fresh fruit, (f) fresh vegetables and (g) potatoes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have been asked to reply.

Primary Schools

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many primary schools with fewer than three teachers there are in each of Scotland's regions and island areas and if he will give a breakdown of figures to show the number in each district.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 2 April 1987, c. 563]: The numbers of education authority primary schools in each region and island area in which less than three full-time equivalent teachers were employed in 1984 are as follows. Education statistics are not collated at district level.

Reckless Driving (Deaths)

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many motorists alleged to have caused death by reckless driving have been charged with that offence and how many with culpable homicide in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 53]: The available information is given in the table. Information on persons charged is not collected centrally.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by each local education authority in Scotland on the purchase of text books in each year since 1978-79 in terms of (a) current prices and (b) 1978-79 prices.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: The information available is given in the following tables, which have been compiled from local authority financial returns. There have been some variations in the basis of recording of expenditure under the heading of text and library books, both between authorities and from year to year. In addition to those cases specifically noted in the table, there may be other cases where the figures given also include other equipment as well as text and library books.

Scottish Association of Interpreters for the Deaf

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each of the last five years the total grant paid by central Government under section 9 and section 10, respectively, of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 or under any other heading to the Scottish Association of Intepreters for the Deaf.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: Grants are payable by my right hon. and learned Friend under section 9 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 for training and under section 10(1) for other purposes. The association has not hitherto requested any payments of grant under section 9 of the Act. Annual payments of grant under section 10(1) during the period in question have been as follows:

1982-83	nil
1983-84	nil
1984-85	2,604
1985-86	5,585
1986-87	8,571

Deaf People (Interpreters)

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many qualified interpreters for the deaf there are in Scotland; and how many of these hold the Certificate in Communication with the Deaf as a result of attendance at the course run at Moray House college of education.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: Information of this kind is not held centrally, but my Department has ascertained that there are 16 interpreters on a register maintained by the Scottish Association of Interpreters for the Deaf, 10 of whom qualified through the Moray House course, and that there are 14 trainees currently working towards assessment.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Mains (Bursts)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the volume of water lost through burst mains each year in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: It is not possible for individual water undertakers to identify water losses resulting from mains bursts, and therefore no national estimate can be made.

Anti-fouling Paint Regulations

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to announce the date for publication of anti-fouling paint regulations; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am currently considering the comments received during the formal consultation on the draft regulations published in the London, Belfast and Edinburgh Gazettes on 13 March. I shall make a further announcement shortly.

Government Buildings (Lift Maintenance)

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many persons are currently employed by the Property Services Agency on lift maintenance.

Mr. Chope: 126.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will place the contract for the maintenance of lifts in Government buildings in London with a private sector company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Lifts in most Government buildings throughout the United Kingdom, including many in London, are already maintained by contract with private sector companies.

The policy of the Property Services Agency is to continue to use contractors for this work whilst making economic use of existing direct employees.

Financial Detriment Compensation

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the report from the London and Metropolitan Staff Commission on financial detriment compensation for Greater London council and metropolitan council staff.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 16 March 1987 at column 404.

"Paying for Local Government"

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to complete his consideration of the responses to the Green Paper, "Paying for Local Government"; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Boyson: My right hon. Friend announced, on 15 December, that the Government intend to introduce legislation no later than the first session of the next Parliament to implement the main Green Paper proposals. A number of detailed issues remain to be resolved, and decisions on these will be taken in due course, in the light of the responses to the Green Paper and other representations that have been made.

Kidbrooke Training Centre, Rochester Way

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when the Kidbrooke training centre at Rochester way, S.E.3, was closed; and what use has been made of the site and building by the Property Services Agency since then;

(2) what proposals are under consideration by the Property Services Agency for the site of the former Kidbrooke training centre at Rochester way, S.E.3.

Mr. Chope: The former MSC training centre on part of this Ministry of Defence site was closed in 1982. Plans were considered for meeting the requirements of both Inland Revenue and DHSS for computer centres here and on another vacant part of the site. In the event these did not proceed. With its potential development value in mind occupants of other buildings on the site have been moved elsewhere with a view to its disposal as a whole. The MOD intend to move their remaining operation from the site, and the PSA have appointed agents with a view to its early marketing and disposal.

Royal Arsenal Gatehouse, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the restoration of the Royal Arsenal Gatehouse at Woolwich; and what reply he has given.

Mr. Chope: None.

Brixton

Mr. Shelton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in view of the degree of dereliction, unemployment and poor housing in Brixton in the London borough of Lambeth, he will consider the setting up of an urban development corporation for that area.

Mr. John Patten: I have noted with great interest my hon. Friend's suggestion.

Planning Control

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the results of his consultations on regulations excluding minor forms of development from planning control.

Mr. Tracey: I take it my hon. Friend is referring to the consultation on a draft revised text of class I of schedule 1 to the Town and Country Planning General Development Order. This class defines development which is permitted within the curtilage of a dwelling house. We published the draft text on 5 January and invited commeints by 2 March. We have now placed in the Libraries of both Houses copies of the responses from those individuals and organisations who agreed to our doing so. We are at present considering all the responses and are not yet ready to make any announcement.

Control of Advertisement Regulations

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now in a position to announce his conclusions on the recommendations of his Department's working party set up to review the operation of the control of advertisement regulations in general, and in respect of estate agents' boards in particular.

Mr. Tracey: We are considering what action we should now take in the light of the responses to the consulation paper.

River Pollution

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what statistics on the causes of river pollution are available to him, with particular reference to instances of oil and chemical pollution, either from static storage facilities or from road transport accidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: While total numbers of reported water pollution incidents in each water authority area are published annually, no detailed analysis by type of incident is available on an industry-wide basis. Such information can only be obtained from individual water authorities.

The Department is currently discussing with the industry how this sort of information might be made more readily available.

Rates

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority the projected opening and closing rate fund balances which appeared in their rate estimates for 1987-88.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed the information available, in the House of Commons Library.

Courts Centre (Newcastle)

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretarty of State for the Environment when he expects work on the construction of the new courts centre at Newcastle Quayside to start.

Mr. Chope: I have now authorised the Property Services Agency to invite tenders for the contract for the construction of a new major courts centre at Newcastle Quayside for the Lord Chancellor's Department. The building will provide 10 Crown courts, three county courts, together with associated accommodation. The construction is expected to take about three years to complete and will provide welcome employment for a substantial number of building workers in the area.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of his Department's advertising and promotional budget is spent in regional and local newspapers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: During the financial year 1986-87 my department, including the Property Services Agency, spent £1,980,900 on advertising and other forms of paid publicity (other than on recruitment, tendering and statutory notices). Expenditure in regional and local newspapers amounted to £3,000.

Housing Defects

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to increase the funds available to local authorities to implement the provisions of the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Department is currently considering bids for additional resources from authorities which consider they will have particularly high expenditure on obligations under the housing defects legislation in 1987-88, in relation to the size of their capital programme. Decisions about additional allocations will be announced shortly.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has of local authorities deliberately delaying their implementation of the provisions of the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. John Patten: Local authorities are responsible for implementing the scheme of assistance, in accordance with the provisions of the housing defects legislation. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on particular cases; but we do look to all authorities to implement the Act in a reasonable fashion.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has of contractors withdrawing from work on the reinstatement of prefabricated reinforced concrete houses.

Mr. John Patten: The National House Building Council is making very good progress with approved repair methods for various types of designated PRC properties and repair works are now getting under way in many parts of the country. We have no evidence of contractors wishing to withdraw from this work.

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the light of protracted delays experienced by private owners of prefabricated reinforced concrete houses in effecting reinstatement of their homes, he will review the implementation of the Housing Defects Act.

Mr. John Patten: Repairs are now progressing in many parts of the country. Under the terms of the designations owners do still have over seven years in which to seek and obtain assistance; it can be helpful for authorities and owners to reach an understanding on a likely timetable for assistance. My Department is continuing to monitor progress but we have no current plans to amend the legislation.

Community Charge

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will prepare estimates of the likely level of the community charge without safety nets in the metropolitan borough of Kirklees;

(2) what will be the effect of the community tax on the average householder's payment in Kirklees.

Dr. Boyson: Figures were placed in the Library on 1 April illustrating the possible effect of our community charge and non-domestic rate proposals on all local authorities. I have today written to the hon. Member with details of the possible effects of our proposals in Kirklees.

Housing

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken, and intends to take in the future, to maintain and improve the existing housing stock in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Public Sector Dwellings

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the proportion of domestic dwellings owned by public sector authorities in other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries; and what is the figure for the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) by how much gross county council expenditure has risen in Derbyshire, in real terms, between (a) 1980-81 and (b) 1981-82 and the latest date for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with the average gross county council expenditure rises over the same period of time;

(2) by how much current county council expenditure has risen in Derbyshire, in real terms, between (a) 1980-81 and (b) 1981-82 and the latest date for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with the average current county council expenditure rises over the same period of time.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: The available information, based on returns received from local authorities, is as follows:

	Percentage change in real[1] terms
Net current expenditure[2]	1981-82 to 1986-87
Derbyshire County Council	15·9
Average for Shire County Councils	8·1
Gross expenditure[3]	1981-82 to 1985-86
Derbyshire County Council	6·6
Average for Shire County Councils	−0·6

[1] Using GDP deflator to convert cash values to constant prices.

[2] "Net current expenditure" represents Rate Fund Revenue Account spending on services, ie excluding debt charges and other on current items, net of income such as sales fees and charges and non-relevant specific grants but gross of rate income, Rate Support Grant and Relevant Specific and Supplementary Grants.

[3] "Gross expenditure" represents Rate Fund Revenue Account gross spending on employees, other running expenses, debt charges and Revenue Contributions to Capital Outlay.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Purity

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on recent steps taken to improve the purity of food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There is already a range of legislation regulating the safety and quality of food. Regulations are kept under review so that appropriate initiatives can be taken in response to new developments.

Radioactivity

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the results of radionuclide level tests between 1980 and 1986 in Cumbria have been published by his Department; and in which publications they appear.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Results of tests carried out for radionuclide levels in the aquatic environment for all parts of the country in the years 1980 to 1985 inclusive were published in annual reports entitled "Radioactivity in Surface and Coastal Waters of the British Isles", copies of which are placed in the Library of the House. Results for 1986 will be published later this year in the same way. An additional report was also published last year describing the results of the Department's monitoring for Chernobyl fallout in the aquatic environment in the months immediately following the Chernobyl accident.

Results of the tests carried out in the agricultural and terrestrial environment in Cumbria were not in the past published on a regular basis. Some results are contained in a scientific paper entitled "Radioactivity in Environmental Samples Taken in the Sellafield and Ravenglass areas of West Cumbria 1977-1982 (Bradford, Curtis and Popplewell)" which was published in "Science of the Total Environment (1964) volume 35 pp 267-283.

Results for 1986 will, however, be published later this year in the first annual report of this Department's expanded programme of testing in the agricultural and terrestrial environment in the vicinity of major nuclear sites in England and Wales which commenced on 1 January 1986. Results of testing undertaken in May to December 1986 following the Chernobyl accident were published in "Radionuclide Levels in Food, Animals and Agricultural Products: Post-Chernobyle Monitoring in England and Wales", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Salmon

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional staff his Department is making available to support the advisory committee on salmon stocks.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The staff of the branch which provides the secretary to the committee has been strengthened by two additional posts and we are recruiting additional scientific staff at the fisheries laboratory to assist in the examination of subjects of concern to the committee.

Hungarian Frozen French-Fried Potatoes

Mr. Freud asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of the import of Hungarian frozen French-fried potatoes; what steps he has taken to assess the quality of such products; and if he will make a statement on future agricultural imports from Eastern bloc countries.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There were no such imports in recent years. Imports from Hungary are subject to a quantitative restriction which is under review in the context of a possible EC/Hungary agreement on trade and commercial and economic co-operation.

Bovine Somatotropine Hormone

Mr. Alton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning testing of the bovine somatotropine hormone on cattle in Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received representations from two organisations in Yorkshire against the use of bovine somatotropine. Current field trials are authorised under the Medicines Act 1968.

Mr. Alton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to whether milk produced by cattle being treated with the bovine somatotropine hormone is being delivered to creameries; and what research or monitoring is being done to the side effects of the consumption of such milk.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Trials on cattle using this substance are being carried out under the authority of animal test certificates issued under the Medicines Act 1968. Had there been any doubts about the safety to consumers the certificates would not have been issued and the trials could not take place.

There is no requirement that milk from cows involved in the trials should be treated differently to that from other cattle either in the United Kingdom or, so far as I can ascertain, in any of the other countries where trials are being conducted.

Forestry

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will state, for each country in the European Economic Community, the percentage of its land surface that is afforested.

Mr. John MacKay: I have been asked to reply.
The information requested is as follows:

Percentage of total land surface afforested (including unproductive woodland)

Country	Percentage
United Kingdom	9
Belgium	20
Luxembourg	32
Denmark	11
France	28
West Germany	30
Greece	45

Vineyards

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what grants are currently available for the establishment of English vineyards and ancillary purposes in the light of his alternative land use policy.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: Grants are currently available for certain works in vineyards under the agriculture improvement scheme. As my right hon. Friend announced on 9 February, he intends to introduce new grants to assist farm diversification, including on-farm processing of agricultural products. A consultative document will be issued shortly, which I shall send to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider making grants available for the establishment of English vineyards for (a) the purchase of vines, (b) their support, (c) trellising, (d) wiring and (e) windbreaks.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: The growing of grapes is among the activities for which grants are available, subject to eligibility, under the agricultural improvement scheme. The scheme makes specific provision for grants towards the cost of stakes and wireworks and for certain types of shelter screens. Grants are not, however, available for the purchase of vines.

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ensure that only English-produced sugar and not rectified concentrated grape must from Italy is permitted to be added to the fermentation process of English wine until such time as enrichment is necessary or permitted.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: The Community wine regulations provide for the addition of sugar, concentrated grape must or rectified concentrated grape must in the process of wine fermentation. While enrichment using sugar is the normal practice among English wine producers there is no reason why they should be prevented from using the approved alternatives and it would be contrary to Community law were the United Kingdom seek to limit their choice in the way suggested.

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to resist any attempts to impose rectified concentrated grape must in the production of English wine until such time as enrichment is necessary and permitted.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: Under article 20 of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 822/87, the European Commission is committed to studying the possibilities for enriching wine with sugar, or concentrated grape must, whether or not rectified. This study and its conclusions are due to be reported to the Council in 1990, although it is possible that the Council may decide in the context of this year's price fixing proposals that the date should be brought forward. When the study is completed, I shall consider in consultation with all the interests concerned any recommendations it may make for changes to Community law, including a recommendation, should there be one, to require the use of rectified concentrated grape must for enrichment.

Agriculture, Fisheries and Food

Mr. Steen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his policy regarding the manifestation of phylloxera in English vineyards;

(2) if he will abandon his policy of attempted eradication of phylloxera in English vineyards.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: We have reviewed policy in relation to phylloxera. We have decided that we should not require the compulsory grubbing-up of infested vines. Where a vineyard is infested, we shall impose statutory restrictions which will not permit vines to be moved from the premises. In addition, access to infected areas of vineyards will be restricted, although care will be taken to allow tourist access to continue to the greatest possible extent consistent with plant health safety. When vineyard owners do grub up vines from infested vineyards, the Ministry will monitor the operation and, if the pest is found, will require the land to be kept clear of vines for 12 months, after which re-planting with certified resistant grafted rootstock will be permitted. These measures are designed to cause the minimum disruption of the normal activities of vineyards consistent with minimising the risk of spread of the disease. The plant health and seeds inspectorate will continue to monitor and inspect imports of vines. Phylloxera remains a notifiable disease.

The technical advice is that the best defence against phylloxera is the use of vines on resistant grafted rootstocks. Growers can protect themselves by using such vines when re-planting.

SOCIAL SERVICES

AIDS

Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what extra resources have been allocated to Trent regional health authority in 1987-88 to help to deal with AIDS.

Mr. Newton: At the end of March 1987, the Trent region had 12 reported AIDS patients, of whom six had died. No additional funds have been allocated to the Trent regional health authority specifically for the treatment and care of patients with HIV infection and AIDS. It has however received an increase of 6·3 per cent. in its allocation of the resources available for spending on hospital and community health services in 1987-88, which is above the national average increase in regional health authority allocations; and we have provided £44,000 in 1987-88 for the haemophilia reference centre located in the Trent region which is specifically to assist in the provision of AIDS counselling facilities for haemophiliacs.

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the latest figures for AIDS carriers and deaths in the United Kingdom with the causes or sources available.

Mr. Fowler: The first quarterly report which I have published today, together with the regular monthly update, provides the information which my hon. Friend has requested. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

The report does three things:

First, it gives a breakdown of reported cases of AIDS by patient characteristics (table A) and by region from which the report is made (table B).

Second, it provides the first of a series of quarterly breakdowns of people who are infected but who have not yet developed the disease. These are broken down by patient characteristics for England, Wales and Northern Ireland (table C) and for Scotland (table D) and by English regions, Wales and Northern Ireland (table E).

Third, it explains how the information is collected and checked.

I believe that it is important that we provide regular full and prompt information about AIDS so that the public know what the position really is. It is equally important that the information is as accurate as we can make it. That is why the computer records have been rigorously rechecked and duplicate records removed. The apparent low increase in the monthly AIDS figures is explained by this. Thirty-one new cases were in fact reported in March.

We must continue to take all possible action to prevent the spread of AIDS. The public education campaign will continue and one of the next campaigns will be directed at drug misuse and the sharing of equipment.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the estimated cost to each health board, of the increased staff required in order to carry out testing for the AIDS virus; and if these costs are included in the Government's stated expenditure on AIDS.

Mr. Newton: Information on staff costs which health authorities incur on HIV testing is not available centrally and has not been included in the Government's stated expenditure on AIDS. Many of these tests are dealt with by laboratories of the Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS). It is estimated that PHLS spent £0·75 million on work connected with HIV tests in 1986/87. Part of this will have been for staff, but I regret that we do not have a breakdown between staff and other costs.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he intends to introduce further screening for the AIDS-related virus HTLV 1;

(2) whether his Department is monitoring the number of people in Britain with the aids-related virus HTLV 1; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what figures he has for the number of people carrying the HTLV 1 virus;

(2) what plans he has to test blood supplies for the HTLV 1 virus;

(3) what plans he has to combat the spread of the HTLV 1 virus; what facilities he is making available to screen people for the HTLV 1 virus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 23 March 1987, c. 71-72]: Although the HTLV 1 virus is thought to belong to the same family as the AIDS virus, HIV, it does not cause AIDS.

Research studies carried out to date suggest that the virus is not prevalent in this country. There are at present, therefore, no plans to introduce measures for routine screening of individuals or blood donations for this virus. However, appropriate measures would be considered should further research show that they were needed.

NHS (Hospital and Community Services)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to answer the question on National Health Service hospital and community services from the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey to which he gave holding replies on 27 February, Official Report, column 449, and on 23 March, Official Report, column 82.

Mr. Newton: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will provide figures for the change in real expenditure on National Health Service hospital and community health services for each year between the earliest year after 1974 and the most recent year for which comparable figures are available as measured using (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) the National Health Service pay and price deflator, by Greater London district health authorities in total, and by Inner London district health authorities in total;

(2) when he will answer the question on National Health Service hospital and community services from the honourable Member for Southwark and Bermondsey to which the Minister for Health the hon. Member for Braintree, gave a holding reply on 27 February, Official Report, column 449.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his replies, 27 February 1987, c. 449 and 23 March 1987 c. 827]: Since expenditure on hospital and community health services forms part of an overall health service policy which seeks also to build up family practitioner services in the community, the table shows gross expenditure in 1985-86 prices as measured by the gross domestic product deflator, for:

hospital and community health services, family practitioner services and community health and family practitioners services in Greater London between 1978-79 and 1985-86; hospital and community health services and hospital and community health and family practitioner services in Inner London between 1982-83 and 1985-86; family practitioner services in Inner London between 1978-79 and 1985-86.

Comparable figures for hospital and community health services in Inner London prior to the 1982 reorganisation of the National Health Service are not available. Information relating to Greater London prior to 1978-79 is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

It is inappropriate to revalue district health authority expenditure by reference to centrally assessed movements in NHS pay and prices as the composition of that expenditure can differ substantially from the national average.

It is important to set the figures in the context of a London population which has been falling (there was a decrease of some 17 per cent. between 1971 and 1985) and the policy of redistributing resources to areas which historically have been deprived of services or have high population growth. However, the process of change can present transitional difficulties in those Health Regions receiving less than average growth. For that reason we have established a special fund of £15 million in each of the years 1987-88 and 1988-89 to provide appropriate transitional help. The Thames Regions and London Postgraduate SHAs have been allocated £12·9 million from the £15 million available for 1987-88. This means that Inner London health authorities collectively can expect real terms growth over financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88 of the order of 2 per cent.

NHS Staff

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage change each year since 1979 in the number of National Health Service staff as follows (a) medical and dental, (b) nursing and midwifery, (c) professional and technical, (d) works, (e) maintenance, (f) administrative, (g) clerical, (h) ancillary and (i) ambulance personnel.

Mr. Newton: The figures are shown in the table.

Senior Registrars (Upgrading)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 20 February, if he will estimate the additional cost of upgrading 500 currently employed senior registrars at the top of their incremental scale to consultant grade, starting at the bottom of their incremental scale.

Mr. Newton: The bottom of the consultant salary scale is currently £23,500. The top of the senior registrar scale is £16,750 but on average senior registrars will receive an additional £5,528 as payment for units of medical time. The additional basic salary cost of upgrading a senior registrar at the top of the scale would thus be some £1,200 in the first year on average, increasing in subsequent years as the newly-appointed consultant ascends the consultant scale. Employer's contributions to superannuation and national insurance would increase this to about £1,400. The total net salary cost of upgrading 500 senior registrars would thus be some £700,000 in the first year.

There could however be wider consequential cost implications of a considerable order, but for which there is at present no basis for a precise estimate. A reduction in senior registrar numbers alone would not be sufficient to solve the underlying problems of hospital medical staffing; and as I pointed out in my earlier reply, however, the changes in the hospital staffing structure proposed in "Achieving a Balance" do not envisage converting senior registrar to consultant posts on anything like this scale.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, in numerical order, the 10 regional health authorities which have achieved the greatest percentage reduction in (a) general in-patient waiting lists and (b) general in-patient waiting lists over the last 10 years.

Mr. Newton: The available information is given in the table.

[1] Figures for 1976 are not strictly comparable with those for 1986 because of NHS restructuring in 1982.

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons on the hospital waiting list in Merseyside have been waiting for (a) more than six months, (b) more than a year and (c) more than two years; and if he will give comparable figures for each year since and including 1979.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. The information available centrally is given in the table.

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire on 19 December 1986, Official Report, column 787, if he will now make a further statement regarding the pilot scheme operated by the West Midlands regional health authority on computerised hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: The project is progressing. Selected groups of general practitioners are receiving monthly bulletins on waiting times for general surgery in the Region. Their referrals will be analysed to see whether information in this form affects decisions made about where best to refer patients. Groups of patients are being identified from amongst those referred by the selected general practitioners and they will be interviewed at various stages about their waiting experiences.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the numbers waiting for (a) hip joint and (b) knee joint operations.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. Waiting list information is held centrally by consultant department and not according to intended method of treatment.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each health authority the percentage rise or fall in the total hospital waiting list between September 1982 and March 1986, ordered so that the health authority with the biggest increase is first and that with the biggest decrease is last, giving the numbers waiting in each health authority at those two points.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1987, c. 431-32]: The information requested is given in the table.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of a prepayment certificate for National Health Service prescriptions in June 1979; and what were the effective dates of subsequent increases and the new cost in each case.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is as follows:

Personal Social Services (Cost)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish figures showing the costs of the personal social services in the United Kingdom in 1985-86, distinguishing between England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, and also distinguishing between the main categories of expenditure.

Mr. Newton: Levels of gross current expenditure on the personal social services in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland for 1985-86 are shown in the table. Although returns have not yet been received from all English authorities in relation to 1985-86, sufficient data are available to enable provisional figures to be provided.

Hospitals (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the longest period a patient has had to wait for treatment at St. Paul's eye hospital in Liverpool.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information required. Information on length of stay on the waiting list at individual hospitals is not available centrally. The hon. Member way wish to write to the chairman of the Liverpool health authority for the information he seeks.

Health Education Authority

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 19 March Offical Report, column 625, if he will list in the Official Report the voluntary organisations, including pressure groups and charities and professional associations (a) who wrote to him and (b) with whom he had meetings in connection with his determination of the membership of the Health Education Authority.

Mr. Newton: Among the representations made to my right hon. Friend were those from the following voluntary and professional bodies:

Association of District Medical Officers
Council of the Royal College of General Practitioners
Institute of Environmental Health Officers
National Association of Health Authorities
National Consultative Committee of Health Education Officers
Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain
Society of Family Practitioner Committees
South East Thames Health Promotion Consortium and Group

No meetings were held with these organisations.

North West RHA (Finance)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he now proposes to make any additional financial resources available to the North West regional health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Regional health authorities were notified of their cash limits for 1978-88 in January. North Western regional health authority received a revenue increase of 5·6 per cent. In addition the region was allocated £1·2 million from the £15 million special fund we established to provide transitional help to those regions receiving less than average growth, bringing North Western Regional Health Authority's initial cash increase in 1978-88 to 5·7 per cent.

Since January further allocations totalling £2·6 million have been made. The largest of these was from the £25 million waiting list fund from which North Western received £2·3 million.

Nurses

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received against the proposal by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing and Midwifery to do away with enrolled nurses; and what consideration he is giving to the report.

Mr. Newton: I am not aware of any proposal to do away with enrolled nurses. However, we have received a number of representations expressing concern at the suggestion that enrolled nurse training should cease. This is one of a number of proposals on the future of nurse education and training put to Ministers by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. We are now consulting health authorities and others on these proposals.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he will answer the question on numbers of National Health Service nurses from the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey to which he gave a holding reply on 24 February, Official Report, column 236.

Mr. Newton: I replied to the hon. Member yesterday.

Chief Scientist

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the terms and conditions of appointment, including salary, of the chief scientist to his Department.

Mr. Newton: Professor Francis O'Grady's appointment is on a part-time advisory basis and took effect from 1 September 1986. He remains Professor of Microbiology at the University of Nottingham, which is responsible for his salary and is reimbursed for the five sessions a week that he devotes to his duties as chief scientist. The appointment is for two years initially with the possibility of an extension.

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are currently on hospital waiting lists in the Trent regional health authority area.

Mr. Newton: For the latest centrally available information I refer the hon. Member to "Hospital In-Patient Waiting List, England" at 30 September 1986, national, regional and district summaries, copies of which have been placed in the Library. For current figures he may wish to write to the Chairman of the Trent regional health authority.

Child Abuse

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the problem of sexually abused children has been reviewed within his Department since Childline started operating; and if any new initiatives have been undertaken, or approaches to local authorities made, as a result.

Mr. Newton: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley) on 8 April at columns 240-41.

National Insurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for 1987-88 his estimate of the number of male and female employees expected to pay contributions at the 5 per cent., 7 per cent. and 9 per cent. rates, together with the forecast amount of the employers' and the employees' contributions at each rate; and if he will divide the figures between those contracted in and those contracted out.

Mr. Major: The information is as follows:

Estimated average number of contributors 1987-88
Great Britain

Class 1 standard rate	per cent.	Men thousand	Women thousand	Total thousand
Contracted out	5	—	100	100
	7	100	200	300
	9	6,200	2,500	8,700

	9	4,400	1,300	5,700

Estimated full year contributions yields payable in 1987-88

Class 1 standard rate	per cent.	Men Primary £ million	Men Secondary £ million	Women Primary £ million	Women Secondary £ million	Total Primary £ million	Total Secondary £ million	Total £ million

	9	3,900	4,900	1,000	1,100	4,900	6,000	10,900

Notes:
(1) In one or two entries the apparent nil yield from contributions is caused by rounding.
(2) The secondary contributions paid at 9 per cent. includes secondary contributions paid at 10·45 per cent.
(3) All estimates are based on the assumptions used in the Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Up-rating (No. 2) Order 1986 and the Social Security (Contributions Re-rating) (No. 2) Order 1986 (Cm. 24).

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply dated 25 March, Official Report, column 197, concerning reduced rate national insurance contributions, if he will provide figures for the gross and net contributions taking into account the figures supplied on the same date in reply to a question asking for an update of table 40.13 of "Social Security Statistics 1985," 25 March, Official Report, column 198.

Mr. Major: It is estimated that the abolition of the reduced rate paid by married women and widows would increase gross national insurance contribution revenue by £250 million during 1987-88. This would be offset by £50 million contracted out rebate on employees' contributions for those who are members of contracted-out superannuation schemes. The other information requested is as follows:

Estimated average number of contributors paying the reduced rate for Married Women, 1987-88 Great Britain.

	Thousands
Contracted Out	400
Not Contracted Out	700

Estimated full year contributions yields payable in respect of those paying the reduced rate for Married Women. Great Britain £ million 1987-88

	Primary	Secondary
Contracted Out	100	200
Not Contracted Out	100	200
Total	200	400

All estimates are based on the assumptions used in the Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Up-rating (No 2) Order 1986 and the Social Security (Contributions Re-rating) (No 2) Order 1986 (Cm 24).

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will bring up to date for the year 1987-88 the information given in his answer of 10 December, Official Report, column 204, to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby concerning the distribution of incomes and national insurance contributions, adding (a) the saving on the abolition of the reduced rate contribution, and (b) the numbers contracted-in and contracted out together with their contributions.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1987, c. 195-96]: The information on the distribution of incomes is as follows:

Estimated number of total earned incomes received by persons aged less than 65 by range of income: 1987-88 (Thousands). (United Kingdom).

Range of Total Earned Income (Lower Limit)	Single Persons	Married Couples without wife's Earned Income	Married Couples with wife's Earned Income
£3,000	767	67	51
£4,000	794	106	51
£5,000	981	165	57
£6,000	841	187	65
£7,000	794	210	101
£8,000	642	289	137
£9,000	521	301	203
£10,000	746	698	559
£12,000	453	760	1,009
£15,000	251	488	1,358
£20,000	130	315	1,121
TOTAL	6,919	3,588	4,711

Note: The sum of the components does not necessarily equal the totals because of rounding.

It is estimated that during 1987-88 £14·1 billion will be due from employers and £12·5 billion will be due from employees in respect of Class 1 National Insurance contributions, taking account of the lower contribution rates for those in contracted-out employment. If the upper earnings limit were abolished for employees' Class 1 National Insurance contributions in 1987-88, but retained for the contracted-out rebate, then the full year contributions yield would rise by £0·9 billion.

Assuming that during 1987-88 single persons paid 5 per cent. of earnings above £2,000 and married couples paid 4 per cent. of earnings over £5,000 and that other changes to the contributions system were as described in the hon. Member's earlier questions, then the gross yield from employees' contributions would be £5·3 billion. It is not possible to estimate the effect of the contracted-out rebate in these calculations and this figure therefore compares with an estimated notional gross yield during 1987-88 for primary Class 1 contributions under the existing rates structure of £14·1 billion.

I refer the hon. Member to my replies to him on 25 March 1987 at columns 197-98 for the information on the saving resulting from the abolition of the reduced rate contribution for certain married women and the numbers of contributors who are contracted in and out, and their contributions. Information on the number of married women optants who are in contracted-out and not contracted employments, and their contributions, is presented in my other reply to him today.

All estimates are based on the assumptions used in the Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Uprating (No. 2) Order 1986 and the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) (No. 2) Order 1986 (Cm 24).

Benefits

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what reply he had made concerning representations by CIPFA on the proposed housing benefit reorganisation.

Mr. Lyell: None. CIPFA has made representations on the draft housing benefit regulations and on aspects of future subsidy arrangements for the new scheme. The Secretary of State is required formally to consult only the local authority associations but we have welcomed the many comments and suggestions received informally from CIPFA and other organisations. We are considering them carefully in the context of finalising the details of the new scheme.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what groups within the 1979 family expenditure survey were used to calculate the average expenditure on food, referred to in clause 1736 of the "Guidelines for Supplementary Benefit Officers and Procedural Instructions — Supplementary Benefits" (S Manual) in the calculation of the extra costs of special diets.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume) on 23 March at columns 77-78.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposed to lay regulations for the 1988 housing benefit reforms.

Mr. Major: I shall be writing to the local authority associations shortly.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons previously registering as unemployed and claiming unemployment or supplementary benefit have, in the last 12 months been transferred to sickness benefit claims.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987]: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest year for which figures are available is the year ending 30 March 1985. There were 236,000 spells of sickness starting in that year for which sickness benefit was claimed by people who had previously been unemployed.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions have been held with voluntary organisations concerning the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: On 1 April I met members of the Steering Committee set up by the major voluntary organisations representing disabled people to monitor implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986. We discussed a number of issues relating to the implementation of the Act. Members of the steering committee suggested that voluntary organisations could make a valuable contribution to further consideration of these issues, and asked that they should be given an opportunity to do so. I undertook to consider what they had said, and to write to them as soon as possible suggesting a framework for involving voluntary organisation where appropriate in future work on the implementation of the Act.

Mrs. S. E. Parker

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will investigate the reason why the Cannock Chase district council is not carrying out calculations to ascertain whether Mrs. S. E. Parker of 56 Park View Terrace, Rugeley, Staffordshire, is entitled to housing benefit supplement to enable his Department's Cannock office to ascertain her eligibility for exceptionally cold weather benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Entitlement to housing benefit supplement is first assessed by the relevant local authority who then refer the award to the supplementary benefit office for formal authorisation. The Department's Cannock office has now received and authorised an HBS award for Mrs. Parker and is therefore able to consider her claim for an exceptionally cold weather payment.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have (a) a powered and (b) a non-powered wheelchair on loan from the Department of Health and Social Security at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: At 31 March 1987, 461,806 non-powered wheelchairs and 19,994 powered wheelchairs, were on issue through the Department's wheelchair service. These figures do not accord exactly with the number of people who have a wheelchair on loan because some patients have more than one chair. No central figures of actual patient numbers are available.

Hip Operations

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action has been taken by the North West Thames regional health authority to speed up hip replacement operations; what was the percentage increase in total hip replacements over the period 1980 to 1984; and how this compared with the national increase.

Mr. Newton: The requested information is given in the table.

Estimated number of operations for total hip replacement or other arthroplasty of hip, NHS hospitals

	Estimated number		Percentage change
	1980	1984	1980-84
N W Thames Regional Health Authority	1,770	2,350	+32·8
England	33,420	37,970	+13·6

My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the North West Thames regional health authority for further information on its policy for hip replacement operations.

North West Thames RHA (Finances)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans the North West Thames regional health authority has to invest more money into expanding services for the elderly, mentally handicapped, the mentally ill and the very young; what financial allocation is being made to Hillingdon for 1987-88; and what was the comparable figure for 1986-87.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the North West Thames regional health authority for details of the regional plans for future investment in the services listed, and the allocations to Hillingdon district health authority.

Housing (Greater London)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate in the Official Report the number of dwellings at the disposal of each district health authority in the Greater London area for use by their staffs at the end of 1982 and 1986, respectively.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Family Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the average expenditures per week on food for the following supplementary benefit claimants as recorded by the family expenditure survey of 1979 (a) an adult, (b) a person 16 to 17 years old, (c) a child of 11 to 15 years old, and (d) a child under 11 years old.

Mr. Major: Data in the family expenditure surveys relate to expenditure by the household as a whole and cannot be allocated to individual members, for example dependent children. In the 1979 survey, the average recorded expenditure on food of one-adult households in receipt of supplementary benefit was £8·10. Sample data in respect of 16 to 17-year-old claimants living alone are insufficient to provide a reliable estimate.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out in the Official Report the cost of an average medical bed and, where appropriate, an average surgical bed, per year in (a) the West Middlesex community hospital, (b) the Ashford hospital, (c) Kingston hospital, (d) the Queen Mary's hospital, Roehampton, (e) the Teddington Memorial hospital and (f) St. Mary's hospital, Hampton.

Mr. Newton: Information is not collected centrally in this form. The cost returns submitted by health authorities to the Department show average costs per in-patient day for each hospital but do not distinguish between different categories of beds within hospitals.

In 1985-86 the average cost per in-patient day for the hospitals named was:

West Middlesex Community Hospital	86·01
Ashford Hospital	77·15
Kingston Hospital	100·31
Queen Mary's Hospital, Roehampton	104·47
Teddington Memorial Hospital	47·81
St. Mary's Hospital, Hampton	46·38

Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which district health authorities in the South West Thames and in the North West Thames regions pay under contractual arrangements for beds for those patients who do not need either nursing or medical care in private or voluntary residential or nursing homes; approximately how many beds are so provided by each authority; and if, in the case of each authority, he will state the average cost.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Cunninghame, South claimed the maternity grant in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested.

The Cunninghame, South constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Irvine although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The number of claims for maternity grant received at the Irvine local office during the 1986 calendar year was 1,451.

Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in Cunninghame, South received maternity allowance in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested. But in the 12 months ending April 1986, the latest year for which figures are available, 1,113 claims to maternity allowance were made at the Department's office in Irvine which covers the constituency although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons are waiting for kidney dialysis treatment.

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information is not available centrally. The treatment of individual patients is a matter for the clinical judgment of the doctors concerned.

Health Care (Inequalities)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement of his policy towards social inequalities in health and health care provision.

Mr. Newton: The overall health of the nation has improved steadily amongst all social groups, and the Government have made significant increases in the resources available to the Health Service.

Unhealthy life-styles and unhealthy diets create major risks to health. The prevention of disease and the promotion of good health have always been primary objectives of the Government's health policy. One of the Government's main aims in setting up the new Health Education Authority was to give a greater emphasis to disease prevention and health promotion. We are determined that all social groups, particularly the less well off, should have the information they need to protect their health. The first major campaign of the new authority, in conjunction with the Government, will be directed at coronary heart disease, which particularly affects people from lower socio-economic groups.

The Government remain committed to the principle of allocating health authority resources more fairly across the country using the resource allocation working party's approach. Substantial progress has been made in bringing regions closer to their RAWP targets, and this year no region is more than 4 per cent. below its target. The current review of the RAWP formula is looking, amongst other things, at whether the formula needs to be adjusted to make it more sensitive to the impact of social deprivation. An initial report on the review, published in December, recommended a further programme of research and analysis including further study of measures of the need for health care. This research is now under way.

Well Women Clinics

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about the closure of family planning clinics and well women clinics in north Hertfordshire.

Mr. Newton: We have received eight representations from hon. Members, the North Hertfordshire community health council, and members of the public about the closure of family planning clinics and well women clinics in North Hertfordshire district health authority.

Harefield Hospital

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many patients can be treated in the thoracic medicine ward at Harefield hospital; what part this branch of medicine plays in the cardio-thoracic services provided by the hospital; and how many patients occupying beds in the ward are, on average, resident within the borough of Hillingdon.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of Hillingdon district health authority for information about the thoracic medicine ward at Harefield hospital.

Laurel Lodge Clinic, Hillingdon

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consult the North West Thames regional health authority concerning the resources allocated to Hillingdon district health authority for services provided by the Laurel Lodge Clinic, Harlington Road, Hillingdon; and if he will list the services provided and the degree of priority attached by the authorities concerned to their provision in the future.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend may wish to contact the Chairman of Hillingdon district health authority for details of services provided at this clinic and any plans for its future.

Convalescent Care (Leeds)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure that facilities for convalescent patients at the Grove hospital, Leeds are maintained; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of National Health Service convalescent care within the Leeds West health authority.

Mr. Newton: The level and extent of provision of beds for convalescence is a matter for individual health authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of Leeds western health authority about convalescent care in Leeds western district health authority in general, and specifically provision at the Grove hospital, Leeds. Any proposals to change the current level of provision would require full public consultation in the usual way.

NHS (Convalescent Care)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the level of Government expenditure given to the National Health Service for convalescent care; and what percentage that is of total Government expenditure on the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: Provision for convalescent care is not separately identified in the cash allocations to regional health authorities. The level of funding within the overall resources available is decided by health authorities in the light of national policies and local needs.

For 1985-86, the costing returns submitted by health authorities in England showed total current expenditure on hospitals categorised as pre-convalescent and convalescent as £5·5 million. Figures for expenditure on convalescent care in other hospitals or in the community are not collected centrally.

Blindness and Partial Sight (Certificates)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has taken any decision on the proposals to revise and simplify the form BD8 used for certifying blindness and partial sight.

Mr. Major: I am now able to announce the outcome of the Department's consultation exercise on the revision of the BD8 form. We have decided that the form should be revised along the lines originally proposed by the Department, that is restricted to a simple certificate of blindness/partial sight containing no clinical information. A separate anonymised epidemiological return will be made to central Government.

In reaching this decision we are well aware of the concern of those responsible for follow-up and rehabilitation services for visually handicapped people—particularly social services departments — that they should not be deprived of information through lack of co-operation between the agencies concerned. Detailed inquiries made by the Department in several areas of the country have suggested that co-ordination between local agencies at the critical time when someone is certified as blind or partially sighted, is often not as close as it might be.

In order to improve this situation, and to ensure that service providers receive adequate information, we have decided to establish a working group at national level to consider the principles of collaboration and communication to be observed between the various agencies involved in the provision of rehabilitation services to visually handicapped people. The working group will be chaired by a senior official from the Department, and representatives from health, social services, voluntary and consumer interests will shortly be invited to take part.

While the group will not be considering the content of the BD8 itself, its work will form the basis of guidance to accompany the revised form. The objective of this will be to encourage more effective co-operation between agencies over the way visual handicap is established and follow-up/rehabilitation services are triggered off. The group will be asked to consider what the resource implications of their recommendations might be.

The chairman will be asked to make his report within 6-9 months of the working group being set up. The current BD8 will be discontinued as soon as the working group's guidelines have been disseminated and the recommended procedures can be brought into effect.

The effect of those changes should be to ensure that medical confidentiality is not breached, but that social services departments and other service providers are nevertheless able to obtain the specific information they need in order to provide their respective services in the most effective way.

Family Planning and Pregnancy Counselling Projects

Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Salisbury of 25 July 1986, Official Report, column 742, which district health authorities he has selected to mount the proposed family planning and pregnancy counselling projects for young people under 25 years of age.

Mr. Newton: We have selected projects in City and Hackney, South Sefton and Milton Keynes district health authorities to be supported by central funding until the end of the financial year 1988-89. The projects will be evaluated by Isobel Allen of the Policy Studies Institute.

Residential Care

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive the report of the joint central and local government working party on supplementary benefit and residential care.

Mr. Lyell: I have been informed that the working party now expects to complete its work by the end of May.

Pensions (Investor Protection)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now announced the investor protection arrangements for occupational and personal pensions.

Mr. Major: I have published today a paper setting out our proposals for the investor protection arrangements that will apply to personal pensions and contracted out money purchase occupational pension schemes under the Social Security Act 1986. Copies are available in the Library. The paper is being given a wide circulation to interested parties, and comments are invited by 11 May.

The investor protection proposals confirm that the Government intend to rely wherever practicable on the extensive investor protection regulatory framework provided by the Financial Services Act 1986. The marketing and selling of personal pensions will be subject to rules made under the Act, though separate arrangements are proposed for those types of pension scheme that do not fall within the scope of the Act. Administrative charges for personal pensions will not be controlled, at least for the time being, in the expectation that charges will stabilise at acceptable levels as a result of competition and disclosure.

For completeness, the paper also sets out the Government's proposals on investment controls and disclosure of information. Draft regulations on these subjects have already been published for comment.

In preparing the investor protection framework our aim has been to strike a balance between the need to safeguard scheme members' interests on the one hand and the necessity of ensuring that effective competition between pension providers is not hampered by over-regulation. We believe the balance is right, and I am glad to acknowledge the invaluable assistance we have received from members of the group convened by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to advise us on these matters.

SERPS (Rights)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he is making to inform people of the build-up of their rights in the state earnings-related pension scheme.

Mr. Major: I am pleased to say that, as promised in our White Paper "Reform of Social Security", we have launched a new service which will provide people, on request, with a personal statement of the value of their additional pension rights built up in the state earnings-related pension scheme. The statement will also include, where possible, estimates of how much additional pension the person might expect to earn by state pension age if he or she continues earning and remains in SERPS. We hope that this information will be helpful to people who may be considering taking out a personal pension. Application forms for this new service are in leaflet NP38 which can be obtained from the Department's local offices.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was (a) the overall and (b) the per capita spending on health each year since 1979 in the United Kingdom, the United States of America, France and West Germany; and what percentage of each country's gross domestic product the overall spending represented.

Mr. Newton: The tables give the available information in respect of both total health spending, including that undertaken privately, and of public expenditure on health.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest figures available for the percentage of gross domestic product spent on health, health expenditure per head of population, number of practising doctors per 100,000 of the population and hospital beds per 1,000 population for the United Kingdom; and what information is available on comparable figures in Germany, France, the Netherlands, Denmark, Belgium, Italy, Luxembourg, Ireland, Greece, Spain, Portugal, and the EEC on average, the United States of America and Sweden.

Mr. Norris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the real growth in the United Kingdom in each year between 1978 and the latest year for which information is available of (a) total health spending per head and (b) public health spending per head; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for other member states in the European Economic Community and for Sweden and the United States of America.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1987, c. 302]: The table shows the information requested so far as this is readily available. International comparisons of this kind are affected by different definitions of what constitutes health care and the relative costs of health care. These differences and many others mean that precise comparisons cannot be made.

Drugs and Medicines

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to increase the conspicuousness of warning labels on those drugs which, when taken in combination with alcohol increase the risks of driving a motor vehicle.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 26 January 1987, c.927]: The Transport and Road Research Laboratory is at present carrying out a long-term research study into this complex question of causal links between medication and road accidents in collaboration with the national poisons centre at New Cross hospital. When the results are available, the Government will consider whether they should propose amendments to the Medicines (Labelling) Regulations. At present these Regulations require explicit warnings not to drive or operate machinery, and to avoid alcohol, on the labels of those anti-histamine medicines which are obtainable without a doctors' prescription; for prescription medicines the data sheets advise doctors of the particular precautions, warnings, and contra-indications, with a view to appropriate advice being given to the individual. Proposals to amend the Regulations would, under Section 129(6) of the Medicines Act, require consultations with those concerned, including the health professions and the pharmaceutical industry.

The Government will, of course, continue to stress the risk to drivers of alcohol itself.

Occupational Therapists

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what new funds are being allocated for occupational therapists' training to overcome the current shortage in qualified people to fill all the funded posts;

(2) how many funded positions for occupational therapists in the National Health Service and local authorities are at present vacant due to shortage of applicants.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1987 c. 211]: The results of the most recent sample survey by health authorities suggest that nationally just under 13 per cent. of funded posts for occupational therapists were unfilled after three months at 31 March 1986. For information on numbers of vacancies in social service authorities I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 2 December 1986 at column 624.

Pensions (Benefits)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioners, and what percentage have

(i) other state benefits than retirement pensions, (ii) occupational pensions, (iii) state earning related pensions and (iv) income from savings which is in each case (a) £0 to £5 per week, (b) £5 to £10 per week, (c) £10 to £20 per week, (d) £20 to £30 per week, (e) £30 to £40 per week, (f) £40 to £50 per week, (g) £50 to £60 per week, (h) £60 to £70 per week, (i) £70 to £80 per week, (j) £80 to £90 per week, (k) £90 to £100 per week and (l) more than £100 per week.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1987, c. 259]: The available information is shown in the tables. In Table 1, information on receipt of benefit other than retirement pensions, on occupational pensions and on savings is derived from the Family Expenditure Survey for 1985. It relates to numbers of pensioner tax units, which may be either single pensioners or married couples where the husband is aged 65 or over. It is not possible to include supplementary pension in those figures. Table 2 expresses the information in Table 1 as a percentage of all pensioner tax units. Table 3 shows the numbers of pensioner households in receipt of supplementary pension who are also in receipt of basic retirement pension, by level of supplementary pension received. These figures are for December 1984. They exclude households in receipt of supplementary pension who did not receive basic retirement pension (about 105,000), but include widows over 60 who have chosen to retain widows' pension. It is not possible to express these figures accurately as a percentage of all pensioners because of differences in the dates for which statistics are available. Table 4 shows the numbers and percentages of individual pensioners receiving state earnings-related pension, at those levels for which information is available for September 1986. These figures are for net additional pension; they exclude guaranteed minimum pension, but include amounts of additional pension payable as a result of uprating to recipients of guaranteed minimum pensions.

Medicines

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures he is taking to foster competition between drug manufacturing companies in the provision of medicines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 657]: The Department encourages price competition in the supply of generic medicines to the National Health Service. For patented, branded medicines, to which normal market price competition does not generally apply, we operate a scheme to regulate the maximum level of profit which individual companies can achieve overall from supplying medicines to the National Health Service.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider whether the system of licensing and approving new improved drugs could be assisted by encouraging limited trials within the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 657]: Most clinical trials conducted during the development of a new medicine already take place in the National Health Service. The extent of such trials must depend upon the nature of the information about the use of the medicine in patients that is required. Clinical trials are conducted in accordance with the Medicines Act 1968 and European legislation and are expected to take account of guidelines issued by the United Kingdom licensing authority and the European Community. The licensing authority, advised by expert scientific committees, must consider the safety, quality and efficacy of a medicine before licensing a medicinal product.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consult with doctors on whether further opportunities exist to reduce the number of drugs available on the limited list; if he will further consider the effects of such a reduction on patient care; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 657]: The advisory committee on National Health Service drugs gives advice on the medicines which should be available for prescription under the National Health Service in the seven therapeutic categories covered by the selected list scheme, and we have no plans for consulting on their advice.

Health Education Council

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons who worked for the Health Education Council have resigned, or given notice of resignation, since Her Majesty's Government made clear their intention to abolish the Health Education Council; what positions they held; and what percentage they represent of staff at each occupational grade.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1987 c. 306]: In the four months following the announcement to reconstitute the Council, 16 members of staff resigned. The resignations represented 25 per cent. of managerial, 16 per cent. of professional and 23 per cent. of support staff. The positions held were:

Audio copy typists (2)
Assistant director (Professional Development)
Assistant secretary
Clerk
Executive assistant
Film and broadcast officer
Liaison assistant
Liaison officer
Personal assistants (3)
Publication officers (2)
Research officers (2)

It should however be noted that resignations from the HEC staff, which averaged about one or two per quarter until the spring of 1986, rose sharply to 7 in the April-June 1986 quarter and 5 in the June-September 1986 quarter, and appeared to be maintained at a higher average level than formerly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Spearing asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will tabulate in the Official Report for each of the Sessions 1979-80 onward and the Session 1986 to date, the number of pages of statute relating to the powers and finances of local authorities in (a) England and Wales and (b) Scotland and the approximate time spent in proceedings of the House (i) in Standing Committees and (ii) on the Floor in each Session, itemised as convenient by the principal items of legislation.

Mr. Biffen: The information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

"Official Report"

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Lord Privy Seal why there is a considerable delay in the publication of the bound volumes of the Official Report; and when he anticipates that the issues will be brought up to date.

Mr. Biffen: The bound volume is published by HMSO and printed at HMSO Hansard Press, which also has responsibility for production of the daily part. While the House is sitting, priority is necessarily given to the latter.

At present the bound volume is published five to six months after the relevant daily part. Alternative methods are currently being considered which should lead to some improvement in the speed of production. However, because of the various stages involved (copy preparation, text amendment, indexing, printing and binding), bound volumes are never likely to be produced within four months of the date of publication of the daily part.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Alexander asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the three documents referred to in his answer of 28 October 1986, Official Report, column 114, containing proposals which were adopted by the European Community Council of Ministers before the House had debated them.

Mr. Biffen: The information requested is as follows:

European Community documents 10697/84 and 10171/84, on the conservation of fishery resources and total allowable fish catches for 1985, respectively, and an unnumbered explanatory memorandum on heat treated milk, dated 26 June 1985.

European Community Legislation

Mr. Alexander asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list all the European Community documents brought before the House in 1985 and referred to in his answer of 28 October 1986, Official Report, column 84.

Mr. Biffen: The titles of European Community documents laid before the House are published in the House of Commons "Weekly Information Bulletin", copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. John O'Sullivan

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister in what capacity Mr. John O'Sullivan has been employed in her office; whether his appointment has been subject to approval by the Civil Service Commission; what terms and conditions apply to his appointment; and if his salary will be paid out of public funds.

The Prime Minister: Mr. John O'Sullivan is employed as a special adviser in the policy unit in my Office. He is employed on the standard terms applied to special advisers. The approval of the Civil Service Commission is not required, and in common with all such appointments his salary is met from public funds.

HOME DEPARTMENT

"Legislating for Change"

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a statement on the consultative document "Legislating for Change," published by the Equal Opportunities Commission, and on which comments were requested by 28 February.

Mr. Waddington: We are not proposing to make a statement on this document because it is a consultative paper issued by the Equal Opportunities Commission to help it decide what proposals to put to the Government for changes in the law. Together with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment we will consider how to respond when we receive the commission's report setting out its considered proposals for change and have been able to consider it.

Monzur-Al-Kassar

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the state of police investigations of Monzur-Al-Kassar for arms and drugs offences.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that Monzur-Al-Kassar is not being investigated by the police.

Prison Population

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of unconvicted inmates in prisons in England and Wales on 31 March.

Mr. Mellor: On 31 March 1987 about 8,770 untried and 330 non-criminal prisoners were in prison department establishments in England and Wales.

Mr. Viraj Mendis

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Manchester about violence and damage caused in the vicinity of the Church of the Ascension, Royce road, Hume, Manchester, in connection with Mr. Viraj Mendis.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The chief constable informs me that two incidents have been reported to the police. On 9 March a group of people entered the church and engaged in scuffles with supporters of Mr. Viraj Mendis, one of whom sustained minor injuries. Six men were later arrested on suspicion of assault, but as none was positively identified all were released without charge. On 10 March a woman living nearby informed the police that she had been attacked on her way home. The matter has been investigated by the police, but so far the alleged assailants have not been traced.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received in respect of the proposed removal of Viraj Mendis, a Sri Lankan currently staying in the United Kingdom (a) from hon. Members and (b) from others.

Mr. Waddington: By 13 April 1987, 48 hon. and right hon. Members and four Members in another place had made representations. More than 800 other letters have been received about the case, as well as two petitions and about 1,500 proforma postcards.

Visa Applications

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many Indian citizens have applied for visas at the British deputy high commission, Bombay, by month, since 15 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of these applications were (i) granted, (ii) refused and (iii) referred to further inquiries, by category of applicant; and how many of those applications in each category were dealt with by post and how many required personal interview;

(2) how many Indian citizens have applied for visas at the British high commission, New Delhi, by month since 15 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of these applications were (1) granted, (2) refused and (3) deferred for further inquiries, by category of applicant; and how many of these applications in each category were (i) dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview;

(3) how many Bangladeshi citizens have applied for visas in Dhaka, by month since 15 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of these applications were (i) dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview; and how many of these applications were (1) granted, (2) refused and (3) deferred for further inquiries, by category of applicant;

(4) how many Pakistani citizens have applied for visas at the British embassy, Islamabad, by month since 15 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of those applications in each category (i) were dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview; and how many of these applications were (1) granted, (2) refused and (3) deferred to further inquiries, by category of applicant;

(5) how many Pakistani citizens have applied for visas at the British consulate, Karachi, by month since 15 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of those applicants in each category (i) were dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview; and how many of those applications were (1) granted, (2) refused and (3) deferred for further inquiries, by category of applicant.

Mr. Waddington: The information available centrally is given in the following table.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for visas have been made at the British high commission in Lagos since 11 February; how many of these applications were (a) granted, (b) refused and (c) deferred for further inquiries, by category of applicant; and how many of those applications in each category were dealt with by post and how many required personal interview;

(2) How many Nigerian citizens applied for visas at the British high commission in Lagos from 1 February 1987 until the visa office was closed; and how many of these were for (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many visas have been issued in Lagos in urgent compassionate cases since 11 February; and how many of those applications in each category (i) were dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview.

Mr. Waddington: Provisional information indicates that about 2,200 applications for visas were received in Lagos in the two weeks ending 14 February 1987; about 1,800 applications were granted and 120 refused. In the following two weeks 60 applications were granted and fewer than five were refused. The other information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long each of the 51 people, whose cases are currently being considered, and who applied for visas at the British high commission, Colombo, on the grounds that they were suffering severe hardship, waited before a decision was made on their application; when each of the 14 people whose applications for visas on the grounds of severe hardship in Colombo are still under consideration applied for these visas, and what guidance has been issued to the staff at the British high commission in Colombo as to the criteria to be used in deciding on applications for visas on the ground of severe hardship.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Ghanaian citizens have applied for visas at the British high commission, Accra, by month since 23 October 1986, as (a) visitors, (b) students, (c) settlement and (d) others; how many of those applications in each category (i) were dealt with by post and (ii) required personal interview; and how many of these applications were (1) granted, (2) refused and (3) deferred for further inquiries, by category of applicant.

Immigration

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the 80 unsuccessful applications for entry clearance from female fiancées in the Indian subcontinent were refused (a) wholly and (b) partly because the entry clearance officer was not satisfied that the primary purpose of the marriage was not immigration.

Mr. Waddington: Of the 80 female fiancées refused entry clearance in the Indian subcontinent in 1986, 10 were refused solely on the ground that the primary purpose of the marriage was to obtain admission to the United Kingdom and 10 were refused partly on that ground.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the (a) 480 unsuccessful applications from husbands and (b) 1,000 unsuccessful applications from male fiancés for entry clearance in the Indian subcontinent in 1986 were refused (a) wholly and (b) partly because the entry clearance officer was not satisfied that the primary purpose of the marriage was not immigration.

Mr. Waddington: Of the 480 husbands and 1,000 male fiancés refused in the Indian subcontinent in 1986, 430 of the husbands and 840 of the male fiancés were refused solely on the grounds that the primary purpose of the marriage was to obtain admission to the United Kingdom, and 20 of the husbands and 120 of the male fiancés were refused partly on these grounds.

Tamils

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with representatives of the Government of Sri Lanka concerning (a) the fate of Tamils returned to Sri Lanka who have been refused entry to other countries in Europe and elsewhere and (b) the situation of Viraj Mendis, a Sri Lankan currently staying in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: When I met President Jayewardene and the Minister for National Security on 13 April I was given an assurance that no Sri Lankan national returning to Sri Lanka need fear for his treatment at the hands of the Sri Lankan authorities. Unless wanted on a criminal charge, they would be allowed free and unrestricted entry and freedom to go about their business.

US Service Men

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables in England into the number of illegal acts by United States service men stationed in the United Kingdom and reported to the police but in relation to which no action was taken because of immunity under the Visiting Forces Act.

Mr. Mellor: The Visiting Forces Act 1952 does not grant any general immunity from United Kingdom legal process. In certain cases it permits the authorities of a visiting force to exercise primary jurisdiction; but if those authorities do not deal with the case under their law, any offence against United Kingdom law remains open to prosecution in our courts.

We have received no reports from United States forces on this matter, although there is liaison at local level with the police. We do not think it necessary to ask the police to record specially, and report to the Home Office, offences alleged to have been committed by members of the United States forces.

Nigerian Citizens (Entry Refusal)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Nigerian citizens seeking entry as (a) visitors and (b) students were refused entry at Heathrow airport in each month from 1 September 1986 to 1 February 1987; and how many of those had obtained a visa before travelling.

Mr. Waddington: The available information relates to the number of Nigerian citizens arriving at Heathrow airport who were removed, after being refused entry, in the months of September 1986 to January 1987 inclusive and of those the number who had a work permit or entry clearance. Visitors and students cannot be separately identified in these figures. Citizens of Nigeria were not subject to an overall requirement to obtain entry clearance before travelling to the United Kingdom until 1 February 1987.

Citizens of Nigeria refused leave to enter and removed at Heathrow Airport, September 1986 to January 1987

Overseas Voters

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the issue of overseas voters registration forms to (a) political parties, (b) voluntary organisations and (c) other bodies; what guidance he gives to such bodies concerning matter sent out with such forms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our policy is to make overseas electors' declaration forms as widely available as possible to political parties, voluntary organisations and other bodies. We would not wish these bodies, apart from party political organisations, to distribute the forms with party political material, and we are reviewing the need for guidance to be given to that effect. We are aware of only one case where this has occurred.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what complaints he has received concerning alleged abuses of procedures for the registration of overseas voters.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Apart from the complaint by the hon. and learned Member in his letter to me of 8 March, none.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have so far applied for registration as overseas voters; in which countries; in respect of which constituencies; and by what means such forms were made available to them.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The table has been prepared by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the basis of information from posts abroad. It shows the total number of people whose applications for registration as an overseas elector in the 1987 register have been attested by consular or other authorised staff, and the country in which the application was attested.

Information is not available on the constituencies in respect of which applications were made. However, I am sending to the hon. Member a table prepared by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys from returns made by electoral registration officers, which provides this information in respect of overseas electors whose names are included on the 1987 electoral register. There is no record of the means by which each overseas elector obtained a declaration form, but we expect that most forms were obtained from British posts abroad.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Paddy Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Somerset in relation to emergency preparedness for a civil nuclear disaster at Hinkley Point power station, as to whether any time estimates have been made for (i) the evacuation of the population, (ii) the evacuation of high-risk groups, (iii) the evacuation of low mobility groups and (iv) the distribution of potassium iodate tablets to the population, within 10 miles of Hinkley Point in each case.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply.

The precautions taken in the design and construction of nuclear installations in this country, and the very high safety standards applied in operating and maintaining them, make it highly unlikely that accidents will occur which might significantly affect the public. But however remote the risks, all operators of nuclear installations are required by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive, as a condition of its site licences, to prepare emergency plans, including those for dealing with an accidental release of radioactivity. The same requirement also applies to the sites of the Atomic Energy Authority.

These plans, on which the police and other involved bodies must be consulted, are tested regularly in exercises monitored by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate. They cover both emergency procedures at the site and offsite arrangements to protect the public, including monitoring up to 40 km. and evacuation up to 1 km. for later magnox and AGR stations and 1·5 miles for earlier magnox stations. These plans are capable of extension in the improbable event of this proving necessary, but the HSE does not consider that detailed plans covering a wider area are justified. It believes that a balance needs to be struck between detailed plans that are sufficiently extensive to cope with a serious accident and the unjustified use of resources involved in planning for improbable accidents. This approach was specifically endorsed by Sir Frank Layfield in his report on Sizewell. It follows that the specific calculations and assessments sought have not been made.

In an announcement on 18 December following the first stage of a thorough review of existing plans and procedures in the light of experience of the Chernobyl accident, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister concluded that existing plans continue to provide a valid basis for the response to any accident in the United Kingdom. In announcing his consent to the planning application for Sizewell B, the Secretary of State accepted the Layfield report's recommendations relating to emergency planning. These will be taken fully into account in the continuing work on the Government review.

The duties and responsibilities of police forces are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Bilingual Forms

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend regulation 11 of the Registration of Births, Still-births and Deaths (Welsh Language) Regulations 1969 so as to enable a registrar to write the Welsh equivalent of the words contained in a coroner's certificate when drawing up a death certificate.

Mrs. Currie: I have been asked to reply.

No. The Registration of Births, Still-births and Deaths (Welsh Language) Regulations 1969 provide for a death in Wales upon which an inquest has been held to be registered in Welsh as well as in English where the coroner's certificate has been completed in both languages. The registrar is required to copy the particulars contained in the certificate precisely as they are stated therein. In this respect as with all registrations, responsibility for the accuracy of the particulars required to be registered remains with the person who provides the information and there are no plans to change this general principle.

WALES

Core Curriculum

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes a core curriculum for schools in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Clwyd, North-West (Sir A. Meyer) on 9 April, at column 371, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Higher Education (Part-time Students)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total full-time equivalent number of part-time students in higher education in Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The available information, in respect of part-time students at the University of Wales and student enrolments on advanced courses at colleges of further and higher education in Wales, is as follows:

Academic Year	Number[1] (Full-time equivalent)
1979-80	2,178
1980-81	2,357
1981-82	2,430
1982-83	2,433
1983-84	2,496
1984-85	2,528
1985-86	2,813

[1] Including evening only enrolments.

School Closures

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by local education authority, the number of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Wales which have closed since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Comprehensive information in the form requested is not available. A figure for the total number of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools closed could be misleading since many closures occur as part of wider schemes of reorganisation or amalgamation which can incorporate the establishment of new schools. During the period January 1979 to January 1987 there was a net reduction of 168 maintained primary schools and a net reduction of 10 maintained secondary schools in Wales. (These are provisional figures). The breakdown by local education authority is as follows:

	Primary	Secondary
Clwyd	−15	−1
Dyfed	−31	−2
Gwent	−47	−7
Gwynedd	−2	0
Mid Glamorgan	−7	+1

Handicapped Pupils (Ancillary Staff)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table giving the numbers of ancillary staff provided in schools in Wales by local education authorities to look after the special needs of handicapped pupils for each year since 1981.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The numbers of nursing, child care and other ancillary staff in special schools, as at September of each year, are given in the following table. Comparable information in respect of ancillary staff catering for pupils with special needs in primary and secondary schools is not collected centrally.

Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing expenditure per pupil in both cash and current price terms for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools for each local authority in Wales for 1979, 1983 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is given in the following tables.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Capital Receipts and Allocations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give figures for the latest convenient year of (a) the level of capital receipts and (b) the level of capital allocations for each local education authority in Britain expressed on a per student basis.

Mr. Dunn: The latest year for which information is available is 1985-86. The figures for England are given in the table. Allocations are not made on a per student basis: instead my right hon. Friend takes account of a number of factors which reflect varying needs in different local authorities' areas. These include the need to provide additional school places in areas of population growth and the distribution of institutions providing advanced further education.

Local authorities in Scotland and Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends and the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Notes: The number of students includes all those attending a maintained school (either full-time or part-time) in January 1986 plus all students (either full-time or part-time) enrolled on a course of further or higher education in November 1985. The allocations are those announced before the start of the financial year and do not include additional allocations made later to some authorities.

n.a.—The authority has not made a return.

Council of Europe and Western Union

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to make available to children of school age information on United Kingdom participation in the Council of Europe and Western European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. He hopes, however, that where opportunity to do so arises in the school curriculum, pupils' understanding of the United Kingdom's relationships with its European neighbours including the functions and work of the European Community, the Council of Europe and the Western Union will be developed as part of the process of learning about political processes and economic matters.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of his Department's advertising and promotional budget is spent on regional or local newspaper advertising; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Regional/local newspaper advertising accounted for 3 per cent. of the total promotional budget and 6·2 per cent. of advertising spending.

Students (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish a consultative document on the ethnic minority of students applying for higher and further education.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is hoped to circulate a consultative paper which will address the issues and options for the collection of ethnically-based statistics for students in public sector further and higher education. It is the Department's intention also to open discussions with the central clearing houses about monitoring the applications process for public sector higher education.

Schoolchildren (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish a consultative document on the ethnic monitoring of schoolchildren.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 20 March at column 632.

Teachers (Industrial Action)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will conduct a survey of local education authorities to establish which ones deducted pay from teachers who have taken part in industrial action in the current year; and what proportion of pay was generally deducted.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Department has asked local education authorities for this information. In all cases where information has been confirmed, authorities intend to deduct half a day's pay from each teacher who took part in the series of half-day strike rallies.

Primary School Staff (Guidelines)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recommendations and guidelines his Department issues to local education authorities regarding the numbers of staff in primary schools which cater for children who are (a) physically handicapped and (b) highly intelligent and have special needs under the Education Act 1981.

Mr. Dunn: Current guidance on staffing in special schools and classes in England is set out in the Department's circular 4/73. This gives advice to local education authorities on standards for schools for different handicaps, including the physically handicapped. It does not, however, specifically cover children who are highly intelligent and have special needs under the Education Act 1981. This guidance is at present under review. I shall send the hon. Member a copy of circular 4/73.

Engineering Students

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 9 March, Official Report, column 24, what discussions he has had with the higher education planning bodies about more university places for engineering students.

Mr. Walden: Officials of the Department are in regular contact with the relevant funding bodies about higher education places in engineering as on other matters, and will be discussing specifically the possibilities for increasing the availability of manufacturing systems engineering courses.

Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the number of classes of 31 pupils and over in England as a percentage of the total number of classes in (a) the maintained primary sector and (b) the maintained secondary sector for every year since 1979.

Mr. Dunn: The number of classes with 31 pupils and over as a percentage of all classes in maintained primary and secondary schools in England each year since 1979 is as follows. The analyses relate to classes taught by one teacher on a selected period within the day of the census count in January of each year and may not, therefore, be representative of the pattern of classes over the academic year as a whole.

January each year	Primary schools[1]	Secondary schools[1]
1979	27·4	10·3
1980	23·6	8·9
1981	22·6	8·4
1982	21·6	7·9

1985	19·4	7·0
1986	20·2	6·3

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.

Accommodation

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information has been received by his Department in recent years regarding capital expenditure bids for projects including the removal of surplus school places, as to whether the proposed new or modified accommodation will meet the requirements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 in force after 1 September 1991; whether any such information concerns the cost of works to meet such requirements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Local authorities are not required, in submitting their overall plans for capital expenditure on schools to the Department, to say whether proposed new or modified accommodation will meet the requirements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information has been received by his Department in recent years, regarding schemes for school closures or amalgamations, as to whether the proposed new or modified accommodation will meet the requirements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 in force after 1 September 1991; whether any such information concerns the cost of works to meet such requirements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Under the current arrangements for the approval of individual major school building projects, local education authorities certify that the work planned will conform to the requirements of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981. For most projects authorities submit cost details to the Department on a voluntary basis, but there are more detailed arrangements for the submission of costs relating to projects at voluntary aided schools and projects costing £2 million or more at county and controlled schools.

Governors' Reports

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidance he has issued to local education authorities about responsibility for payment for the circulation of governors' reports under the Education (No. 2) Act 1986; and what information he has about the number of governors who are paying for such reports out of capitation fees.

Mr. Dunn: The Department has not issued any guidance to local education authorities on this matter. Nor does it collect information about the local arrangements for funding governors' annual reports and their distribution.

School Openings and Closures

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools (a) opened and (b) closed in the years 1974 to 1978 and in the years 1979 to 1987 in (i) Yorkshire and Humberside and (ii) Barnsley metropolitan district area.

Mr. Dunn: Information is not available in precisely the form requested. The table shows the number of schools to be established (including establishment by amalgamation) and closed under proposals approved by my right hon. Friend or determined by LEAs, in the period from August 1980, when the Education Act 1980 came into force, and March 1987.

Area	Number of schools to be established	Number of schools to be closed
Yorkshire and Humberside (excluding Barnsley)	85	154
Barnsley	10	11

Mixed Schools

Dame Peggy Fenner asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information has been compiled by his Department about the relative disadvantages experienced by girls in some subjects in mixed schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information compiled by the Department of Education and Science about the relative disadvantages experienced by girls in some subjects in mixed schools is contained in the following publications:

Education Survey 21: Curricular Differences for Boys and Girls (HMSO 1975).

Aspects of Secondary Education in England (HMSO 1979).

A Review of Monitoring in Mathematics (DES 1986).

Statistical Bulletin 13/86: Statistics of School Leavers in England—January 1985 (DES November 1986).

The Government are committed to the promotion of equal opportunities in schools and to the need to encourage girls in those areas of the curriculum such as science and CDT where there is evidence of sex-related differences in achievement. My right hon. Friend believes that his proposals for a national curriculum will do much to ensure that girls follow a broad and balanced curriculum to the age of 16 which includes those subjects in which they have traditionally been under represented.

Birkbeck College

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will have urgent discussions with the University Grants Committee and London University about the funding of Birkbeck college for 1987-88 and the following two years; and what assessment he has made of the implications for future funding requirements of the proposals contained in the Government's White Paper on higher education.

Mr. Walden: The funding of Birkbeck college is a matter for the University Grants Committee and the University of London. The implications for future funding requirements of the Government's proposals in "Higher Education: Meeting the Challenge" (Cm. 114) are set out in paragraph 1.8 of that White Paper.

Central Electricity Generating Board (Booklets)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about a booklet entitled "Nuclear Know-How—with an element of truth", being circulated by the south-eastern region of the Central Electricity Board to schools; what information he has from elsewhere in the United Kingdom about the circulation of similar booklets to schools by the Central Electricity Generating Board; whether the Central Electricity Generating Board consulted his Department on the content of the booklet and its circulation to schools; what efforts he is making to ensure schools receive information from those who oppose nuclear energy and favour alternative sources of energy; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No representations have been received about this booklet. I understand that the Electricity Council circulates annually to all schools a catalogue of materials and resources and that "Nuclear Know-How" is one of the titles listed. The booklet is sent to schools only if they request it. The Central Electricity Generating Board did not consult the Department of Education and Science on the content of the booklet or its circulation; nor was it necessary to do so. It is open to those who oppose nuclear energy to make information of their own available to schools.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the percentage of students attending universities and polytechnics in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, who were educated at independent schools.

Mr. Walden: The percentage of students from England and Wales accepted through the Universities Central Council on Admissions and who had previously attended independent schools is shown in the following table. Information for polytechnics from the Polytechnic Central Admissions System, collected for the first time for 1986, is not yet available.

United Kingdom Universities: accepted candidates domiciled in England & Wales who had previously attended independent[1] schools.

A-level Statistics

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the percentage of pupils attaining grades A, B and C, respectively, at A-level in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, who were educated at independent schools.

Mr. Dunn: Information for the academic year 1985-86 is not yet available. In 1984-85, 36 per cent. of English school leavers with a grade A pass at GCE A-level, 28.6 per cent. with a grade B pass and 25.5 per cent. with a grade C left from independent schools. Data in this form are not readily available for earlier years.

Sixth Form Places

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the percentage of sixth form places in each of the years from 1978 to 1986, inclusive, which came from the independent sector.

Mr. Dunn: Information on sixth form places is not collected centrally. The percentages of school pupils (excluding special schools) aged 16 and over who were in independent schools in England in the years 1978 to 1986 were as follows:

January each year	per cent
1978	17·9
1979	17·9
1980	18·3

O-level Statistics

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the percentage of pupils attaining five or more O-levels in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, who were educated at independent schools.

Mr. Dunn: The proportions of English school leavers with five or more higher grades at O-level/CSE who left from independent schools are as shown. Information for 1985-86 is not yet available.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the percentage of boarding places in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, which came from (a) the independent sector and (b) the maintained sector;

(2) if he will publish the number of boarding places in each of the years 1978 to 1986, inclusive, in (a) the independent sector and (b) the maintained sector.

Mr. Dunn: The numbers of boarding places are not collected, but the numbers of full-time boarders and the percentage of pupils who are boarders in the maintained and non-maintained sectors for each of the years 1978 to 1986 inclusive are given in the following table.

	Boarding Pupils

Boarding Education

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any proposals to increase the availability of boarding education; and if he will state the Government's policy on independent schools having charitable status.

Mr. Dunn: The Government have no proposals at present to increase the availability of boarding education. Nor have they any plans to alter the arrangements whereby certain independent schools enjoy the benefits of charitable status.

Voluntary Aided Schools

Sir George Young asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of bids for minor work allocation in voluntary aided schools have been successful.

Mr. Dunn: The allocations made to local education authorities in 1987-88 for capital expenditure in their areas by the governors of voluntary aided and special agreement schools included in most cases an element for minor works costing less than £120,000. It is for individual authorities, in consultation with the voluntary bodies, to decide how to use this element.

Plans for minor works totalling £22·9 million were submitted by authorities. The total allocations for such works were £4·215 million which represents 18 per cent. of those plans.

Professor Colin Blakemore

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if Professor Colin Blakemore has received any support from the Medical Research Council since 1976.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 6 April 1987, c. 56]: I understand from the Medical Research Council that Professor Colin Blakemore has received 16 grants from the council since 1976.

ENERGY

Uranium

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the quantity of stocks of depleted uranium held by BNFL at (a) Sellafield, (b) Capenhurst and (c) Springfields.

Mr. Goodlad: The quantity of depleted uranium resulting from the reprocessing of civil magnox fuel and the operations of enrichment plants for civil purposes and stored by BNFL is as follows:

	Uranium tonnes
Sellafield	300
Capenhurst	16,000
Springfields	5,000

A further 5,200 tonnes are held at Chapelcross. All this depleted uranium is subject to international safeguards.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of his Department's advertising and promotional budget is spent on regional and local newspaper advertising.

Mr. Peter Walker: During 1986-87 the Department of Energy spent £149,400 on regional and local press advertising, £137,000 on local radio and £310,000 on specialist trade and technical magazines.

In total these figures represent 10 per cent. of the Department's spend through the COI.

Oil and Gas Developments

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many field development approvals there have been for (a) oil and (b) gas in each month since January 1986.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The following projects have been approved between January 1986 and March 1987:

	Date

[1] Incremental project, that is further development within petroleum revenue tax areas of existing fields.

Colliery Closures

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the number of colliery and related workshop closures, and the number of jobs lost, for each year from 1974 (a) nationally, (b) in the Yorkshire and Humberside area and (c) in Barnsley metropolitan district council area.

Mr. David Hunt: I have asked the chairman of the British Coal Corporation to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he has taken to inplement recommendation 13 of the Sizewell B report regarding the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel and the handling of plutonium.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 8.30 of my right hon. Friend's letter of 12 March 1987 to the chairman of the CEGB giving consent to the construction of Sizewell B, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Discussions are taking place on the publication of records relating to future plutonium production from United Kingdom civil reactors.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of North Wales as to, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Wylfa (a) what evacuation time estimates have been prepared for the evacuation of the most populated 22½ deg. sector from the power station out to (i) five miles and (ii) 10 miles; (b) what time estimates have been prepared for the evacuation of the population within (i) five miles, and (ii) 10 miles of the power station; and if he will arrange for the basis and calculations of such estimates to be placed in the Library; nuclear disaster at Hartlepool, any time estimates have been made for the evacuation of low-mobility groups from Sunderland, Newcastle and Tynemouth;

(6) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Tyne and Wear as to whether, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Hartlepool, any time estimates have been made for the evacuation of high-risk groups from Sunderland, Newcastle and Tynemouth;

(7) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Durham as to whether, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Hartlepool, any time estimates have been made for the evacuation of high-risk groups from Darlington and Durham;

(8) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Durham as to whether, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Hartlepool, any time estimates have been prepared for the evacuation of low-mobility groups from Darlington and Durham;

(9) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Durham as to whether, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Hartlepool, any time estimates have been prepared for the distribution of potassium iodate tablets to the populations of Darlington and Durham.

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Berkeley, Oldbury or Hinkley Point, what time estimates have been made for the evacuation of the population of Newport; and if he will call for the basis and calculation of such time estimates to be placed in the Library;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to, in the event of a civil nuclear disaster at Berkeley, Oldbury or Hinkley Point (i) what time estimates have been prepared for the evacuation of high-risk groups from Newport, (ii) what time estimates have been made for the evacuation of low-mobility groups from Newport and (iii) what time estimates have been made for the distribution of potassium iodate tablets to the population of Newport; and if he will call for the basis and calculation of such time estimates to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Lancashire concerning emergency preparedness for a civil nuclear disaster at Heysham with particular reference to (i) time estimates for the evacuation of the most populated 22½ deg sector from the power station out to (a) five miles and (b) 10 miles, (ii) time estimates for the evacuation of the population within (a) five miles and (b) 10 miles of the power station, (iii) time estimates for the evacuation of the population of (a) Lancaster, (b) Blackpool, (c) South Ribble, (d) Burnley, (e) Chorley and (f) Southport, (iv) time estimates for the evacuation of high-risk groups at those centres of population, (v) time estimates for the evacuation of low-mobility groups at those centres of population and (vi) time estimates for the distribution of potassium iodate tablets to the populations of those centres of population; and if he will arrange for the basis, and calculations underlying these estimates to be placed in the Library;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Greater Manchester concerning the emergency preparedness for a civil nuclear disaster at Heysham, with particular reference to (a) time estimates for the evacuation of high-risk groups from Manchester, (b) time estimates for the evacuation of low-mobility groups from Manchester and (c) time estimates for the distribution of potassium iodate tablets to the population of Manchester; and if he will arrange for the data and calculations on which any such estimates are based to be placed in the Library;

(3) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Merseyside concerning the emergency preparedness for a civil nuclear disaster at Heysham, with particular reference to time estimates for the evacuation of the population of (a) St. Helens and (b) Liverpool; and if he will place in the Library the basis and calculation underlying those time estimates;

(4) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Cumbria concerning the emergency preparedness for a nuclear accident at Calder Hall with particular reference to (i) time estimates for the evacuation of the most populated 22½ deg sector from the power station out to (a) five miles and (b) 10 miles, (ii) time estimates for the evacuation of the population within (a) five miles and (b) 10 miles of the power station, (iii) time estimates for the evacuation of the population of (a) Whitehaven, (b) Workington and (c) Barrow in Furness, (iv) time estimates for the evacuation of high-risk groups from those centres of population, (v) time estimates for the evacuation of low-mobility groups from those centres of population and (vi) time estimates for the distribution of potassium iodate tablets from those centres of population; and if he will arrange for the basis, and calculation underlying those time estimates to be placed in the Library;

(5) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Greater Manchester concerning the emergency preparedness for a civil nuclear disaster at Heysham with particular reference to time estimates for the evacuation of the population of (a) Wigan, (b) Bolton, (c) Bury, (d) Rochdale, (e) Leigh and (f) Manchester; and if he will place in the Library the basis and calculations underlying those time estimates.

Mr. Goodlad: The precautions taken in the design and construction of nuclear installations in this country, and the very high safety standards applied in operating and maintaining them, make it highly unlikely that accidents will occur which might significantly affect the public. But however remote the risks, all operators of nuclear installations are required by HM Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive, as a condition of its site licences, to prepare emergency plans, including those for dealing with an accidental release of radioactivity. The same requirement also applies to the sites of the Atomic Energy Authority.

These plans, on which police and other involved bodies must be consulted, are tested regularly in exercises monitored by HMNII. They cover both emergency procedures at the site and offsite arrangements to protect the public, including monitoring up to 40 km. and evacuation up to 1 km. for later magnox and AGR stations and 1·5 miles for earlier magnox stations. These plans are capable of extension in the improbable event of this proving necessary, but the HSE does not consider that detailed plans covering a wider area are justified. It believes that a balance needs to be struck between detailed plans that are sufficiently extensive to cope with a serious accident and the unjustified use of resources involved in planning for improbable accidents. This approach was specifically endorsed by Sir Frank Layfield in his report on Sizewell. It follows that the specific calculations and assessments sought have not been made.

In an announcement on 18 December following the first stage of a thorough review of existing plans and procedures in the light of experience of the Chernobyl accident, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister concluded that existing plans continue to provide a valid basis for the response to any accident in the United Kingdom. In announcing his consent to the planning application for Sizewell B, the Secretary of State accepted the Layfield report's recommendations relating to emergency planning. These will be taken fully into account in the continuing work on the Government review.

The duties and responsibilities of police forces are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General (1) how many Queen's Counsel he has removed from his approved list of prosecution barristers during his tenure of office; and for what reason in each case;

(2) what procedures he adopts when removing Queen's Counsel from his approved list of prosecution barristers; whether he informs them in advance of his intention to do so; and whether he gives them an opportunity to make representations on their own behalf if they so wish;

(3) what remedy is available to Queen's Counsel aggrieved by their removal from his approved list of prosecution barristers by way of appeal against his decision.

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General has been responsible for nominating prosecuting counsel for cases conducted by Government Departments with prosecution functions or by the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions with the greater proportion always emanating from the latter. For this purpose, it has long been the practice to maintain lists of approved counsel or, in some cases, panels of standing counsel.

In so far as they related to the DPP, these arrangements were revised in 1986, after full consultation with the Bar, to take account of the establishment of the Crown Prosecution Service. The Crown Prosecution Service is now responsible for the maintenance of lists of counsel for each circuit which are submitted to the Attorney-General for approval. Nothing short of total loss of confidence by the CPS centrally or a complete breakdown of the instructing solicitor-counsel relationship is regarded as sufficient to justify removal from the CPS lists. The arrangements made with the Bar is that, where any such situation is considered to have arisen, counsel is to be informed that consideration is being given to the removal of his name from the lists, together with the reason, and he is to be invited, if he wishes, to make written representations to the CPS committees responsible for the circuit lists in question.

In the event of counsel's name being removed, he may seek a review of the decision by the head of field management and, if still dissatisfied and provided he has the support of the leader of the circuit, a further review by the Director of Public Prosecutions personally.

The arrangements apply to both leading and junior counsel.

So far as prosecuting counsel instructed by other Government Departments are concerned, my right hon. and learned Friend applies similar criteria to the composition of the relevant lists and to the appointment of standing counsel.

There have been only two occasions during the tenure of office of my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General when he has removed the name of leading counsel from a prosecution list. In each case the reason was loss of confidence in the light of counsel's performance.

Notary Public (Appointment)

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General if he will arrange for the faculty giving effect to the appointment of a notary public in Wales and associated documentation to be made in the Welsh language or in a bilingual format.

The Attorney-General: The faculty appointing a Welsh district notary and the commission for taking the oath and declaration can be provided in a bilingual format upon request at the time of preparation of such documents.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BT (Network Restrictions)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if there are any current restrictions on the provision by foreign companies of equipment for British Telecom and the British telecommunications network in the area of activity for which Cable and Wireless plc is seeking to provide for the Japanese network; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Government have had a consistent policy of liberalising the field of telecommunications to allow for competition in the supply of equipment and services. Any equipment, regardless of origin, may be connected to the public switched telephone network, provided it meets the stringent technical standards needed for approval.

The Government have also licensed Mercury Communications Ltd. as a competitor to BT for both domestic and international services. An exact parallel cannot be drawn to the C and W issue in Japan, where no competition in international services exists. It is this competition which C and W, with its IDC partners, is seeking to provide.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the deficits in manufacturing trade with Japan, Germany and the European Economic Community, respectively, in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Clark: Manufacturing trade, defined in SITC terms and divisions 5-8, with Japan, Germany and the EC, in the 12 months ended February 1987, showed a crude balance of trade deficit, in £ billions of 3·9, 6·7 and 10·6 respectively.

Japan

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about trade relations with Japan.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Companies (Accounts)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current average length of time between the receipt of annual accounts by the companies registration office and their publication.

Mr. Howard: The Registrar of Companies estimates that the average time between the receipt of batches of annual accounts and returns in February and March this year and their publication was around three and a half weeks.

Companies Registration Office

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff are currently employed at the companies registration office; and, of these, how many are occupied in (a) microfilming operations, (b) document examination and (c) enforcement of default.

Mr. Howard: A total of 1,135 staff are currently employed at the companies registration offices, of whom 301½ are predominantly occupied in microfilming operations, 337 in document examination and 124 in the enforcement of default.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the estimated cost of running the companies registration office during 1987-88, and what is the estimated revenue for services provided during the same period.

Mr. Howard: The figures are:

	£ million
Estimated cost[1]	20·1
Estimated revenue	28·9

[1] On a memorandum trading account basis.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied that the guidelines on tradeable information issued in August 1986 are being complied with by the companies registration office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Yes, I am satisfied that the guidelines are being complied with. The companies registration office is providing basic information more efficiently and making it more accessible to the public. Wider use and awareness of company information should benefit the private sector in its role of adding value and manipulating the data in electronic form, to produce an enhanced product for which users will pay more. This is the activity which the Government's guidelines on tradeable information seek to encourage.

Newspapers (Takeovers and Purchases)

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he takes to monitor assurances given to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in respect of newspaper takeovers and purchases.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply to his earlier questions on 10 April, at column 429. Assurances given to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission have no statutory under-pinning and are not monitored. In the two instances where conditional consent was granted to a newspaper transfer, the conditions of the consent required certain changes in the articles of association of the companies concerned and that these should be agreed by the Secretary of State before the transfer could take place. These changes primarily provided for questions directed at editorial independence to be considered by independent directors appointed for the purpose; in any disputes concerning editorial independence the decisions of the independent directors are final and binding.

Other conditions require the Secretary of State's prior consent if certain further changes are proposed to the articles of association of the companies.

Breach of conditions attached to a transfer would constitute an offence under section 62(2) of the Fair Trading Act 1973. My Department would consider carefully any allegations concerning breaches of such conditions.

Export Licences

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export licences his Department refused for exports in 1985; and if he will state the countries concerned.

Mr. Alan Clark: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to make public information of this kind.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to transfer powers under the Financial Services Act 1986 to the Securities and Investments Board.

Mr. Howard: I have considered carefully the rules and other material sent to me by the Securities and Investments Board Ltd. in the light of the reports I have received from the Director General of Fair Trading and also of the other representations which have been made to me. I am satisfied that the various conditions laid down under the Financial Services Act for a transfer of powers to the board are fulfilled. I have accordingly today laid before the House a draft order under section 114 of the Act transferring certain powers to the Board. The powers in question include most of the transferable powers under part I of the Act (with the exception of chapter VIII, which relates to collective investment schemes) and certain powers of prosecution. Copies of the supporting material have been placed in the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

British Shipbuilders (Chairman)

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about his plans for the chairmanship of British Shipbuilders.

Mr. Channon: It is with considerable regret that I have accepted that Mr. Phillip Hares CBE should retire as chairman and chief executive of British Shipbuilders on grounds of ill-health. Although Mr. Hares has been in post for only 12 months, he has successfully managed an important adjustment in the scale of the corporation's activities, and has secured major orders that under-pin the future of its two main yards, I should like to express the Government's gratitude to Mr. Hares for his valuable services to the corporation both as chairman and chief executive and in other posts over the past 10 years.

I am glad to announce that Mr. John Lister has accepted my invitation to succeed Mr. Hares. Mr. Lister has pursued a successful career with Imperial Chemical Industries plc, most recently as chairman of ICI fibres division. Mr. Lister will become chairman and chief executive of the corporation on 1 May.

I should also like to express our gratitude to Mr. Maurice Phelps, the BS board member for personnel and employee relations, who agreed to delay his departure from the corporation for a post in private industry in order to assume the position of acting chief executive during Mr. Hares' indisposition. Mr. Phelps, who leaves his executive position on the British Shipbuilders board from 4 May, is to continue as a non-executive director of the corporation.

Privatisation (Multiple Share Applications)

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the number of multiple share applications discovered in the following privatisations: Amersham International, British Gas, Cable and Wireless and Associated British Ports, and the number of prosecutions arising from multiple share applications, together with the penalties involved; and if he will supply the same information in respect of the Trustee Savings Bank flotation.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply 9 April 1987, c. 338]: Information about the number of multiple share applications is not available. Prosecution is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will establish inquiries into the sale of shares in (a) British Aerospace (second tranche), (b) British Airways, (c) British Gas, (d) Britoil (second tranche), (e) Cable and Wireless (third tranche) and (f) the Trustee Savings Bank, with a view to establishing the precise extent of multiple share applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987, c. 339]: No.

EMPLOYMENT

Injuries (Statistics)

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General how many major injuries have occurred in manufacturing industry and construction in each year since 1980; and to what factors he attributes the trend shown by these figures.

Mr. Lee: The table gives the data requested.

Reported Occupational Major Injuries in Manufacturing and Construction, Great Britain (as defined in the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1980)

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Manufacturing:
Employees	4,109	4,066	4,238	4,649	4,824
Self employed	8	21	18	31	17
Non-employed	22	40	60	57	46
Construction:
Employees	1,690	1,950	2,176	2,288	2,244
Self employed	40	51	57	70	113
Non-employed	36	33	66	75	78

Comparable data for 1980 and 1986 are not available. Performance varies between sectors of manufacturing industry and construction. The factors are complex but the increasing numbers of reported accidents in certain sectors suggest failure by managers to recognise that health and safety is an integral part of successful business management.

Hazardous Substances

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General when the list of installations notified to the Health and Safety Executive under the Notification of Installations Handling Hazardous Substances Regulations 1982 will be published.

Mr. Trippier: A list of names and locations of local installations notified under the 1982 regulations is available, on request, for public inspection at each of the area offices of the Health and Safety Executive. There are no plans to publish a single list of all installations notified.

"Engineering Our Future"

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General what steps are being taken by the Government to implement recommendation 64 of the Finniston report entitled "Engineering Our Future".

Mr. Trippier: In preparing regulations under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, it is for the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) in each case to consider whether it would be appropriate to adopt the first part of this recommendation, or to legislate for safe engineering practice in some other way. When consulting on proposals for regulations which might include such requirements, it is the HSC's practice to include the Engineering Council among those consulted.

Health and Safety

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General what categories of people are treated by his Department as competent persons for the purpose of sections 22, 26, 27, 35 and 36 of the Factories Act 1961.

Mr. Trippier: There are no set categories of competent persons. Whether a person is competent for the purpose depends on the circumstances and is a matter for the courts to decide. However, it is generally considered that such a person should have such practical and theoretical knowledge and the actual experience of the type of machinery or plant which he has to examine as will enable him to detect defects or weaknesses which it is the purpose of the examination to discover, and to assess their importance in relation to the strength and functions of the machinery or plant.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General in what circumstances two legally qualified persons are allowed to sit on an industrial tribunal.

Mr. Lee: An industrial tribunal consists of a legally-qualified chairman and two lay members. The lay members are chosen for their industrial relations experience but it is possible that either or both of them may also have a legal qualification.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General how many married women in the Knowsley local authority district are currently being paid unemployment benefit; and what were the comparable figures 12, 24 and 36 months previously.

Mr. Lee: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Employment and Training Measures

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General what are the total number of people subject to special employment and training measures at the latest available date for the Knowsley local authority district; what are the measures and numbers affected in each case; and what were the comparable figures 12 months and 24 months previously.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to give precise total figures for the Knowsley local authority district because of the various bases on which local information has been collected. The total number of people participating in the following employment, training and enterprise measures were:

Dates (End of March)

Programme	1987	1986	1985	Area
Community Programme	1,613	1,513	1,160	Knowsley Local Authority District

Figures for adult training are not available in the form requested. However there were 4,055 entrants in the Knowsley local authority district in 1986-87 and 4,081 in 1985-86.

Labour Statistics

Mrs. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish (a) a table showing estimates of the number of part-time employees in the west midlands region and county including number of part-time women workers and part-time male workers, at April 1986 and (b) a table showing estimates of the number and proportion of male part-time workers and female part-time workers, in the west midlands region and county earning less the £3.20 and £3.40 per hour at April 1986.

Mr. Lee: (a) The available information, from the Census of Employment, relates to September 1984 and is as follows:

Estimated numbers in employment—west midlands region.

	Number
Part-time males	65,800
Part-time females	349,300
Total	415,100

The 1984 census results for the west midlands metropolitan county are not yet available. More recent estimates of part-time females in employment in the west midlands region are published in table 1·5 of Employment Gazette, copies of which are available in the Library.

(b) Estimates of the proportion of part-time adult female employees with gross hourly earnings below specified amounts for the west midlands region and West midlands metropolitan county are available from the New Earnings Survey and are shown in the table.

Comparable information for male part-time employees is not available.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a table showing, in April 1986, the proportion of full-time employees in the west midlands region and county, earning less than (a) £80, (b) £120, (c) £125 and (d) £130 per week exclusive of overtime payments, for male workers, male manual workers, male non-manual workers, and female workers, female manual workers, and female non-manual workers.

Mr. Lee: The available information relates to full-time adult employees working a full week and is set out in the table for the west midlands region and West Midlands metropolitan county.

Merseyside

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the companies on (a) Liverpool and (b) Merseyside where workers have been sacked and the numbers involved in official disputes since May 1983 to the latest date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Official information on industrial disputes in individual companies is confidential. No statistics are held on dismissals by my Department.

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General how many workers have been dismissed by companies on (a) Liverpool and (b) Merseyside for claiming trades union recognition.

Mr. Lee: This information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the current involvement of the Advisory Conciliation and Arbitration Service in disputes on (a) Merseyside and (b) Liverpool at the latest date and the names of the companies involved.

Mr. Lee: I understand that ACAS is involved in 12 disputes on Merseyside, five of which are in Liverpool. Discussions between ACAS and the parties in a dispute are confidential and it would therefore not be appropriate for me to name the companies involved.

Factory Closures

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General what information he has on the number and type of factory and workshop closures and the number of work people involved losing their jobs, during each year from 1974 by industrial category (a) nationally, (b) in the Yorkshire and Humberside region and (c) in Barnsley metropolitan council area.

Mr. Lee: National information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The available information is as follows:

South Africa

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General if he has made any representations to London Broadcasting Company about carrying advertising for South African Airways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Trade associations representing the travel and advertising industries were asked to draw to their members' attention the Government's policy on promoting tourism to South Africa last October and they subsequently did so.

Representations have not been made to individual firms. I would point out that the Government's appeal for a voluntary ban has always applied explicitly to the promotion of South Africa as a destination for leisure travel and does not apply to the promotion of travel facilities generally, such as airline flights or hotel accommodation for those with business or family connections in South Africa.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General what information he has about companies breaching Her Majesty's Government's voluntary ban on the promotion of tourism in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that not all sections of the media have so far heeded the Government's appeal not to promote South Africa as a tourist destination. But since the measure is voluntary the final decision must rest with organisations concerned.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General if he will consider making mandatory the voluntary ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We have no plans to do so. The Government's policy on promoting tourism to South Africa was set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ravensbourne (Mr. Hunt) on 30 October 1986 at column 213.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arab-Israeli Dispute

3. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will hold discussions with his European Economic Community counterparts on the prospects for an international conference to resolve Arab-Israeli disputes.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend does so regularly, most recently at the informal meeting of Foreign Ministers at Corsendonk on 4 and 5 April.

Gulf War

8. Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there has been any progress in gathering support for the United Nations Secretary General's initiative to bring the Gulf war to an end.

Mr. Renton: We continue to play a very active role in discussions within the United Nations aimed at making progress towards a negotiated settlement of the Iran/Iraq conflict, building on the ideas put forward by the Secretary-General. Regrettably there are few signs that serious negotiations are likely to start in the near future. We will continue to give every support to the Secretary-General.

South Korea

13. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on prospects for the United Kingdom's relations with the Republic of South Korea.

23. Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with the Republic of South Korea.

Mr. Renton: The prospects for relations with the Republic of Korea are good, especially in the light of the high level visits to and from Korea last year. The economy is growing very rapidly. As I saw for myself when I was in Seoul last month, there are interesting commercial opportunities, although there are some problems, notably over protection for intellectual property.

29. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of South Korea about respect for human rights.

Mr. Renton: The Government of the Republic of Korea are well aware of the importance we attach to respect for human rights. I referred to our continuing interest in the subject during my recent talks in Seoul.

EC (Agricultural Expenditure)

16. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent action the Government have taken to give priority to the control of agricultural spending in the negotiations on finance in the European Community.

Mrs. Chalker: We have made clear to the Commission and to other member states that control of expenditure, including agricultural spending, is central to progress on the negotiations on the future of the Community's finances. During our own presidency major reforms were agreed governing spending in the dairy and beef sectors, saving Community taxpayers £6 billion over six years. Comparable reforms are now needed in other sectors.

Philippines

19. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to make any representations to his European colleagues with a view to increasing European assistance and support for the Philippines.

Mr. Renton: The Twelve have consistently made clear their strong political support for President Aquino and the restoration of democracy in the Philippines. We and other partners have substantially increased bilateral aid to the Philippines since Mrs. Aquino came to power. Aid from the European Community has also increased significantly.

Ethiopia

22. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Government of Ethiopia; and what subjects were discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend met the then Ethiopian Foreign Minister, Goshu Wolde, in London on 20 March 1985. They discussed the famine relief operation, bilateral issues, the royal prisoners, the resettlement programme and the conflict in northern Ethiopia.

European Parliament (President)

24. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the President of the European Parliament.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend discussed a wide range of European Community matters with the President of the European Parliament last month.

USSR (Human Rights)

18. Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether during his recent visit to Moscow, he had an opportunity to raise with the Soviet Foreign Minister the plight of the long-term refuseniks; and whether he received any assurances on the subject of the reunification of divided families.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend both raised the question of refuseniks and urged that all who wished to leave the Soviet Union should be allowed to do so. Mr. Gorbachev said that the Soviet Union was considering the question of exit visas and reunification of families with the utmost care, and with positive results where possible.

25. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received concerning human rights abuses in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: A very large number. These were fully taken into account in conversations my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend had in Moscow on this issue.

USA

27. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations between the United Kingdom and the United States of America.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend visited Washington on the 9 and 10 April where he had extensive discussions with Mr. Shultz. Relations between the United Kingdom and the United States of America continue to be warm, close and constructive.

Middle East

28. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for the peace process in the middle east of the situation in southern Lebanon.

Mr. Renton: Developments in southern Lebanon have some effect on the climate for middle east peace negotiations. We call on the Israelis to complete their withdrawal from southern Lebanon and on all concerned to facilitate UNIFIL's deployment, in accordance with its mandate, to the international border.

30. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any progress has been made towards setting up a middle east peace conference.

34. Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on developments aimed at a middle east peace settlement.

Mr. Renton: We are continuing our efforts to help the parties to the Arab/Israel conflict reach sufficient common ground to allow the convening of an international conference aimed at achieving a comprehensive peace settlement in the middle east.

33. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what follow-up discussions he plans concerning the middle east in the light of the visit by King Fahd in March; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards re-establishing diplomatic ties with Syria in the absence of any statement by that country renouncing its rôle in international terrorism.

Mr. Renton: We are in regular discussion with the Saudi Government on a wide range of regional and international issues. The state visit of King Fahd was a most useful opportunity to pursue our dialogue at the highest level. On Syria we have made it clear that there is no prospect of the re-establishment of our diplomatic links until we have evidence, over time, of a change in Syrian support for terrorism.

Mr. Ernie Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Saudi Arabia has made any specific proposals or requests for improving regional security in the Gulf following the intensified level of hostilities between Iran and Iraq and the increased threat to international shipping.

Mr. Renton: Saudi Arabia has made no specific proposals of which we are aware. However, Saudi Arabia, like other member states of the Gulf Co-operation Council, has regularly expressed concern about the threat to shipping in the Gulf; we are in agreement about the need to preserve freedom of navigation in the area and remain in close contact on this subject.

Chemical Weapons

36. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made in the negotiations of a treaty to control the possession, manufacture and deployment of chemical weapons.

Mr. Renton: Negotiations for a comprehensive convention banning chemical weapons resumed at the conference on disarmament on 3 February under Swedish chairmanship. So far attention has concentrated on the problems associated with stockpiles and production facilities, the verification of non-production in the civil chemical industry and the organisation that will be necessary to enforce the convention. There has been some useful elaboration of last year's work but much detail remains to be settled.

Disarmament

26. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of nuclear arms control discussions.

Mr. Renton: The seventh round of the Geneva nuclear and space talks, which began on 15 January, ended on 26 March. We fully support the proposals in the United States INF draft treaty tabled on 4 March, and look forward to further progress in the next round of talks, which is scheduled to begin on 23 April.

Saudi Arabia

35. Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what effect problems associated with the finalisation of payment terms for previously agreed defence contracts between Britain and Saudi Arabia have had on relations between the two countries.

Mr. Renton: There are no [illegible] problems. I am glad to say that United Kingdom-Saudi relations remain excellent.

Mrs. Gloria Proops

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the progress to resolve the payment of outstanding debts from the Zambian high commission to Mrs. Gloria Proops; and what further action he proposes to take.

Mrs. Chalker: Mrs. Gloria Proops is owed approximately £235 by a former employee of the Zambian high commission, now in Zambia. The employee has offered to pay Mrs. Proops but says he is unable to obtain the foreign currency necessary to do so. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been in contact with the Zambian high commission, which has sought approval from the Zambian authorities to pay the money owed to Mrs. Proops. The Zambians would then recover the equivalent amount in local currency from their former employee. Approval has not yet been given but the high commission is pursuing the matter, and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will continue to press the Zambian authorities for a successful outcome to Mrs. Proops' case.

Iran-Iraq War (Chemical Weapons)

Mr Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the continued use by Iraq of chemical weapons has been placed on the agenda for the forthcoming meeting of European Economic Community Foreign Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: No. However, we take every suitable opportunity, both bilaterally and in concert with our EC partners, to express our concern to the Iraqis over their continued use of these abhorrent weapons, and to press for an early peaceful settlement to this tragic conflict.

Cultural Memorandum of Understanding

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what additional funds are to be made available to meet new activities undertaken as a result of the cultural memorandum of understanding signed by him in Moscow.

Mr Eggar: The memorandum on information, culture and education is a facilitating document which will assist independent British organisations and bodies in the information, cultural and education fields to make satisfactory arrangements with their counterparts in the Soviet Union.

Hall and Watts

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list any contracts his Department has made since 1979 with Hall and Watts.

Mr. Renton: The FCO entered into a contract with Hall and Watts in 1986, after they had won a tender for the provision of military training equipment for use by the British Army's training team at Nyanga, Zimbabwe, who are presently undertaking a programme of training for the Mozambican armed forces under the United Kingdom military training assistance scheme.

Entry Clearance Officers

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many entry clearance officers are currently in post in (a) Accra, (b) Lagos, (c) Kaduna, (d) New Delhi, (e) Bombay, (f) Madras, (g) Islamabad, (h) Karachi, (i) Dhaka and (j) Colombo; what is the full complement of entry clearance officers for each of these posts; how many of these were added in order to deal with the extra work that the compulsory visa requirement entails; and what is the (a) total cost of the entry clearance staff and (b) cost arising as a result of extra staff as a result of the visa requirement at these posts, respectively.

Mr. Eggar: A number of temporary entry clearance officers are being replaced this month and additional staff are being deployed to cope with the seasonal increase in applications. The table indicates the number of entry clearance officers expected to be in post as at 1 May 1987, the full complement of entry clearance officers, and the additional entry clearance officers deployed since the visa regimes were announced:

	ECOs in post as at 1 May 1987	Full ECO complement	Extra ECOs added since 1986
Accra	2	3	2
Lagos	14	18	15
Kaduna	3	3	2
New Delhi	[2]15	[3]13	8
Bombay	11	11	6
Madras	2	2	2
Islamabad	[4]20	25	8
Karachi	7	7	6
Dhaka	19	21	5
Colombo	4	4	[2]0

[1] Plus two temporary staff during summer.
[2] Plus two leaving 8 May 1987.
[3] Two ECOs were added to the complement in May 1985.
[4] Plus five arriving by mid-May.

The total gross running cost of the entry clearance operation in these posts for the current financial year is expected to be £19,652,400, of which £13,775,100 is for costs incurred from providing extra staff (including ECOs).

Visa Office (Lagos)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when it is expected that the visa office in Lagos will reopen.

Mr. Eggar: The visa office in Lagos reopened on 20 March.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions he has given to British consulates abroad concerning the issue of application forms for those who wish to register as overseas voters.

Mr. Eggar: British consulates have been instructed to make the application forms for electoral registration overseas as widely available as possible. Arrangements for publicity were set out in my written reply of 22 July 1986, at column 142, to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels). Further instructions on publicity were issued to posts on 6 April 1987.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions he has given to British Council representatives abroad concerning publicity on the issue of application forms for those who wish to register as overseas voters.

Mr. Eggar: No specific instructions have been given to British Council representatives. But they will be aware of local arrangements for the issue of application forms and attendant publicity.

SCOTLAND

Blood Donors

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, further to the answer of Monday 6 April, Official Report, column 107, if he will indicate when this policy on restricting blood donors was implemented; and if he will estimate the anticipated reduction in the number of blood donors.

Mr. John MacKay: The policy of restricting potential blood donors in order to reduce the risk of transmitting certain tropical diseases has been in operation for many years. The period during which such donors are asked not to donate blood was extended from six months to 12 months in January 1987.

Precautionary measures against the transmission of AIDS by potential donors who have visited certain parts of Africa were introduced in August 1984. Since then, the number of donors bled has continued to rise and no reduction is expected.

Leukaemia

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he expects to publish the COMARE report on childhood leukaemia clusters;

(2) whether he will commission case control studies in respect of child leukaemia clusters.

Mr. John MacKay: COMARE is at present considering the information available on the incidence of leukaemia in under 25-year-olds in Scotland. It is not expected that they will be able to offer advice before the end of this year. Any further studies, such as case control studies, advised by the committee will be carried out.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Home and Health Department plans to submit recent figures on leukaemia clusters for publication in The Lancet.

Mr. John MacKay: The figures on leukaemia clusters referred to are contained in a report produced by the information services division of the Common Services Agency for the Scottish Health Service on the incidence of leukaemia in the under 25-year-olds in Scotland. The report is to be published in the May edition of the "Health Bulletin".

Dounreay (Hospital Study)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the Yorkhill royal hospital for sick children's study on Dounreay.

Mr. John MacKay: I am not aware of any such study.

Fishing Industry

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when the mid-term review will take place of the North sea haddock total allowable catch; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The Advisory Committee on Fishery Management (ACFM) will be reviewing the state of the North sea haddock stock during the course of its annual meeting in May. We shall consider the case for seeking an increase in the 1987 total allowable catch for this stock once ACFM's advice is available.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will investigate the compatibility of provisions of European Economic Community Regulation No. 4027/86 with the common fisheries policy in relation to the allocation to a member state of its own quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I am satisfied that the EC regulation 4027/86, which gives power to the Commission to close a fishery when the total allowable catch has been reached, is entirely compatible with quota allocation policies. As I told my hon. Friend on 26 November 1986, at column 252, it is the Commission's objective in exercising this control to conserve stocks, adjusting quotas in the year following infringement to compensate those who have suffered at the expense of offenders.

Patients (Safety Rails and Gates)

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he is having with Strathclyde regional council social work department and Glasgow district housing department to improve the provisions of safety rails and gates fitted in patient homes in the light of the delays in some patients being discharged from hospital about which the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill has written to him.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1987, c. 580]: My hon. Friend the Minister of State has written to the hon. Member and placed a copy in the Library.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new projects applied for Scottish Development Agency funding in each year since 1979; and how many were successful.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 16 February 1987, c. 458]: The only information which is continuously available since 1979 relates to applications for agency investments, excluding small business division investments. The information is as set out in the table.

	Applications received	Applications approved
1979-80	138	20

1983-84	1,323	337
1984-85	959	240
1985-86	1,043	295

Applications not approved include applications withdrawn by the applicant, applications for which finance is raised privately, applications not meeting the criteria for the scheme in question and applications rejected on commercial grounds.

TRANSPORT

Bus Services

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the decision of the north-west traffic commissioner that duplicate bus services may only be run when passenger traffic demands; and if he will make a statement in the light of his policy that control over the quantity of buses should be removed.

Mr. David Mitchell: The traffic commissioner for the north-western traffic area has received a letter from the general manager of Merseybus on this subject. The Transport Act 1985 requires services to be run in accordance with the particulars registered in advance with the traffic commissioners. The guidance given by the north-western traffic commissioner is consistent with that purpose and with the terms of the Public Service Vehicles (Registration of Local Services) Regulations 1986. The whole system would be undermined if operators were at liberty to run services without regard to the timetables which they provided on registration.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus routes running (a) wholly and (b) in part outside the Greater London area are currently operated by London Buses Ltd.

Mr. David Mitchell: (a) Two. (b) Thirty-five.

M3-M27 Extension

Mr. John Browne asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the proposed extension of the M3 from Winchester to the M27.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I announced on 10 April the decisions of my right hon. Friends following the 1985 public inquiry.

The independent inspector agreed that the extension of the M3 from Winchester to the M27 was urgently needed and that our proposals for replacing the A33 Winchester bypass by taking the motorway in a cutting across Twyford Down provided the right solution. In view of the representations which we have received since the inquiry about the absence of relevant information on environmental issues, we have concluded that we could not come to a proper decision on the proposals for the Bar End-Compton section without giving a further opportunity for this information to be presented to the inspector.

We have decided to re-open the inquiry into the Bar End-Compton section. The arrangements for this will be announced as soon as possible.

We see no need to hold up the much-needed southern part of the scheme between Compton and the M27. We have accepted the inspector's recommendation that the widening and upgrading of the A33 Otterbourne and Chandlers Ford bypass to form part of the M3 motorway should go ahead. We will start work on this part of the scheme as quickly as possible.

Road and Rail Infrastructure

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the expenditure on (a) road and (b) rail infrastructure for each year since 1974; and what is the allocation of expenditure forecast each year to 1992 for (i) Yorkshire and Humberside and (ii) Barnsley, West and Penistone at 1974 prices.

Mr. Moore: My Department does not hold information about expenditure on rail infrastructure in this form and detail. Information about expenditure on road infrastructure in the areas in question is not available prior to 1978-79. That which is available for subsequent years is as follows:

£ million at 1974 prices[1]

Driving Tests

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average waiting time for a driving test in Dundee; and what is the current average waiting time in Britain.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The average waiting time for a test in Dundee is 15 weeks, compared with 14 weeks for the country as a whole.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving test centres there are in Dundee, Aberdeen, Glasgow and Edinburgh; and how many test examiners are employed at each.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The figures are as follows:

Centres	Examiners
Dundee
1	4
Aberdeen
2 Albert street	3
Clunie place	5
Glasgow
5 Anniesland	5
Riddrie	3
Rutherglen	4
Shawlands	8
Shettleston	8
Edinburgh
3 Joppa	5
Newington	3
Parkhead	7

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving tests have been conducted in Dundee in each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The numbers of tests conducted were:

	Number
1982	6,595
1983	4,390
1984	5,001
1985	5,719
1986	5,745

These figures include tests in Blairgowrie, an outstation of Dundee.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the average annual waiting time for a driving test in Dundee in each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This information is not readily available.

The waiting times in April for the last three years were:

	Weeks
April 1985	16
April 1986	16
April 1987	15

Figures for earlier years are not available.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport under what circumstances an air traffic control unit providing an approach control service at an aerodrome is permitted, specifically at night, to transfer in toto its responsibilities concerning the provision of separation of aircraft operating on an instrument flight rules plan to the commander of such an aircraft during his approach to land at that aerodrome.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Air traffic control is the responsibility of the National Air Traffic Services. It tells me that the circumstances in which an air traffic control unit providing an approach service at an aerodrome is permitted at all times, to transfer in toto its responsibilities to provide the separation of aircraft during its approach to land at that aerodrome are laid down in the manual of air traffic services part 1, section 1, chapter 3, paragraph 3, sub-paras (b) and (c) which states:

> In the vicinity of aerodromes, the standard separation may be reduced if:
> (b) each aircraft is continuously visible to the pilots of other aircraft concerned, and the pilots report that they can maintain their own separation, or
> (c) when one aircraft is following another the pilot of the succeeding aircraft reports that he has the other in sight and can maintain separation.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to how many bus lanes have been removed in Greater London since 1 April 1986; and how many new lanes have been installed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I understand that five new bus lanes have been or are in the process of being installed in Greater London since 1 April 1986 and that four have been or are being removed.

Transport Services (Attacks)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many attacks there have been in the last five years on (a) passengers and (b) employees on (i) London Regional Transport services or property and (ii) British Rail southern region services or property.

Mr. David Mitchell: I shall answer this question shortly.

Graffiti

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total cost to London Regional Transport of removing graffiti from the underground in each of the past five years.

Mr. David Mitchell: London Regional Transport has only recently begun to separate costs of removing graffiti on the underground from overall cleaning costs and figures are not therefore available for the last five years. It estimates, however, that the cost of graffiti cleaning in 1986-87 could amount to as much as £500,000.

Journey-time Savings and Accident Prevention

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations and individuals were involved in consultations on his Department's evaluation of journey-time savings and accident prevention.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In response to the invitation made to a number of specialists in the field of transport appraisal and others who might wish to comment, we received replies from the following people during the period of consultation which ended on 21 April.

Professor R. E. Allsop of University College, London;
Dr. S. T. Atkins of Southampton University;
Mr. A. Bennet of British Railways Board;
Dr. J. R. Broome of Bristol University;
Dr. P. B. Goodwin of Oxford University;
Professor R. O. Goss of UWIST;
Professor P. J. Hills of Newcastle upon Tyne University;
Professor M. Jones-Lee of Newcastle upon Tyne University;
Mr. A. Marin of the London School of Economics;
Professor G. H. Mooney of Copenhagen University;
Professor D. Pearce of University College London;
Mr. M. Roberts of the MVA Consultancy;
Mr. H. J. Wootton of Wootton Jeffreys plc.

Travelcard

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what studies are being carried out by his Department or outside consultants into the implications for the London Regional Transport Travelcard of deregulation of bus services.

Mr. David Mitchell: My Department has commissioned no such studies by outside consultants. All relevant aspects of the extension of bus deregulation to London will be considered before detailed proposals are brought forward.

Passenger Trains (Overcrowding)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek from British Rail statistics on passenger train overcrowding outside London.

Mr. David Mitchell: My officials are still discussing with British Rail appropriate definitions of overcrowding on provincial sector services.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Stamp Duty

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the forecast yield from stamp duty on the sale of (i) dwellings and (ii) securities in 1987-88, and comparable figures for 1957-58, 1967-68 and 1977-78, together with the rates of duty.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The information is as follows:

Coinage

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the new United Kingdom gold bullion coin, the Britannia, to be available to the public; and what notional legal tender value he intends to ascribe to it and the other denominations of $\frac{1}{2}$ oz, $\frac{1}{4}$ oz and $\frac{1}{10}$oz.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The 1oz Britannia will be available this autumn with the additional denominations available shortly thereafter. Further details of the specification of the coins, including their face values, will be announced in due course.

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had about the intention of the Belgian Government to issue commemorative and legal tender coin in ecu denominations; and if he has any similar intentions.

Mr. Ian Stewart: While the Government were aware of the Belgian Government's intentions, neither I nor my ministerial colleagues have held any discussions with representatives of the Belgian Government on this subject. The Government have no plans to issue similar coins in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will announce his conclusions of his review of the size and shape of the various denominations of United Kingdom currency coins; and what proposals he has for change.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government have no plans at present to issue any new coins or to withdraw any existing coins. Naturally, the Government keep all longer term options under constant review. Before any change took place it would be necessary to give all interested parties from industry and commerce, as well as the general public, including the blind, an opportunity to make known their views on the longer term alternatives.

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider the regular issue of a crown piece in silver proof and currency metal; and when he expects to issue the next commemorative version of this coin.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Crowns are generally issued to mark important royal occasions. It would not therefore be appropriate to issue them on a regular basis. In the case of any future commemorative issues, an announcement would be made at the appropriate time.

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will continue to issue a legal tender currency coin of £2 denomination value.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government have no present plans to issue further £2 coins.

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his intention to continue to strike the British gold sovereign and half sovereign; and if such coins will be issued and dated for the current year.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Proof sovereigns and half sovereigns are being struck this year and will bear the date for the current year. There are no plans to strike standard sovereigns and half sovereigns during 1987.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next plans to discuss value added tax with his fellow Finance Ministers of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Brooke: The next meeting of the EC Council of Economic and Finance Ministers is on 11 May. It is not expected that value added tax will be discussed at this meeting. Agenda for later meetings of the Council have not yet been decided.

Financial Management Initiative

Mr. Latham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the effect on his Department of the financial management initiative.

Mr. Brooke: The financial management initiative in 1982 covered a wide range of management reforms. These reforms were all aimed at helping to give better value for money from public expenditure, and it is increasingly unrealistic to try to identify separately the effects of the financial management initiative, of other specific initiatives to manage resources better, and of good management generally.

Progress in Departments' programmes of financial management improvements has included the introduction of top management information systems, budgets for over 1,500 managers with individual responsibility for managing resources, and new information and control systems to set budgets and measure performance. Departments have used these systems to help Ministers and senior officials set and achieve targets for improving efficiency. Some of these improvements can be seen in the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 56), the Board of Customs and Excise's annual report and management plan, the Board of Inland Revenue's annual report and senior management system, the annual report and accounts from Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the Central Office of Information, and the Department for National Savings' annual report. Copies of these documents are in the Library. They show, for example, Customs and Excise's target to increase in real terms the yield from VAT control visits by at least 12 per cent. in 1987-88 and the same amount in 1986-87 on top of an increase of 7 per cent. already achieved in 1985-86. In Her Majesty's Stationery Office, which operates as a trading fund, manpower numbers have been reduced from 6,276 to 3,350 over the last seven years, while turnover has risen to almost £300 million. Financial objectives have been met each year and price increases kept to a minimum. In the Inland Revenue there has been a steady increase in the number of taxpayers dealt with per staff unit.

The Treasury has helped Departments to develop their financial management and monitored their progress. The Public Accounts Committee took evidence on this work from the permanent under-secretary on 1 December 1986.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions Her Majesty's Government are having about the extent to which the Channel tunnel international passenger train service operated from 1993 should conform to European Economic Community customs and immigration formalities and about how this is to be achieved.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Customs and Immigration

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what consideration his Department is giving to European Economic Community directives and proposals relevant to possible changes in customs and immigration formalities by the beginning of 1993; and what assessment he has made of their implications;

(2) what changes the European Commission has proposed for customs and immigration formalities for general passenger travel between European Economic Community member states, and between European Economic Community member states and other countries, by the beginning of 1993; and what changes at railway crossing points are implied in the proposals;

(3) if any customs and immigration checks for railway passengers travelling between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Eire are carried out on board moving trains; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what information he has as to which railway crossing within the European Economic Community require no customs or immigration formalities;

(5) what information he has as to which crossing points within the European Economic Community require customs or immigration formalities and, of these, which offer such formalities on board moving trains or trains on board ferries, and which offer such formalities on board long-distance passenger trains where customs or immigration staff undertake their work beyond stations adjacent to the member states border.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Railways (Frontier Crossings)

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to at which locations and between which countries passenger railway routes, including passenger trains on ferries, cross frontiers between European Economic Community member states, between European Economic Community member states and Scandinavia, between European Economic Community member states and Switzerland and Austria and between European Economic Community member states and Comecon countries.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

EC (Payments and Refunds)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state for each year since 1973 (a) the overall payments by the Treasury to the European Economic Community, (b) the overall payment made by the European Economic Community to Britain in refunds and all other payments, (c) the total payments and refunds made to the Treasury and (d) the net cost to the Treasury.

Mr. Brooke: The information requested concerning public sector contributions and receipts to and from the Community budget is set out in the table. The Commission does not provide member states with details of payments made directly to private sector organisations. The overall payment made by the EEC to Britain is therefore not available.

Taxation (Yield)

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the estimated yield from all sources of taxation including excise and other duties for 1987-88; what was the comparable yield for 1978-79 revalued at 1987-88 prices; and if he will publish a breakdown by categories of the real increase in taxes between 1978-79 and 1987-88 similar to that in his answer of 25 March 1986, Official Report, columns 426-7;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the yield in real terms in (a) 1978-79 and (b) what he is now proposing for 1987-88 in (i) direct taxes, including national insurance and (ii) indirect taxes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Government Advertising

Mr. Straw asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing the total amount spent by the Central Office of Information and Government Departments on advertising in newspapers, breaking down the totals by (a) individual named campaigns and (b) national dailies, national Sundays, regional evenings and others.

Mr. Brooke: The information is not available in the form requested. The estimated expenditure by COI in the 1986-87 financial year is:

National Dailies	14,861,387
National Sundays	8,145,337
Provincials	3,835,710
Others	7,041,063
Total	33,883,497

The main departmental campaigns were:

AIDS	(DHSS)
Misuse of Drugs	(DHSS)
Action for jobs	Department of Employment

Energy Efficiency	Department of Energy	Restart	(MSC)
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	(MSC)	Youth Training Scheme	(MSC)
		Services Recruitment	(MOD)

Budget

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 April, Official Report, columns 67-68, if he will give the gains per average person in each of the income ranges given from the Budget proposals (a) on an un-indexed basis and (b) net of indexation.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the size of the cut in the standard rate of income tax required in 1987-88 to reduce the total tax payments, including income tax, national insurance contributions, indirect taxes, less child benefit where appropriate, for those on (a) three quarters and (b) 100 per cent. of average earnings in the categories: (i) single people, (ii) married couples and (iii) married couples with two and four children in each case to (x) the same sum of money and (y) the same proportion of gross earnings as in 1978-79;

(2) if he will construct an index with 1978-79 equalling 100, of the changes in the level of income tax and national insurance contributions for each subsequent year for a taxpayer on (a) half, (b) two thirds, (c) average, (d) five times and (e) 10 times average earnings for households where the taxpayer is (i) single, (ii) married, no children (iii) married with two children and (iv) married with four children, in all cases assuming the wife does not work, using a similar form to his answer of 27 March 1986, Official Report, columns 606-608.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Leeds-Bradford Airport (Customs Clearance)

Mr. Madden asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from Freight Forwarders in the Leeds-Bradford area about its proposals to introduce a system of customs clearance by direct computer link covering Leeds-Bradford airport and Leeds Containers base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1987, c. 450]: I have received no representations from Freight Forwarders about an application for direct input facilities to the customs computer from Leeds-Bradford airport and Leeds Container base. I am aware of the application it has made, and would refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 7 April at column 165.

Mr. O'Brien asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received proposing the development of a customs and excise depot at the Leeds-Bradford airport.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1987, c. 450]: I have received no representations proposing the development of a customs and excise depot at Leeds-Bradford airport. Customs clearance facilities already exist at the airport. An application for direct input facilities to the customs computer from this location has been made by the Yorkshire DTI Group, and I would refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 7 April at column 165.

NORTHERN IRELAND

INLA (Feud)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will name all those persons who are considered by the security forces to have been murdered as a result of the Irish National Liberation Army feud in Northern Ireland and in the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The publication of such information could hamper police investigations. It is not our practice to speculate on the motives behind particular terrorist murders.

Animal Health

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the incidence of brucellosis and tuberculosis in cattle in (a) South Armagh and (b) other parts of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: At present there are no cattle herds in Northern Ireland under restriction for brucellosis.

Incidence of bovine tuberculosis in Northern Ireland is at a very low level, on average 1·35 per cent. of herds. The incidence in the divisional veterinary office areas, which include South Armagh, is slightly lower at between 1·14 per cent. and 1·17 per cent.

Industrial Development

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the Industrial Development Board to extend the pilot scheme to stimulate industrial development to Newry/Armagh.

Mr. Viggers: As I indicated in my previous answer to the hon. Gentleman on 21 November 1986, at column 386, the Industrial Development Board's local initiative was introduced on a trial basis to two areas, Carrickfergus and Londonderry. As it is only six months since the launch of the initiative, it is too early to assess its effectiveness. The IDB will review the initiative after 18 months operation and in the light of this review decide if it should be extended to other selected areas of Northern Ireland.

Cereals

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the European Economic Community Commission has any proposals to increase the co-responsibility levy on cereals in the current year.

Mr. Viggers: No.

Newry and District Community Services Council

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what finances will be made available to help the Newry and district community services council to purchase its present building in Marcus square which acts as an umbrella for the voluntary organisations.

Dr. Mawhinney: Applications for grant-aid would have to be made to the Southern Health and Social Services

Board and the Newry and Mourne district council and it would be for decision by these bodies whether to make funds available within their respective budgets.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board; what were the subjects discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: My noble Friend, the Minister with responsibility for agriculture in Northern Ireland, met the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board on 30 April 1986. Internal United Kingdom trade in pasteurised milk was discussed.

Agriculture

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to meet his counterpart from the Irish Republic to discuss designing a common agricultural policy for the whole of Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: No.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (i) life sentence prisoners and (ii) prisoners detained during the pleasure of the Secretary of State have been released on licence each year since 1980; how many in each category were Loyalist, Republican and undifferentiated prisoners; and what was the average length of sentence served by Loyalists, Republican and undifferentiated prisoners in each category;

(2) how many (i) life sentence prisoners and (ii) prisoners detained during the pleasure of the Secretary of State have been given release dates in each year since the setting up of the Northern Ireland life sentence review board; and how many in each category were Loyalist, Republican and undifferentiated prisoners;

(3) how many (i) life sentence prisoners and (ii) prisoners detained during the pleasure of the Secretary of State there are in Northern Ireland's prisons, excluding those who have been given release dates; and how many in each category are Loyalist, Republican and undifferentiated prisoners.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Air Misses

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the total number of air misses recorded in the United Kingdom airspace in each year since 1974; and if he will provide a breakdown of the figures into incidents involving (a) two civil aircraft, (b) two military aircraft and (c) one civil and one military aircraft;

(2) how many of the air misses recorded in United Kingdom airspace in each year since 1974 took place at or below 2,000 ft above ground level.

Mr. Freeman: Total numbers of air misses in United Kingdom airspace are contained in the CAA publication CAP 526, "UK Airmiss Statistics," a copy of which has been placed in the Library. It is our long-standing policy not to release more detailed statistics on air misses involving military aircraft because in isolation from other, classified, information they can be misleading and do not provide an accurate indicator of flight safety.

NATO Tactical Fighter Weapons Training Centre

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if a decision has yet been made by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation on the location of the proposed North Atlantic Treaty Organisation tactical fighter weapons training centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: A decision has not yet been made on the location of the proposed North Atlantic Treaty Organisation tactical fighter weapons training centre. The matter is still being studied by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Low-Level Flying

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the Royal Air Force's flying training at low level is currently conducted in each of the following areas (a) Canada, (b) the United States of America, (c) the Federal Republic of Germany, (d) Cyprus, (e) Sardinia, (f) the Falkland Islands, (g) the Netherlands, (h) other European locations and (i) other non-European locations.

Mr. Freeman: We do not keep records of the proportion of the Royal Air Force's training at low level conducted in the countries listed, and it would require disproportionate effort to obtain this information from available statistics.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the proportionate increase in the number of night low-flying training sorties carried out by the Royal Air Force as a result of the introduction of the Harrier GR5.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to say in advance of the introduction of the Harrier GR5 what effect this will have on night low-flying training sorties. This is not likely to be clear until the early 1990s. If, however, there is an increase, it will relate closely to the number of Harrier GR5s to be based in the United Kingdom, and is likely to be small.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if flying at less than 100 ft above ground level is authorised anywhere in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Light, fixed-wing aircraft of the Army Air Corps may be authorised to fly at not less than 50 ft minimum separation distance in specially selected and surveyed areas. Throughout the United Kingdom low-flying system helicopters may fly below 100 ft minimum separation distance. However, to limit disturbance to the public, fast jet aircraft and heavy propeller aircraft are not authorised in peace-time to fly at less than 100 ft above ground level although flying at lower levels would almost certainly be necessary in war-time, to avoid enemy defensive systems.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level military training sorties were flown over the United Kingdom by United States Air Force F-111s aircraft in each year since 1974.

Mr. Freeman: Records of low-level training sorties by aircraft type were not kept until 1985, when United States Air Force F-111 flew 11,260 sorties, and 11,148 during 1986.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many enquiries have been received by his Department in each year since 1974 about low-flying training; and how many of these were complaints about disturbance from low flying aircraft.

Mr. Freeman: Of the correspondence received, central records are kept only of low-flying complaints. These are as follows:

Year	Numbers
1974	1,467
1975	1,526
1976	1,279
1977	1,730
1978	2,290
1979	4,004
1980	3,365
1981	4,502
1982	3,304
1983	5,164
1984	5,609
1985	4,206
1986	5,304

[1] Up to 28 February.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the total number of military low-level training sorties flown over the United Kingdom in 1986 was accounted for by (a) fast jets, (b) light jet trainers, (c) heavy propeller-driven aircraft, (d) light propeller-driven aircraft and (e) helicopters.

Mr. Freeman: The proportion of military low-level training sorties flown over the United Kingdom during 1986 for each of the categories stated was as follows:

	Per cent.
Fast jets	61
Light jet trainers	10
Heavy propeller-driven aircraft	2
Light propeller-driven aircraft	1
Helicopters	26

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-level military training sorties flown over the United Kingdom in each year since 1974.

Mr. Freeman: The total number of military low level training sorties flown in the United Kingdom was as follows:

	Number
1974	71,000
1975	78,000

	Number
1976	77,700
1977	76,000
1978	76,000
1979	108,860
1980	122,850
1981	131,840
1982	130,310
1983	128,000
1984	133,500
1985	141,760
1986	151,160
1987	[1]20,749

[1] Up to 28 February.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the changes made since 1974 in the basis of calculation of the numbers of military low-level training sorties over the United Kingdom.

Mr. Freeman: Since 1974 only one change has been made in the calculation of military low-level training sorties over the United Kingdom. Prior to 1985 the number of sorties flown was estimated from the total number of movements logged between low flying areas. Since 1985, the number of sorties flown has been recorded directly. The introduction of the new United Kingdom low-flying system in 1979 did not affect the basis of the calculation of sortie numbers.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the total number of low-level military training sorties flown over the United Kingdom in each year since 1974 was represented by aircraft from (a) the Royal Air Force, (b) other British military services, (c) the United States Air Force, (d) other North Atlantic Treaty Organisation air forces and (e) non-NATO air forces.

Mr. Freeman: Before 1985 statistics of sorties by operating authority were not kept. Since then statistics have been kept, although not in the precise form requested. Details are as follows:

Operating authority	Proportion of sorties flown
	1985	1986
	Per cent.	Per cent.
British Military	81	82
USAF	18	17
Others	1	1

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what date low-level flying by British military aircraft over the United Kingdom at a minimum height of 100 ft above ground level was first authorised.

Mr. Freeman: Ultra low flying, that is flying below 250 ft, has been practised by the RAF since the second world war. It has, however, always been specially authorised, and strictly limited to avoid undue disturbance to the public. In more recent years out policy has been to concentrate such flying in specially designated, sparsely populated, areas in the United Kingdom.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of military air exercises conducted over the United Kingdom in each year since 1974 in which low-level flying down to 100 ft above ground level was authorised.

Mr. Freeman: No military air exercises in the United Kingdom involve flying below a level of 250 ft. Exercises involving ultra low flying, that is below this and down to 100 ft, are normally held in the United States of America and Canada. Some, strictly limited, work-up training for these exercises does take place in the United Kingdom, but within specially designated, sparsely populated areas.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of military low-level training sorties flown over the United Kingdom in 1986 involved authorisation to fly not below (a) 1,500 ft, (b) 1,000 ft, (c) 500 ft, (d) 250 ft, (e) 200 ft, (f) 150 ft and (g) 100 ft.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of his Department's promotional and advertising budget is spent on regional and local newspapers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Expenditure on advertising and promotional material in all media by the Ministry of Defence, and the Central Office of Information on our behalf, amounted to some £10·5 million in 1986-87, predominantly for service and civilian recruitment purposes. Advertising and promotional work is placed with the appropriate medium in the light of the content and objectives addressed. About £8 million was spent with newspapers. A breakdown between the national and local press is not readily available in all cases but where these items are separately recorded it is possible to identify some £0·6 million spent with regional and local newspapers.

Japanese Prisoners of War

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations have been received concerning the possibility of securing compensation from the Japanese Government for prisoners of war held by the Japanese, and who may have been used for trials of germ warfare techniques; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 28 November 1986 at column 377. Since that date, the Ministry has received a further 10 inquiries. Of these, two had been addressed to the Prime Minister and eight to Ministers. For some time we have been investigating the allegations that the Japanese experimented on Allied prisoners of war. Exhaustive searches have been made of a wide range of surviving contemporary files on the treatment of POWs in the far east. The result of these inquiries is that we have no evidence to support allegations that the Japanese experimented on Allied POWs.

Spearfish Torpedo Weapon System

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify the division or divisions in his Department which is or are in charge of the Spearfish torpedo weapon system programme; and whether a single system contractor has been selected for this project.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Within my Department the director general underwater weapons (naval) is in charge of the Spearfish torpedo weapon system programme. We do not expect to make a decision about appointing a single system contractor until the existing Spearfish torpedo development and initial production contract has been completed.

Equestrian Events

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 27 March, Official Report, column 287, if he will list the authorised activities for which military transport can be used for the conveyance of privately owned horses.

Mr. Freeman: Authorised travel at public expense may be granted for any equestrian sport in which the service man is participating, either individually or as a member of a team, in a representative capacity.

Non-Strategic Nuclear Forces

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether Britain has entered any formal note of dissent on any North Atlantic Treaty Organisation decisions relating to non-strategic nucler forces since 1979.

Mr. Stanley: I am not aware of any.

Lance Missile

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether British Ministers, officials and serving officers of the armed forces have taken part in any discussions with their United States counterparts on an enhanced radiation/reduced blast warhead for Lance.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any such discussions.

Montebello Nuclear Planning Group

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government took part in the preparation of the high level group's report to the Montebello nuclear planning group meeting.

Mr. Stanley: Yes.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence why there was no mention of the modernisation component of the Montebello nuclear planning group decision of October 1983 in the subsequent 1984 Defence Estimates.

Mr. Stanley: I assume the hon. Member is referring to paragraphs 121 to 123 of "The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1984". The purpose of these paragraphs was to highlight the main feature of the Montebello decision, namely the very substantial reductions agreed in NATO's land-based stockpile. The paragraphs also explain the background to the Montebello review, explaining that the starting point was NATO's requirement for "adequate numbers of effective intermediate and short range nuclear forces" for the purposes of deterrence. The modernisation component was referred to in paragraph 321 of "The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" and the full text of the Montebello communiqué, including reference to the modernisation component, was placed in the Library after the Montebello meeting.

NATO (Nuclear Artillery Warheads)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation defence planning committee has agreed any proposal from SACEUR for modern new technology nuclear artillery warheads since 1977.

Mr. Stanley: I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to SACEUR's biennial force proposals. The detail of NATO force proposals and force goals is classified.

Air-to-Surface Nuclear Missile

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether there is any British or North Atlantic Treaty Organisation staff target, force goal or other plan for a standoff air-to-surface nuclear missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no British staff target for such a weapon. The details of NATO force goals are classified.

BAOR (Battlefield Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the first new battlefield nuclear weapons will be in service with the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As has already been made clear, no decisions on modernisation as it affects British forces have yet been taken. If and when such decisions are taken, a report will be made to the House at the appropriate time.

W-79 Nuclear Artillery Shells

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether Britain took part in any consultations with the United States prior to United States' deployment of W-79 nuclear artillery shells in Germany.

Mr. Stanley: As this was a matter between the Governments of the United States and the Federal Republic, we were informed but not consulted.

NATO (Real Estate)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost to the United Kingdom of the real estate provided as the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation host nation support.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not readily available; nor would it be easy to assess, for example, the commercial value of a large number of military airfields.

Contingency Allowance (Defence Estimates)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the 3·5 per cent. contingency allowance has been spent, per year, since the publication of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" Cmnd. 8288.

Mr. Stanley: A 3·5 per cent contingency spread over 10 years was assumed in the programme embodied in Cmnd 8288 to allow flexibility to cope with unquantified costs at the time. It has subsequently varied in size from year to year.

If the hon. Member is wishing to know the percentage difference between outturn expenditure and planned expenditure in each year since 1982-83, the information is as follows:

	Per cent.
1982-83	−0·1
1983-84	−1·5
1984-85	−0·7
1985-86	−1·4
[1]1986-87	−2·6

[1] Estimate.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with other North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Governments concerning the procedure for the political authorisation of the use of chemical weapons.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend has had no such discussions.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins) on 25 June 1986 at columns 163-4.

Phantom Squadrons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Phantom squadrons are currently deployed in the United Kingdom air defence role.

Mr. Stanley: Five.

Air Defences

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with NATO allies concerning United Kingdom air defences.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend holds regular meetings with NATO colleagues collectively and individually, at which defence matters of mutual interest are discussed, including from time to time matters relevant to United Kingdom air defence. Most recently, in the course of my right hon. Friend's meeting with M. Giraud on 9-10 March, the decision of both countries to purchase AWACS was discussed, as mentioned in my right hon. Friend's press statement, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning United Kingdom air defences.

Mr. Stanley: Our air defences are regularly tested in national and NATO exercises and the Royal Air Force achieves consistently very high standards in these demanding evaluations. Looking to the future, the major modernisation programme in which we are engaged is now well advanced. This includes the build up of the Tornado F2/F3, whose excellent range and loiter capability make it ideally suited for the air defence role; a comprehensive modernisation of our ground-based radars and command and control systems; and the provision of a modern and effective airborne early warning capability through the purchase of E3A. The modernisation programme when complete will have achieved a major transformation of our air defence capabilities.

Soviet Aircraft (Attack Capability)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the number of Soviet aircraft which are presently capable of attacking the United Kingdom.

Mr. Stanley: Over 500 Soviet aircraft are currently based within sufficient range of the United Kingdom as to be able to attack the United Kingdom without air-to-air refuelling. Most of these aircraft can attack with either nuclear or conventional weapons. However, only a proportion of the aircraft are likely to have the United Kingdom as their initial target.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated number of Soviet aircraft capable of carrying anti-ship missiles which are based in the northern region.

Mr. Stanley: About 130 Soviet naval medium bombers capable of carrying anti-ship missiles are deployed with the Soviet northern fleet and Baltic fleet air forces. In addition, approximately 300 Soviet air force heavy and medium bombers are based within range of northern waters. A proportion of this force is capable of carrying anti-ship missiles and could be allocated for maritime tasks.

Air Defence Ground Environment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of United Kingdom air defence ground environment to date.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost of the improved UKADGE system has been to date: £348 million (FY 86-87 prices) for the command and control system, new radars and communications. In addition, £44 million (outturn prices) has been spent for associated work services. The contracts for the system are at fixed prices. Some 50 per cent. of the overall cost will be recovered from NATO.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when United Kingdom air defence ground environment will be completed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The improved UKADGE system will be progressively brought into operation within the next few years. Our priority throughout the transition from the old to the new system will be to ensure that the United Kingdom air defence system will remain fully operational and effective.

Bloodhound Missile

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Bloodhound missile will be withdrawn from Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Stanley: It is expected that the Bloodhound missile will remain in RAF service into the next century.

Hall and Watts (Contracts)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list any contracts his Department has made since 1979 with Hall and Watts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A number of defence contracts, of a total value of less than £1 million have been placed with Hall and Watts since 1982. The statistics for the years prior to that date are not readily available. It is not my Department's practice, for reasons of commercial confidentiality, to give details of individual contracts.

Lightning Squadrons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Lightning squadrons are currently employed in the United Kingdom air defence role.

Mr. Stanley: Two.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Lightning aircraft will be withdrawn from Royal Air Force service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The Lightnings will withdraw from service as the Tornado F3 squadrons form over the next few years.

NH-90 Helicopter

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has any plans to withdraw from the NH-90 helicopter project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 9 April at columns 470-71.

Nuclear Shell (155mm Artillery)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the development of a new nuclear shell for 155 mm artillery.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government support the need for force modernisation as a necessary part of the rationalisation and reduction of NATO's post-Montebello land-based stockpile in Europe. However, as has been made clear to the House on numerous occasions, no decisions have been taken with regard to the modernisation of weapons in service with British forces.

HMS Upholder

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Upholder will enter Royal Navy service.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 17 July 1984 at column 839 of the Official Report.

Atlantic Convoy

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Royal Navy last carried out an exercise which involved the formation and escort of a convoy across the Atlantic.

Mr. Stanley: The Royal Navy, in conjunction with other NATO navies, regularly practises the protection of convoys. The last exercise involving a convoy across the Atlantic was the NATO exercise Ocean Safari in August-September 1985 referred to in paragraph 2 of Annex B of "The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" (Cmnd. 9763-I).

Norwegian and Barents Seas (Deployment)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many times in the last four years Royal Navy vessels have been deployed in the Barents sea.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 10 February 1987 at column 185.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies concerning the forward deployment of naval forces in the Norwegian and Barents seas.

Mr. Stanley: My Department regularly discusses with our NATO allies many aspects of naval strategy, including deployments in all the waters in which NATO forces might need to operate.

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the vulnerability of aircraft carriers and ASW carriers operating in the Barents or Norwegian seas in the time of war.

Mr. Stanley: Our plans take into account the threats likely to be faced by Royal Navy ships in all the waters in which they might need to operate.

NATO Exercises (Losses)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when was the last time that a North Atlantic Treaty Organisation aircraft carrier or ASW carrier was declared sunk during an exercise.

Mr. Stanley: Carriers are assigned to NATO only in NATO-sponsored exercises, the details of whose scenarios and play are classified.

Soviet Navy (Atlantic Exercise)

Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Soviet navy last carried out a major exercise in the Atlantic which demonstrated a threat to North Atlantic Treaty Organisation sea lines of communication.

Mr. Stanley: The Soviet Navy last demonstrated its ability to deploy a wide range of naval forces into the Atlantic on a large scale in July 1985, when surface ships, submarines, and aircraft of the Soviet Northern Fleet operated in the Atlantic as part of a major naval exercise. Aspects of this exercise demonstrated the intention to carry out operations in an area through which NATO sea lines of communication pass. A significant Soviet submarine deployment in the western Atlantic is in progress.

Nuclear Missiles

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish his Department's assessment of the numbers of short-range, intermediate-range nuclear force missiles on each side that led to his assertion, Official Report, 9 March column 40, that the Soviet Union has a 9:1 superiority in these missiles; what is his Department's assessment of the number of launchers on each side; and what is his Department's assessment of the accuracy and range of Soviet FROG and SCUD missiles.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend's reference to the Soviet Union's 9:1 SRINF superiority was based on the figures given in Figure 15 of Annex A of "The Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" (Cmnd 9763-I) showing the Warsaw Pact having 650 Scud and Scaleboard-SS22launchers compared with NATO's 72 Pershing 1 launchers. Detailed assessments of the ranges and accuracy of Soviet missiles are classified. I am able to provide the following approximate figures for maximum range:

	km
Scud	300
Frog	70

NATO Force Goals (Artillery and Missiles)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are North Atlantic Treaty Organisation force goals for (a) new nuclear artillery shells, (b) new nuclear surface-to-surface missiles and (c) new nuclear air-to-surface missiles.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under Secretary of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Member for Meriowydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Thomas) on 25 July 1986 at column 644.

RAF Binbrook

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is now able to make an announcement on the future of RAF Binbrook.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add at present to what was said by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces at columns 1118-19 in the debate on the Royal Air Force on 22 January.

Sea Wolf Missile

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects to award contracts for the development of the Sea Wolf missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I presume that the hon. Member is referring to the conventional and vertical launch Sea Wolf missile. I do not expect to award any further development contracts. The conventional launch missile is now in service and a contract for development of the vertical launch sea wolf missile was placed in 1984.

Territorial Units (South-West)

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the turnover of young people in Territorial units in the south-west; and what steps are proposed to attract youngsters of the right calibre.

Mr. Freeman: Figures on the turnover of young people in territorial units in the south-west are not held centrally and cannot be provided without a disproportionate amount of effort. The current overall turnover for the Territorial Army is 34·33 per cent. per annum. The Territorial Army is open to men between the ages of 17½ and 56, depending on the type of unit they wish to join, the type of engagement and their previous military experience. There are two types of engagement for youngsters who are too young to join as adult soldiers; the young soldier who may join at between 17 and 17½, and the junior soldier who may in limited numbers enlist at ages between 15 and 17 amongst others as trumpeters, buglers, drummers, pipers or bandsmen. Young men reaching the end of their Army Cadet Force service are encouraged to enlist into the Territorial Army.

Foreign Service Men

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many foreign service men and from what country were stationed in the United Kingdom on 1 July 1979 and for each year to date.

Mr. Stanley: As far as United States service men are concerned, these figures are not collected centrally, but the approximate number of United States service men stationed in the United Kingdom as at 31 December 1979 and for each year since were as follows:

Year	Number
1979	25,500
1980	27,500
1981	27,500
1982	29,000
1983	31,000
1984	31,000
1985	31,000
1986	31,500

Information relating to the numbers and nationalities of foreign service men in NATO posts and on exchange attachments and training courses in the United Kingdom for the years since 1979 is not held centrally and could not be compiled except at disproportionate cost.

Military Bases

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many military bases in the United Kingdom are (a) under United Kingdom command (b) under United States command and (c) under joint command.

Mr. Stanley: I will answer shortly.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current order position in respect of the European fighter aircraft for the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No European fighter aircraft have as yet been ordered. In October 1986 my right hon. Friend signed the general memorandum of understanding for the programme with his fellow Defence Ministers from Germany, Italy and Spain. The international project definition phase ended in September 1986 and the nations are currently evaluating the outcome, with a view to deciding whether to proceed to full development, which is currently planned to begin later this year. In the meantime industry is continuing to work on risk-reducing activities with the aim of refining the design of the aircraft and engines.

Saudi Arabia (Submarines)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the costs, and how they will be met, of the training and support package offered by the Royal Navy in conjunction with VSEL to supply Saudi Arabia with submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost of the training and support packages offered to the Saudis must depend upon the extent of those packages. This is unlikely to be resolved until the completion of detailed negotiations with the Saudis. As to how these costs would be met, it is intended that VSEL's offer, which is one of five competing bids, would be the subject of a Firm to Government agreement between VSEL and the Government of Saudi Arabia. In this case all sums due to the UK MOD would be paid by VSEL.

Visiting Forces Act

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many reports he received from American forces in the United Kingdom about breaches of United Kingdom law in relation to which no action was taken because of the grant of immunity under the Visiting Forces Act.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his question to the Home Department today.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the number of unemployed claimants drawing housing benefit, distinguishing between those drawing supplementary benefit, and thereby being eligible for housing benefit and those on national insurance benefit who also claim housing benefit.

Mr. Lyell: There are four broad categories of unemployed people receiving housing benefit. The overall numbers and categories requested are best indicated by reference to claimants receiving rate rebates. The estimates of the average number of unemployed people receiving rate rebates are as follows:

Great Britain, 1986-87

	Thousands
(a) Receiving certificated rate rebate, unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit	160
(b) Receiving certificated rate rebate and supplementary benefit	950
(c) Receiving standard rate rebate and unemployment benefit	100
(d) Receiving standard rate rebate	80
Total	1,290

Note: Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from local authorities about the adequacy of his subsidy allocation for preparation costs to be incurred for the introduction of changes to the housing benefit scheme in April 1988.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements he has made with local authorities to inform him of the amount by which owner-occupier claimants miss out on housing benefit supplement so that later claims can take advantage of his arrangements to allow them to escape the mortgage trap.

Mr. Major: Special arrangements are not necessary. A condition for receiving housing benefit supplement is that a person has failed to qualify for normal supplementary benefit solely on income grounds. Claimants who are refused supplementary benefit under the normal rules solely because of the mortgage interest limitation are advised to claim again after 16 weeks, whether or not they receive housing benefit supplement.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why, in the light of his undertaking to local authorities they would have 12 months to prepare for the introduction of the new housing benefit arrangements effective from April 1988, he has not yet tabled regulations and issued guidance on this subject.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he proposes to lay regulations for the 1988 housing benefit reforms.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1987, c. 503]: The regulations for the 1988 housing benefit reforms will be laid before Parliament when the Government's proposals on benefit rates are finalised in the autumn. The draft currently contains purely illustrative rates and it is not possible to legislate on the basis of figures which will not be implemented.

We are, however, committed to publishing our firm proposals on the detailed structure of the new scheme as soon as possible, so that local authorities have adequate time to prepare. The local authority associations made a very large number of helpful comments during consultation on the regulations and these are now being considered urgently.

I have informed the associations that the revised regulations will be made available to local authorities in draft around the end of this month. Guidance on the key areas of change will follow shortly after. Copies of the regulations and the guidance will be placed in the Library.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants have been refused single discretionary payments in each of the last three years.

Mr. Lyell: The number of single payments refused in each of the last three years is as follows:

Year (May-April)	Number of payments refused
1984-85	722,852
1985-86	1,120,181
1986-87	[1] 1,885,788

[1] Provisional figures for period May to March only.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the supplementary benefit payable on account of someone in residential care is intended to cover the cost of day-care facilities; who is liable to meet the charge for such a person residing in a private home but receiving day-care provided by a voluntary organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The supplementary benefit board and lodging allowance for people in residential care homes contains no specific allocations for particular items of expenditure. Under the Residential Care Homes Regulations 1984 the proprietor of a private home is required, having regard to the size of the home and the number, age, sex and condition of residents, to make suitable arrangements for the training, occupation and recreation of residents. If the proprietor makes arrangements with a voluntary organisation to provide such facilities in the home or elsewhere he would then be liable for any charge levied by the voluntary organisation and may take this into account in fixing the charges payable by residents. Residents who are entitled to supplementary benefit receive help with their charges up to the national limits.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect British Gas vouchers will have on entitlement to supplementary benefit, including single payments for fuel costs.

Mr. Major: The vouchers that I understand will start to become payable to British Gas Shareholders from 30 June 1987 will be treated for supplementary benefit purposes as income from capital and will be disregarded. The normal capital rules for weekly and single payments of supplementary benefit will continue to apply to the value of the shares themselves.

Tay-Sachs Disease

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to avert the closure of the Prince Philip paediatric unit at Guys hospital and the ending of its unique work screening for Tay-Sachs disorder; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: There is no question of the Prince Philip paediatric department laboratory closing. Work on screening for Tay-Sachs disorder will continue though the level of funding and activity is still under consideration.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire on 31 March, Official Report, column 488, if he will take steps to obtain and publish a list of all registered nursing homes which are within the Mid-Staffordshire parliamentary constituency but which are outside the Mid-Staffordshire health authority.

Mrs. Currie: Information by parliamentary constituency is not held centrally. I now understand that my hon. Friend's constituency extends to parts of south-east Staffordshire health district. Following is a list of homes registered as at 31 December 1986 by south-east Staffordshire health authority.

Institutions registered with South-East Staffordshire district health authority under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984.

Little Aston Nursing Home, Sutton Coldfield.

Bramshall Old Rectory Nursing and Residential Home, Uttoxeter.[2]

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of long-stay patients discharged from each mental handicap hospital in England and Wales since 1981.

Mrs. Currie: The table shows the number of people discharged from each National Health Service mental handicap hospital in England after a length of stay of five years or more, for each year from 1981 to 1985. Mental handicap hospitals and units are those which contain beds for the treatment of mentally handicapped people only. Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations seeking to change rules relating to organ transplants in order to enable relatives of deceased persons to authorise their use.

Mrs. Currie: No representations have been received. The Human Tissue Act 1961 already provides for the relatives of deceased persons to consent to the removal of organs for medical purposes.

Hospitals

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospitals there were in the United Kingdom in (a) June 1979 and (b) February 1986, respectively.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. In 1979 there were 2,023 National Health Service hospitals in England. The corresponding figure for 1985, the latest available, was 1,862. These figures are based on a count of separately administered hospitals which provide residential facilities during the year. Day hospitals and clinics are therefore not included. Figures for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service hospitals of over 800 beds were built between (a) 1960 and 1970, (b) 1970 and 1980 and (c) since 1980.

Mrs. Currie: Information held centrally shows that hospital developments, often built in phases, culminating in provision of over 800 beds were completed as follows:

	Number
1960 to 1970	3
1971 to 1980	12
1981 to date	3

Overall, since 1981, 195 health building schemes, each costing over £1 million, have been completed.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospital beds there were in the United Kingdom in (a) June 1979 and (b) February 1986, respectively.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. For the latest information available for England I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) on 10 February, at columns 201-204. Figures for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospital bed places have been available during each year since 1974 in (a) Yorkshire and Humberside and (b) Barnsley metropolitan council area.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. National Health Service hospital activity figures are collected centrally according to regional and district health authority area. The available figures are given in the table.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) geriatric, (b) surgical and (c) specialist beds are available in the Bath district health authority in July of each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. The available information is given in the table. Between 1979 and 1985 the number of in-patient cases treated in Bath DHA increased by 14·1 per cent. from 43,048 to 49,135.

[3] Units for the younger disabled and staff wards.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received concerning the proposal of Bath district health authority to reduce bed numbers in Chippenham and Melksham hospitals.

Mrs. Currie: We have received 330 representations from members of the public, about possible changes to services at Frogwell hospital, Chippenham and at Melksham, Bradford on Avon and Malmesbury hospitals connected with the Bath district health authority's 1987-88 £1·3 million service development programme.

No decision has yet been taken by the health authority. If any of the proposals involve reduction or significant changes of use of hospital beds, the proposals would, of course, be subject to the usual formal consultation procedure.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each district health authority in England in 1985 (a) the total number of beds in non-psychiatric National Health Service hospitals, (b) the total number of beds in private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Nursing Homes Act 1984 and (c) the number of beds in private institutions expressed as a percentage of the number of non-psychiatric hospital beds.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 30 March 1987, c. 409]: The information requested is as follows:

Number of non-psychiatric beds in National Health Service hospitals, number of beds in private institutions registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984 and the latter expressed as a percentage of the former. 1985

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will refer to his advisory committee the findings relating to cough medicines and benzodiazepines in the "Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin" published on 23 March dealing with the limited list of drugs available under the National Health Service, a copy of which has been forwarded to him.

Mr. Newton: Yes. I have arranged for all members of the Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs to receive a copy of the bulletin.

Nurses

Mr. George asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses entered and left the nursing profession in (a) England and Wales, (b) the West Midlands regional health authority and (c) Walsall in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: The figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

I regret that information of this nature for England is not collected centrally. However, we are aware of work undertaken by the Institute of Manpower Studies which suggests that about 10 per cent. of qualified nurses and midwives leave the National Health Service each year. This figure includes retirements and those leaving for non-National Health Service nursing employment. They are not therefore all lost to the profession. On that basis, an estimated 23,500 in whole-time equivalent terms left the National Health Service in England in 1985-86.

After allowing for wastage and failure to practise on qualification, around 22,500 learners completed training and entered the National Health Service in the year to 31 March 1986. It is estimated that about 7,000 qualified staff in whole-time equivalent terms returned to the National Health Service in that year. This estimated excess of joiners over leavers compares closely with the actual increase in the number of qualified staff from 1984 to 1985 of 6,400 whole-time equivalents.

No information is available on the number of qualified nurses and midwives entering and leaving the nursing profession in West Midlands regional health authority and Walsall and it would not necessarily be correct to estimate the numbers on the same basis as for England as a whole.

Blood Donors

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, further to his answer of Monday 6 April, Official Report, column 107, if he will indicate when this policy on restricting blood donors was implemented; and if he will estimate the anticipated reduction in the number of blood donors.

Mr. Newton: The National Blood Transfusion Service has maintained for at least 25 years the policy of deferring potential donors following their return to the United Kingdom from certain tropical areas.

Additionally, since September 1986 potential donors have been asked not to give blood if they have visited certain parts of Africa and have had sex with men or women living there.

These restrictions affect only a minute proportion of potential donors and have not resulted in any identifiable reduction in donor numbers.

NHS Property (Norwich)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all National Health Service property within the Norwich health authority district stating acreage and value in each case and also giving the overall acreage and value.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a list of the property held by the Norwich health authority as soon as possible. Up-to-date information about the values of National Health Service property is not held centrally.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the Oldham, West constituency claimed maternity grant in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested.

The Oldham, West constituency is covered by the Departments local offices at Oldham and Failsworth, although their boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency. The numbers of maternity grant claims received at these two offices during the 1986 calendar year were as follows:

	Number
Oldham	1,021
Failsworth	1,349

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding the sending of incorrect instructions about the last date to qualify for a single payment for maternity needs to local offices; whether correcting instructions had been received in all offices by the week before the deadline for claims of 6 April; if he will make transitional arrangements so that those eligible for payment for a baby born on or before 17 May can claim up to 17 May; and if he will mount an immediate national advertising campaign to publicise these arrangements.

Mr. Major: We have received one letter concerning the instructions relating to the transitional arrangements for the payment of supplementary benefit single payments for maternity needs which were issued to local offices in late January this year. Prior to receipt of this letter, as a result of a telephone enquiry received by the Department, it had already been decided to issue clarifying guidance to all local offices about applications for payments for maternity needs received before 6 April where the week of expected confinement was after that date. This was done on 5 March 1987 and we do not propose to take any further action.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether women on supplementary benefit and without savings of over £500 can claim a single payment for maternity needs for a baby due on or before 17 May, provided their claim was made before 6 April.

Mr. Major: A supplementary benefit single payment for maternity needs can be made, subject to the normal eligibility conditions, for a claim made before 6 April 1987 provided that, at the time of the claim, the expected week of confinement was not more than six weeks ahead.

Benefit Claims (Legality)

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he, or anyone in his Department, has communicated details or findings of any inquiry from his Department relating to the legality of any claim for social security raised by an hon. Member to a person or persons not authorised to receive such information.

Mr. Lyell: I am not aware of any such breach of the Department's rules of confidentiality. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind, perhaps he will write to me and I shall look into it.

AIDS

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria were used in deciding not to place advertising for the "Danger of Aids" campaign in the Lancashire Evening Telegraph; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The criterion used in the selection of media is that of cost-effective cover of the target audiences.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has any plans to arrange for staff of his Department to be screened for antibodies to human immunodeficiency virus.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 407]: No.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any current or former staff of his Department have been found to have developed AIDS or antibodies to HIV.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 407]: AIDS and HIV infection are not notifiable diseases and there is no obligation on staff to disclose their infection. Such information as any Department may have is therefore inevitably incomplete and is anyway subject to the normal rules of medical confidentiality.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to ensure that staff of his Department are warned about those homosexual and other activities which are deemed to involve a high risk of AIDS infection.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 407]: In April 1986 the Management and Personnel Office, after consulting the Government's chief medical officer, circulated all Departments with guidance to managers and model notes for staff. This Department drew on those notes and in June 1986 provided guidance for staff. I understand that copies of the MPO guidance are available in the Library. In addition, members of staff will have received copies of the Department's leaflet distributed to all households in the United Kingdom in January 1987.

Benefits

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people there are in Wales in receipt of, respectively (a) supplementary benefit, (b) supplementary pension and (c) family income supplement.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available information is as follows:

Benefit	Date	Number
(a) Supplementary allowance	February 1986	198,000 claimants
(b) Supplementary pension	February 1986	92,000 claimants
(c) Family income supplement	May 1986	13,000 families

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the estimated cost in benefits in a full year of unemployed school leavers between the ages of 16 and 18; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 3 April 1987, c. 656]: The information is not available in the precise form requested. Based on the number of unemployed claimants aged 16 and 17, and the average weekly payment of supplementary benefit to them on a particular day in December 1984, the annual expenditure was £176 million. This figure cannot be regarded as an accurate estimate of the total expenditure on supplementary benefit to this group of claimants because (a) it takes no account of the seasonal variations in the numbers in this group which are likely to arise particularly because of the patterns in school leaving; (b) it does not include occasional payments such as single payments for exceptional needs.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will express (a) the basic pension and (b) the single person's supplementary benefit level if unemployed as a percentage of average earnings in (i) 1957 (ii) 1979 (iii) 1987.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1987, c. 412-13]: The table gives the basic pension for a single person and a married couple and the ordinary supplementary benefit scale rate for a single householder as a percentage of average net earnings of single and married male manual workers, as appropriate. Benefit assistance for a householder on the ordinary rate of supplementary benefit would also include the meeting of housing costs. Pensioners reliant on the basic pension or little more would also be likely to be eligible for help from supplementary benefit or housing benefit. These figures therefore understate the extent to which social security benefit help replaces earnings.

Rates of benefit expressed as a percentage of average net earnings[1]

	Basic retirement pension		Supplementary benefit—
	Single	Married	Single householder
January 1985[2]	23·9	36·0	21·5
November 1979	31·8	48·4	25·0
1987-88[3]	29·1	44·3	22·4

[1] Average gross earnings of male manual workers less tax and national insurance contributions at the not contracted-out rate.

[2] Comparisons are normally made with benefit rates at uprating dates. No uprating took place in 1957.

[3] Benefit rates at April 1987. Earnings information for April not yet available and figures therefore based on estimated average financial year date. This is likely to be higher than actual average earnings at April.

Dental Health (Survey)

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the latest practical time by which he can announce arrangements for the adult dental health survey due to be held in 1988 as a follow-up to those surveys held in 1978 an 1968; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley) on 19 December 1986, at columns 785-86.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many individual persons in Wales received payments of severe weather allowance this winter; and if all these persons received this payment for two weeks.

Mr. Major: The latest available figures show that approximately 127,000 £5 payments had been made in Wales by 17 March. Separate figures on the number of individuals receiving payments are not available, but the great majority of successful claimants in Wales will have received a total of £10 in respect of the two weeks for which this help was made available.

Disabled Young People

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy on 16-year-old disabled young people who are still at school obtaining an assessment under section 4 of the Disabled Persons (Representation, Consultation and Services) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Section 4 of the Disabled Person (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 came into force on 1 April 1987. It makes it clear that a local authority has a duty to decide whether a disabled person's needs call for the provision of any services in accordance with section 2(1) of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970, if requested to do so by the disabled person or by any person, for example a parent, who provides care for him or her in the circumstances mentioned in section 8 of the Act. This provision would apply to requests made by 16-year-old disabled young people who are still at school or by their carers.

Blood Products

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer of 7 April, Official Report, column 207, on blood products, he will give the date in 1984 on which manufacturers of factor VIII initially found that heat treatment techniques inactivated HIV; if he will give details of the operation of the named patient basis used for prescription of heat-treated factor VIII; and from what date in 1984 heat-treated factor VIII could be so prescribed.

Mr. Newton: The first account of experimental work which showed that HIV in factor VIII could be inactivated by heat treatment was published in October 1984 (Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report 1984, Volume 33, 589-91). This work led to the National Haemophilia Society of the United States of America advising that heat treated factor VIII should be considered for haemophiliacs even though its protection against AIDS remained to be proven.

Similar advice was published in the United Kingdom in December 1984 (Lancet 1984, Vol. 2, 1433-1435).

However, not until February 1985 (Lancet 1985, Vol 1 271-272) was evidence published which showed that heat treatment of factor VIII actually reduced transmission of HIV to haemophiliacs.

Factor VIII products which had been heat treated to prevent the transmission of hepatitis were under development by several manufacturers throughout 1984 but with limited availability. The realisation that heat treatment procedures could also inactivate HIV led to the wider availability of these factor VIII products after October 1984.

The "named patient basis" refers to section 9 of the Medicines Act 1968. This exempts a doctor from the licensing provisions of the Act in respect of a medicinal product which is specifically prepared or imported by him for administration to a particular patient of his. There is no statutory requirement to notify the licensing authority about named patient prescribing, although practitioners are encouraged to do so. It is not therefore possible to give a precise first use date for such products.

Departmental Offices (Smoking)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what negotiations have taken place with trade unions about smoking in the Department of Health and Social Security offices;

(2) what protection from tobacco smoke is offered to Department of Health and Social Security employees;

(3) what is his Department's policy with regard to smoking in Department of Health and Social Security offices by (a) the general public and (b) Department of Health and Social Security employees.

Mr. Lyell: It has been the Department's policy, since 1979, to discourage the general public from smoking within its offices by the use of suitable signs and posters. Staff are generally allowed to smoke at their place of work, but must not do so whilst attending to members of the public, nor in areas of high fire risk. Staff are also asked not to smoke in lifts and corridors. For the protection of staff from tobacco smoke, local management throughout the Department have been encouraged to liaise with their trade unions with the aim of prohibiting, or limiting, smoking in staff restaurants and discouraging smoking at conferences and meetings.

In view of the growing concern about the hazards of tobacco smoking, management and the Departmental trade union side have agreed to form a joint working party to review the policy on smoking. Work on this review has already begun.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the waiting list for (a) urgent and (b) non-urgent hospital admissions for the Bath district health authority for (i) March 1987, (ii) September 1986, (iii) March 1986, (iv) September 1985 and (v) March 1985.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. For information from March 1985 to September 1986 I refer the hon. Member to the hospital in-patient waiting list summary booklets, copies of which have been placed in the Library. For more recent information he may wish to write to the chairman of the Bath district health authority.

Kidney Patients

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many kidney transplants have been performed each year since 1979; and what was the waiting list for each of these years.

Mrs. Currie: According to information provided by the United Kingdom Transplant Service the number of cadaveric kidney transplant operations performed, and the numbers on the waiting list at 31 December during each of the years from 1979, were as follows:

	Transplants performed	Waiting list at 31 December
1979	842	1,450
1980	988	1,734
1981	905	2,076
1982	1,033	2,250
1983	1,144	2,485
1984	1,433	2,533
1985	1,336	3,215
1986	[1]1,493	3,224

[1] Notified to date. Late notifications may necessitate minor revisions.

The waiting list has continued to grow as increasing numbers of patients can be treated by transplant. We are concerned to see an expansion in the transplant programme, but this can be achieved only if more donor organs are made available.

Pensioners

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been for a worker on average earnings retiring in (a) 1974, (b) 1979, (c) 1984 and (d) 1987 (i) the level of the retirement pension, (ii) average occupational pension, (iii) the state earnings-related pension scheme pension, where applicable, (iv) average investment income for a worker on average earnings.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Health Authority (Private Patient Income)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for the financial year 1985-86 the health authorities for which statutory auditors have issued reports of poor control over private patient income.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 9 March 1987, c. 73]: The statutory audit reports for the financial year 1985-86 included comments on the control over private patient income or debt collection procedures in the following health authorities:

Bloomsbury
City and Hackney
North Hertfordshire
Riverside
Southampton and South West Hampshire

Families (Benefits)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing (a) the number of families on family income supplement and the number with children, (b) the number of one-parent families drawing the special allowance, (c) the number of families on unemployment benefit drawing social security and the number with children, (d) the number of other families on social security and the number with children, (e) the number of families paid other kinds of dependency addition and (f) the number of children covered by each of the foregoing categories.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1987, c. 257]: The information requested is set out in the tables.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Scotch Whisky

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what subjects were discussed at his last meeting with representatives of the Scotch whisky industry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member on 20 January, at column 494.

Foodstuffs (Irradiation)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about the irradiation of foodstuffs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services on 9 April, at column 407.

Food Labelling

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received on the subject of food labelling.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regularly receive comments and inquiries from many sources on a wide range of labelling matters. The most recent representations I have received have been on various aspects of the EC proposals to amend the food labelling directive.

Fences

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been given by way of grant for each year that it has been available to assist farmers in the erection of fences.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. The following information may be helpful:

United Kingdom grant paid for fences and associated gates, 1980-86 (£ million)

	England, Wales, Northern Ireland	Scotland[1]
1980	2·0	2·5
1981	3·2	2·2

Wetlands

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will state, for each year for which the grant has been available, the amount of money given to landowners or farmers for the purpose of draining wetlands.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. The following information may be helpful:

1980	43·4
1981	41·1

Ponds

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will state, for each year the scheme was in operation, the amount of money that was given to farmers by way of grant to assist them to eliminate ponds.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Grants for land reclamation works in Great Britain, including the related elimination of ponds, were discontinued in 1984.

Hedgerows

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money has been given by way of grant for each year that it has been available to assist farmers to remove hedgerows.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Grants for the removal of hedges were discontinued in December 1986.

Advertising

Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of his Department's advertising and promotional budget is spent in regional and local newspapers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The proportion of publicity expenditure spent by the department on local and regional advertising in 1986-87 was 1·4 per cent. This amounted to a total of £5,000.

Financial Management Initiative

Mr. Latham asked the minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the effect on his Department of the financial management initiative.

Mr. Jopling: The financial management initiative covers a wide range of reforms to improve management in central Government in support of the Government's commitment to give value for money spent in the public's name. The initiative has built on work already being done in individual departments and its effects are increasingly indistinguishable from those flowing from other improvements in management and steps to improve value for money.

Major developments in MAFF in response to the initiative have included:

(a) the creation of MINIM, the Ministry's top management system, which provides a basis on which Ministers and senior management review in depth the departments' aims, the objectives of its programmes and the resources used in carrying them out;

(b) the introduction in 1986, following development work in the Ministry's eastern region, of a system of decentralised budgetary control for running cost expenditure. This system currently covers 75 per cent. of the Ministry's manpower and 60 per cent. of running costs. Increased financial responsibility has been delegated to line managers, thereby encouraging them to make more effective and efficient use of resources. The Ministry's supply estimates have been restructured to bring MAFF's running costs together in a single vote and to show the breakdown by the main organisation units (class IV, vote 5 of the 1987-88 Supply Estimates);

(c) the creation of a computer-based management accounting information system to produce monthly reports of expenditure by budget item for managers who control budgets.

The introduction of these systems has also been supported in the Ministry by a comprehensive programme of FMI training for staff at all levels.

FMI systems have had a positive effect in clarifying aims, in reviewing priorities, in providing improved data for decision-making and in identifying the scope for improved value for money. Some of these improvements are shown in the material contained in the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 56). As my hon. Friend is aware, further information is provided in the NAO report of 21 October 1986 on the financial management initiative (HC. 588) and in the evidence given on that report in December 1986 to the Public Accounts Committee by the Ministry's accounting officer (HC. 61-ii). I am satisfied that the initiative is improving the management of the Ministry and thus securing better value for money.

Common Wheat

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the average price of common wheat received by the producer in the United Kingdom, Germany, and France (a) in national currency and (b) converted to pound sterling at the market rates prevailing on the latest date for which this information is available.

Mr. Gummer: Common wheat producer prices are not available for the three countries.

For the week ending Wednesday 8 April market prices for milling wheat were as shown below:

	National currency per tonne	£ per tonne
Germany (Hamburg)	477·50 DM	162·90
France (Rouen)	1,461·55 FF	149·90
United Kingdom (Yorkshire)	—	[1] 131·50

Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and food how much of the overall expenditure on agriculture, fisheries and food, as shown in the public expenditure White paper is attributable to (a) agriculture, (b) fisheries, (c) food, (d) forestry, (e) court defence and (f) all the other non-agricultural activities including civil defence for 1985-86, 1986-87 and the forecast for 1987-88.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is set out in the table. It has not been possible to isolate expenditure on food.

Pound Sterling

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the average percentage difference between the value of the pound sterling and the green rate for the pound sterling for each six months period since January 1979.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Food Exports (Forms)

Dame Peggy Fenner asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek simplification of European Economic Community forms for export of food.

Mr. Gummer: The information required of exporters is kept to the minimum necessary to meet common agricultural policy and Customs and Excise requirements. It is the Government's objective to simplify the paperwork as much as possible. To that end the United Kingdom has taken part in discussions with the European Commission on the introduction, on 1 January 1988, of a revised method of documentation for imports and exports — generally called the single administrative document — and will continue to work for the greatest possible alignment of remaining documents with the SAD.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is transferring milk quota bought under the outgoers scheme from England to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Badgers

Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and food if he intends to extend badger killing to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No. My powers in relation to the control of wildlife to prevent the spread of disease to livestock contained in section 21 of the Animal Health Act 1981 do not extend to Northern Ireland.

ENVIRONMENT

Rents

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the average level of fair rents registered for unfurnished lettings in the private sector in (a) Westminster, (b) Tottenham and (c) Hampstead in each of the years 1983 to 1986 indicating (i) average weekly rents, (ii) the average cost per square unit of floor space and (iii) rateable values in the most convenient form available.

Mr. Tracey: The information available is from the sample of rents registered in each year by rent officers and it is classified only to London borough level.

Housing

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of (a) council, (b) private and (c) housing association housing starts for each year since 1974 in (i) Yorkshire and Humberside, (ii) Barnsley metropolitan council area and (iii) Barnsley, West and Penistone constituency.

Mr. John Patten: The information for Yorkshire and Humberside for the years 1975 to 1985 appears in table 6.4 of "Housing and Construction Statistics, 1975-1985" and provisional figures for 1986 are in table 1.3 of the quarterly "Housing and Construction Statistics" No. 28: copies are available in the Library. In 1974, there were 7,626 dwelling starts for local authorities, 1,024 for housing associations and 10,212 for the private sector in the region; there were another 13 starts for government departments.

Starts reported in the Barnsley area appear in the following issues of "Local Housing Statistics" which are also available in the Library:

	Issue Number	Table Number
1974	33	5
1975	37	5
1976	41	5
1977	45	5
1978	49	5
1979	59	4
1980 to 1983	73	1(b) to 1(e)
1984	77	1(b)
1985	78	1(b)

For the years up to 1983, housing associations are included within the category "other public sector". In Barnsley there were 86 starts in this category in 1974, some of which may have been for Government Departments; the starts reported in 1979 and 1983 were all for housing associations. For the first nine months of 1986, no local authority starts have been reported, but 167 for housing associations and 244 for the private sector.

Information is not collected for individual constituencies.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department takes to ensure that the allocation of properties by housing trusts complies with the aims and policies of equal opportunity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I will answer this question shortly.

Toilet Flush Systems

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received concerning the change in the water byelaws to allow a 7-litre flush system in toilets.

Mr. John Patten: I have received no recent representations.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there are any restrictions on (a) the import and (b) the installation of 7-litre toilet flush systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: There are no restrictions on the import of toilet flush systems but their installation must comply with the construction and water use requirements of water undertakers' byelaws.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether (a) United Kingdom-manufactured and (b) imported 7-litre toilet flush systems are governed by water byelaws.

Mr. John Patten: Water byelaws include requirements governing the construction of and water used by toilet flush systems. These requirements apply equally to products of United Kingdom manufacture and to imports.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to remove anomalies in the regulation of United Kingdom manufactured and imported 7-litre toilet flush systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I am not aware of any anomalies in any regulations concerning United Kingdom manufactured and imported toilet flush systems.

Plumbers

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the establishment of a formal registration system for plumbers; and if he will make a statement on plumber registration systems in other European countries.

Mr. John Patten: I do not intend at present to establish a formal registration system for plumbers. The Institute of Plumbing already runs a voluntary registration scheme recently recognised under the British Standards Institute public register inspection maintenance assessment scheme.

Beaches

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the beaches in the United Kingdom which currently meet European Economic Community safety and health standards.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 30 March, at column 418.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the local authority associations on developing grant-related expenditure assessments for local authorities personal social services expenditure; what steps he has taken to ensure that personal social services grant-related expenditures reflect need; and what proposals he has to develop personal social services grant-related expenditures in the future.

Dr. Boyson: I will answer this question shortly.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if, when determining 1988-89 grant-related expenditure assessments for local authorities' expenditure on adult education, he will take account of (a) the case for those who are disadvantaged in the labour market to have greater access to relevant courses and (b) the variations between local education authorities in the capacity to generate income through fees;

(2) whether he will amend the grant-related expenditure assessment for local authorities' expenditure on the library service to reflect (a) the demands generated by the elderly, the unemployed and ethnic minorities and students and (b) the provision of libraries and specialised services in regional and business centres.

Dr. Boyson: Grant-related expenditure assessments for 1987-88 were approved by the House on 26 March. We are now consulting the local authority associations on arrangements for the 1988-89 settlement. We intend to bring forward proposals for the 1988-89 settlement in the autumn.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will re-examine the grant-related expenditure assessment for local authorities' expenditure on non-HRA housing expenditure and in particular (a) the data sources for the assessment of need and (b) alternative treatment of loan charges.

Dr. Boyson: The grant-related expenditure assessment for non-HRA housing expenditure was reviewed fully last year by representatives of central and local government through the grants working group. We do not propose to review it again this year.

Slum Clearance (Compensation)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has of freeholders of houses in slum clearance areas seeking compensation on the grounds that repair convenants have not been kept, thereby increasing demand for improvement grants prior to clearance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have no evidence to suggest that action by freeholders of houses in slum clearance areas is increasing the demand for improvement grants.

Compulsory Purchase Order (Kensington and Chelsea)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received from the borough of Kensington and Chelsea an application for confirmation of a compulsory purchase order in respect of six properties at Coulson street and Anderson street, SW3; and if, in view of the time the premises remained empty, he will make it his policy to hold an early inquiry and make an early decision on the application.

Mr. John Patten: Compulsory purchase orders made under the Housing Acts are dealt with as soon as possible, as stated in circular 6/85. The order in question was received on 17 February. An objection to the order has also been received and a local inquiry has been arranged for 17 June.

Play Board

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what arrangements are being made in respect of the staff of Play Board, following the liquidation of ACPR Limited on 31 March;

(2) what time scale he envisages for the conclusion of the discussions relating to children's play, described by the Under-Secretary of State in his speech to the House on 6 April, Official Report, column 144; and what interim co-ordinating arrangements are being made following the voluntary liquidation of Play Board.

Mr. Tracey: The Sports Council is now discussing the future development of children's play with local authority associations and other interested parties and expect to reach conclusions in September. In the meantime the council proposes to continue some of the work undertaken by Play Board through the setting-up of an information and advisory service.

In September 1986 the council and Play Board agreed to start negotiations on our proposal that Play Board's role and functions be merged with those of the council — a proposal which offered the clear prospect of continuing employment on play-related work within the council for Play Board's staff. On March 5 Play Board resolved to withdraw from these negotiations and to enter into liquidation. I very much regret the consequences these decisions have had for Play Board's staff.

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what alternatives to the amalgamation of Play Board with the Sports Council he considered before September 1986; and why he rejected them;

(2) what response he made, or proposes to make, to the representations made by organisations in the field of children's play on the issue of Play Board;

(3) if the former Play Board budget now allocated to the Sports Council is to be retained as a separate budget for children's play; and at what level proportionate to its 1987 value it will be maintained in future years.

(4) what steps he is taking to ensure that the intellectual, emotional and social development of children through play is developed by the Sports Council.

Mr. Tracey: The alternative options considered for the future development of children's play were set out in my reply to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 9 April at column 391.

A number of organisations and individuals have written to and discussed with me their concerns about the future funding and independence of children's play. As I have explained to them, I remain of the view that the future development of children's play within the structure of the Sports Council represents the best way of progressing the work begun by Play Board.

Within its grant-aid for 1987-88, the Sports Council has £700,000 separately allocated for children's play. Our proposals envisage that children's play would be treated separately under the council's corporate planning and budgeting arrangements with the proviso that at least half of the moneys available for the Department would be used to pump-prime private sector funds. This arrangement does not affect the continuing support for play under the urban programme—now running at £6 million each year —nor the further substantial resources directed to play by the Departments of Health and Social Security and Education and Science.

I fully appreciate the importance of play in the development of children. Together with continuing support from the Departments of Health and Social Security and Education and Science, I am sure that appropriate arrangements will be identified by the Sports Council which will recognise the full potential of children's play.

Tower Hamlets

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had concerning the recommendations contained in the first report of the Home Affairs Committee, Session 1986-87, on Bangladeshis in Britain; and, what is his policy as regards the Select Committee's recommendation that Tower Hamlets HIP allocation be significantly increased, at least to the extent needed to prevent further deterioration in housing conditions in the borough.

Mr. John Patten: The main HIP allocations for 1987-88 were made before the Select Committee's report was received and honoured in full the assurances previously given that allocations would be at least 80 per cent. of the initial allocations for 1985-65. Additional allocations are available for schemes to improve conditions on rundown estates, prepared in consultation with Estate Action: Tower Hamlets has already benefited under that heading in 1986-87, and submitted bids for 1987-88, which are being considered.

Decisions about HIP allocations for 1988-89 have not yet been made. Tower Hamlets will be invited to make a HIP submission to the Department later this year, when we shall consider it, together with other evidence about the authority's needs and performance.

The Government will be publishing a response in due course to all the Committee's recommendations.

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Tower Hamlets council since May 1986 on the growing cost and number of homeless families in Tower Hamlets; and what response he has made.

Mr. John Patten: The main specific representation was a recent report on homelessness which was discussed with officials on 14 April. We shall take account of all such representations when considering the council's next housing investment programme bid.

Improvement Grants

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the outstanding number of applications for improvement grants for each of the local authorities in England.

Mr. John Patten: Responsibility for administering the home improvement grant system rests with local authorities. The information requested on outstanding applications is not collected centrally.

Widdicombe Report

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the results of his review conducted following recommendation 58 of the Widdicombe report.

Dr. Boyson: My right hon. Friend announced last July that he would be studying the need and desirability of specific powers for local authorities to carry out economic development. He will announce his conclusions as soon as possible.

Harrogate District Council

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what capital allocations have been granted to the Harrogate district council in each year since 1981-82 (a) at the beginning of each year and (b) as supplementary allocations.

Dr. Boyson: The information requested is as follows:

Harrogate Borough Council Capital Allocations

Financial Year	Initial £	Supplementary £	Total £
1981-82	2,903,000	—	2,903,000
1982-83	3,141,000	103,000	3,244,000
1983-84	3,321,000	726,000	4,047,000
1984-85	2,911,000	—	2,911,000
1985-86	2,262,000	127,000	2,389,000
1986-87	2,040,000	8,000	2,048,000
1987-88	1,811,000	—	1,811,000

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on deferred purchase arrangements entered into by the Harrogate district council.

Dr. Boyson: Harrogate borough council entered into a deferred purchase arrangement in 1977 to finance the construction of a conference centre. This arrangement was terminated in 1982 with the assistance of an approval for additional conventional borrowing from my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State. The approval was given at a time of substantial capital underspending by local authorities nationally in recognition that the borough council was facing unforeseen financial difficulties as a result of its commitment to the conference centre. I have no information as to whether the Council has entered into other such arrangements.

National Play Focus

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which other Government Departments his Department consulted about the future of a national play focus.

Mr. Tracey: The Departments of Health and Social Security, Education and Science, Welsh Office and Northern Ireland Office were consulted during the Department's review in 1986 of its support for the voluntary organisation, Play Board, and have been kept in close touch with subsequent developments.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of the London Residuary Body; and what matters were discussed.

Dr. Boyson: My right hon. Friend last met Sir Godfrey Taylor on 5 February to discuss matters relevant to the LRB's functions under the Local Government Act 1985.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of the number of staff in his Department who are female, by grade, expressing each as a percentage of the total staff complement in that grade.

Mr. Ridley: Information for all grades could be given only at disproportionate expense. The information which is readily available relates to staff in post in the main groups of grades at 31 December 1986 and is as follows:

Tyne and Wear Urban Development Corporation

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the people appointed to the Tyne and Wear urban development corporation, their period of office, and the salary payable to them.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend intends to appoint the following to the board of the Tyne and Wear development corporation: Mr. Paul Nicholson (Chairman), Mr. John Ward (Deputy Chairman), Mr. Graeme Anderson, Mr. John Barnsley, Councillor John Donnelly, Mr. John Hall, Dr. Ralph Ley, Mr. Joe Mills, Councillor Bert Moore and Councillor Septimus Robinson. The chairman will be appointed for three years, the other members for two years.

For salary details I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) on 30 January 1987 at columns 460-61.

London Docklands (Property Sales)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the number of houses and flats on London Docklands Development Corporation owned land sold during the past 12 months for (a) over £30,000, (b) over £40,000, (c) over £50,000, (d) over £60,000, (e) over £70,000, (f) over £80,000, (g) over, £90,000 and (h) over £100,000.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to the hon. Member.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 770, he will list the equal opportunities policies which his equal opportunities unit has formulated since its introduction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: In addition to its work in helping to promote and implement equal opportunities generally, the unit has dealt with specific departmental policy statements on part-time working and job-sharing, encouragement of women to become promotion board members, special leave for staff with domestic responsibilities and other personal reasons, reinstatement after a break in employment, and the provision of personnel management services for disabled staff.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 771, he will list the measures implemented by his Department to reduce the risk of discrimination in recruitment and promotion.

Mr. Ridley: Measures implemented include the addition of a statement in job advertisements that the Department is an equal opportunity employer; training in equal opportunities for staff involved in recruitment and promotion; clearly defined non-discriminatory criteria for selection and promotion; and the recording of reasons for selection and promotion decisions. Monitoring of the ethnic origins of staff, now in progress on a voluntary basis, will provide useful information in this context.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tropical Timber Resources

54. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the growth and conservation of tropical timber resources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government's commitment to the wise use and replenishment of the world's tropical forests has been made clear on many occasions, most recently by myself during questions on 3 November 1986, at column 686. They already support forest management projects in rain forest zones through the aid programme and are ready to consider further proposals. The Government have also given their support to the Food and Agriculture Organisation's tropical forestry action plan, which is providing a valuable framework for the co-ordination of programmes and policies of donor and aid recipient countries.

The Government ratified the international tropical timber agreement in 1984 and are a member of the related Tropical Timber Organisation, which was established in 1986. One of the principal functions of this organisation is to seek to encourage the development of the trade in tropical hardwoods on the basis of sustainable and renewable resources.

Population Projects (Aid)

Mr. Charles Morrison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions for 1987 are being made to the International Planned Parenthood Federation, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities and the World Health Organisation's special programme on human reproduction.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have made the following pledges for 1987, subject to parliamentary approval:

(a) International Planned Parenthood Federation: £6·6 million (this figure includes £0·6 million to help the federation develop its capacity to combat AIDS);

(b) United Nations Fund for Population Activities: £5·0 million;

(c) World Health Organisation's special programme on human reproduction: £2·2 million.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Prevention

Mr. Max Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will discuss with chief constables the issuing of guidance to crime prevention officers about visiting all pensioner households to give advice on security and related matters.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under existing informal arrangements, the Home Office already has regular contacts with the Association of Chief Police Officers about all aspects of crime prevention, and we believe that the need to ensure that there is adequate provision of sensible advice to the elderly about personal and household security issues is already well understood by chief officers. Courses provided for crime prevention officers at the Home Office crime prevention centre include training on the provision of advice to the elderly and how to give it. Such advice can, of course, be provided in various ways and I am aware that a number of police forces have mounted special campaigns, often working with voluntary agencies, to reach the elderly in an effective and sensitive way.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider making grants available to all pensioner households to provide basic household protection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are a number of local schemes run, for example, by local authorities or crime prevention panels, for supplying domestic security equipment free or at very low cost to those most in need, primarily pensioner households. Central Government funds provided through the Department of Environment's urban and housing programmes, and the Manpower Services Commission's community programme, are also being used in schemes to make homes more secure.

Before instituting any national scheme to provide grants for domestic security, the Government would need to be satisfied that the scheme was the most effective way of improving the security of those in need. In the light of the recommendations on this issue made by the Home Office Standing Conference on Crime Prevention, and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the ministerial group on crime prevention has been considering what further measures the Government might take, though it is too early to say what the outcome of this consideration will be.

WALES

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Raffan asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the remit of the Welsh Health Promotion Authority.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The remit of the new authority, whose establishment has been widely and warmly welcomed, is contained in the policy memorandum which we have issued today; a copy has been placed in the Library. This follows consultation on a draft of the document with those with an interest in health promotion.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Timber

55. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of annual British timber requirements is met by tropical sources.

Mr. Howard: In 1985, the last year for which full statistics are available, 6·8 per cent. of the annual British timber requirement was met by timber originating from tropical sources.

Textiles

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the embargo recently imposed by the European Community on imports of cotton bed sheets from Pakistan.

Mr. Alan Clark: Following evidence of market disruption submitted by a number of member states, on 5 March 1987 the European Community imposed a provisional quota of 1,786 tonnes for three months on imports of goods covered by MFA category 20, woven bedlinen, from Pakistan to member states other than France and Italy (where quotas were already in force). The United Kingdom share of this quota is 391 tonnes. The provisional quota was imposed under the terms of article 8 of the EC-Pakistan bilateral textiles agreement, under the multi-fibre arrangement. A first consultation took place between the European Community and Pakistan on 2-3 April with the aim of agreeing a definitive quota level. No conclusion was reached and further consultations will take place shortly.

EC (Manufacturing)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the surplus or deficit in manufacturing trade with the European Economic Community in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures for each of the previous 20 annual periods in respect of the nations now compromising the European Economic Community.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information is in the following table:

EMPLOYMENT

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate the man-years effort required by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate to give approval to the safety case for (a) stage 1, (b) stage 2 and (c) stage 3 decommissioning of the first magnox power station; whether such estimates include work preparatory to receipt of the safety case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: At this stage only a preliminary and provisional estimate of two to three man-years can be made as the process is reactive and iterative; and the effort required is determined to some extent by factors outside the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate's control, such as the acceptability of the early pre-decommissioning safety reports prepared by operators.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate the man-years effort employed by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in (a) generic decommissioning work and (b) magnox decommissioning work, in each recent year; what resources are allocated to such work in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Man-year effort employed by the inspectorate in the last financial year has been less than half a man-year each on generic and magnox decommissioning work.

In the current financial year between one and two man-year's effort is available for assessment of decommissioning nuclear installations.

ENERGY

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list and describe the research and development work done since July 1985 on the decommissioning of nuclear power stations, in national and European Community projects; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what further research and development work has been done on the decommissioning of magnox power stations since July 1985; what has been the cost of such work; what additional work is planned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The main R and D work in the United Kingdom in the decommissioning field relates to the project to decommission the Windscale advanced gas-cooled reactor to stage 3. This work is also relevant to magnox decommissioning. Items covered include:

(a) work to specify a remotely operated handling machine now under manufacture;
(b) work to specify a manipulator, now under manufacture, which will be used with the remote handling machine;
(c) establishment of cutting, ventilation and filtration techniques;
(d) establishment of remote viewing techniques by TV;
(e) specification of a package for the storage, transport and eventual disposal of the radioactive waste.

There is also work on decommissioning the Dounreay fast reactor (which was shut down in 1977) towards stage 2. Recent R and D includes work on treatment of the liquid metal coolant.

The current European Community decommissioning R and D programme includes projects in the following areas:

(a) long-term integrity of buildings and systems;
(b) decontamination for decommissioning purposes;
(c) dismantling techniques;
(d) treatment of specific waste materials: steel, concrete and graphite;
(e) large containers for radioactive waste produced in dismantling nuclear installations;
(f) estimation of quantities of radioactive wastes arising from decommissioning nuclear installations in the Community;
(g) influence of installation design features on decommissioning.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what is the earliest date at which research and development work on the decommissioning of magnox power stations is expected to be sufficiently far advanced for a safety case for stage 3 decommissioning of any magnox station to be submitted to Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the earliest date at which research and development work on the decommissioning of magnox power stations is expected to be sufficiently far advanced for a safety case for stage 2 decommissioning of any magnox station to be submitted to Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what is the earliest date at which research and development work on the decommissioning of magnox power stations is expected to be sufficiently far advanced for a safety case for stage 1 decommissioning of any magnox station to be submitted to Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what decommissioning studies have had regard to aspects of the safety and practicability of the decommissioning of a magnox power station taking place on a site shared with operational nuclear reactor or a further nuclear power station under construction; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised that pre-decommissioning safety reports will be submitted to the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate on a time scale appropriate to its requirements. The safety implications of decommissioning a nuclear power station on a site shared with an operational reactor, or one under construction, is one of the factors which will be taken into consideration.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and magnox licensees on the required scope and content of a safety case for decommissioning operations; whether the scope and content of a safety case for stage 1, stage 2 or stage 3 has been agreed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised that discussions between the CEGB and the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate are currently in progress to establish the general scope, content, format and timing of pre-decommissioning safety reports for magnox stations which will be submitted to the NII about two years before the final shutdown of a station or before the appropriate stage of decommissioning. Agreement has yet to be reached on the final content and timing of such submissions which will, however, follow the general guidelines set down in the IAEA safety series document on the decommissioning of land-based nuclear reactor plants.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AIDS (Palace of Westminster Staff)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal whether he has any plans to arrange for staff of the Palace of Westminster to be screened for antibodies to human immunodeficiency virus.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 424]: No.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal whether any current or former staff of the Palace of Westminster have been found to have developed AIDS or antibodies to human immunodeficiency virus.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 424]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Health on Wednesday 22 April.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal what steps he has taken to ensure staff of the Palace of Westminster are warned about those homosexual and other activities which are deemed to involve a high risk of AIDS infection.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 30 March 1987, c. 424]: In April 1986 the Management and Personnel Office, after consulting the chief medical officer, DHSS, circulated all departments with guidance to managers and model notes for staff. Copies of those notes and also of the Department of Employment—Health and Safety Executive book "AIDS and Employment" have been made available to management and staff of the House.

I understand that copies of both those pieces of guidance are available in the House of Commons Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Focus for National Play

Mr. Clelland asked the Prime Minister which Government Departments have been involved in consultations on the future of a focus for national play.

The Prime Minister: The Department of Health and Social Security, Education and Science, Scottish Office, Welsh Office, and Northern Ireland Office were consulted in 1986 during the Department of the Environment's review of its support for the voluntary organisation, Play Board. All have been kept in close touch with subsequent developments.

Soviet Union (Bibles)

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if, following her official visit to Zagorsk to light a candle, she will raise with the Soviet Government the availability of bibles in the Soviet Union and the current prohibition on importing bibles; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have made clear to the Soviet authorities my concern for full freedom of worship in the Soviet Union, and I shall continue to press for this in the future.

Pay Review Bodies

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the latest reports of the pay review bodies.

The Prime Minister: The 1987 reports of the Review Bodies on the pay of Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine, Doctors and Dentists, and the Armed Forces, and of the Top Salaries Review Body, have been published today. Copies are now available in the Vote office. The Government are grateful to members of the review bodies for these reports and the time and care which they have put into their preparation.

The following table shows the increases in pay rates recommended by the review bodies and their cost:

Review body	Average increase Per cent.	Range of increase Per cent.	Cost[1] £ million
Nurses, midwives and health visitors	9·50	5·00-12·70	447
Professions allied to medicine	9·10	6·00-12·60	39
Doctors and dentists	7·70	7·00- 8·25	230
Armed forces	5·96	4·00- 7·00	200
Top salaries	4·80	4·60- 5·20	4

[1] Including employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions where appropriate.

The Government have decided that the increases recommended by the review bodies, with the exception of those recommended by the Top Salaries Review Body, should be implemented in full with effect from 1 April 1987. The TSRB recommendations will be implemented as to 4·25 per cent. from 1 April 1987, with the balance from 1 October 1987, reflecting the offers made to civil servants in grades just below those covered by the recommendations.

The cost of the awards this year for the AFPRB and TSRB groups will be met from within existing public expenditure programme totals. In the case of the health services, however, the Government recognise that the full costs could not be accommodated within existing provisions without adversely affecting services to patients. The Government have therefore decided to provide an extra £328 million for health authority cash limits from the reserve for this year. Of the remaining cost, £248 million is already fully covered within the allocations made for this year, leaving a balance of £30 million to be covered from cost improvements, including the beneficial effects of the pay award in retaining nursing staff and reducing the use of agency nurses. The Government have similarly decided to provide an additional £68 million to the family practitioner services from the reserve for this year.

The pay rates and scales resulting from the decisions will be promulgated as soon as possible for all the groups concerned. Pensions will be based on the salaries actually in payment in accordance with the principle set out in my written answer of 13 April 1984, at column 383.

I am today announcing separately the Government's decision to proceed with the scheme for discretionary pay at Civil Service grades 2 and 3, on which there has recently been extensive consultation, as part of the Government's policy that there should be a strengthening of the link between pay and performanc at all levels within the Civil Service. It is expected that discretionary pay increases will be in effect as from 1 October 1987, at the rates recommended by the TSRB.

Civil Service (Performance-related Pay)

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister what progress has been made with the introduction of performance-related pay in the Civil Service.

The Prime Minister: The Government are in favour of strengthening the link between pay and performance at all levels in the Civil Service.

At the most senior levels a scheme for the introduction of discretionary increments for staff in grades 2 and 3 is being introduced this year in accordance with the recommendations of the Top Salaries Review Body. This scheme will provide additional pay for the best performers in recognition of sustained high performance. The first increments will be in payment with effect from 1 October and will be withdrawable on a mark-time basis where performance falls off over a prolonged period. I am placing details of the scheme in the Library of the House.

For staff from grade 3 down to grade 7 a scheme for the annual award of performance bonuses has been in operation on an experimental basis since April 1985. This experiment will end in March 1988, when it will be replaced with a new performance-related scheme for grades 4 to 7 which will take account of experience with the performance bonus experiment. The details of the new scheme will be announced in due course after consultation with staff interests, but as an interim measure we have proposed to the unions concerned that a new performance point should be introduced at grade 5 with effect from 1 September 1987 in respect of people who have been on the maximum of their scale for at least one year. The receipt of this new increment would be linked to performance markings in the annual reports of the individuals concerned.

For staff who have not yet reached the normal maximum salaries for these grades we intend to bring forward proposals which will enable them to earn accelerated incremental progression in return for outstanding performance coupled with the with olding of increments in the case of performance which does not fully meet the requirements of the grade.

We have also entered into a provisional agreement with the Institution of Professional Civil Servants under which we expect a start to be made in April 1988 on using discretionary range points of pay, again linked to performance markings in annual appraisal reports. This arrangement covers staff in most of the grades for which the IPCS has sole national representation.

Taken together these new arrangements mean that from April 1988 over 80,000 civil servants will be in grades covered by performance-related pay. This represents a major step forward in the management of the Civil Service. We hope that it will be possible to bring other staff not covered by these new arrangements within the scope of similar schemes in due course.

Sir Maurice Oldfield

Sir Peter Blaker asked the Prime Minister whether she will make a statement on the recent allegations concerning Sir Maurice Oldfield in relation to the security of the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: Sir Maurice Oldfield became Security Co-ordinator in Northern Ireland in October 1979. Subsequently reports were received which caused his positive vetting clearance to be reviewed. In March 1980, in the course of that review, he made an admission that he had from time to time engaged in homosexual activities. His positive vetting clearance was withdrawn. By this time he was already a sick man; he finally ceased to serve as Security Co-ordinator in Northern Ireland when a successor took over in June 1980; he died in March 1981.

There was a lengthy and thorough investigation by the Security Service, which included many interviews with Sir Maurice Oldfield himself, to examine whether there was any reason to suppose that he himself or the interests of the country might have been compromised. The conclusion was that, though his conduct had been a potential risk to security, there was no evidence or reason whatsoever to suggest that security had ever been compromised; indeed, he had contributed notably to a number of security and intelligence successes which would not have been achieved had there been a breach of security. That conclusion stands.

The facts of the case were made known to the Security Commission, when it undertook the review of security procedures and practices, including vetting, in the public service which I commissioned in March 1981. In that report the commission dealt with criteria for positive vetting clearances and with the security implications of male homosexuality. I made it clear in my statement on the Security Commission's report, which was presented to Parliament in May 1982 as Cmnd. 8540, that the Government accepted the Security Commission's report and were acting upon its recommendations.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 April.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 23 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

SCOTLAND

Rechem Plant, Bonnybridge

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to what chemical substances, in what annual volumes, and by what methods of treatment, were processed by the Rechem plant in Bonnybridge, as to where those chemicals are now being treated, and by what processes; and what complaints have so far been received from residents of the areas in which the reprocessing plants dealing with these chemicals are situated.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not held centrally. However, the hon. Member may care to note the following possible sources of information:

(a) regarding substances processed at Bonnybridge—Rechem International and Falkirk district council.

(b) where chemicals now being treated—the second report of the Hazardous Waste Inspectorate (a copy of which is in the Library) and local authorities identified in that report.

(c) any complaints about current treatment — the relevant local authorities, and the Department of the Environment Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution.

Forth River Purification Board

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures he has available for staffing levels, actual and establishment, of the Forth river purification board.

Mr. Ancram: The establishment level at 31 December 1986 was 73 full-time and 10 part-time staff. One full-time post was vacant at that date.

Scottish Development Agency (Expenditure)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent by the Scottish Development Agency in (a) Fife, (b) Dunfermline district and (c) Kirkcaldy district in each year since 1975, and as a proportion of total expenditure on (i) environmental improvement, (ii) industrial investment and (iii) all Scottish Development Agency expenditure.

Mr. Lang [pursuant to his reply, 20 March 1987, c. 657]: The information, which is readily available only from the financial year 1981-82, is as follows:

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC (Contributions)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the net contribution made by the United Kingdom to the European Economic Community in each calendar year since 1973; and if he will express the contribution over the entire period as an amount per day in pounds sterling.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell) on 22 April, at columns 377-78. The latest available figures for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the Community budget for the period 1 January 1973 to 31 December 1986 is £7,772 million. This represents an average net payment of £1·52 million a day since accession.

Building Societies

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he proposes to make any changes to the income tax regulations for building societies.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Three minor changes will be made to the regulations which govern the building societies "composite rate" tax scheme. These changes will enable building societies to pay interest gross to depositors in the following limited circumstances:

On certificate of deposit of £50,000 or more with a duration of between one and five years.

On time deposits of £50,000 or more in a foreign currency.

On deposits by a subsidiary of a building society with its parent society.

The first two changes mean that the tax treatment of certificates of deposits and time deposits issued by a building society will mirror that which already applies to similar deposits with banks. The other change will ensure that interest paid by a building society to its subsidiary is treated in the same way as interest paid by a company to its subsidiary.

A statutory instrument will be laid before the House as soon as possible, and the changes will apply to interest paid on or after 1 June 1987.

Finance Bill

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make notes on those clauses of the Finance Bill to be taken in Committee of the Whole House available to right hon. and hon. Members.

Mr. MacGregor: Yes. The appropriate notes on clauses were placed in the Vote Office earlier today.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Historic Buildings Council

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the Historic Buildings Council for Northern Ireland to publish annual reports covering the years since 31 March 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: It is expected that a report covering the period since 31 March 1981 will be published during the course of this year.

DHSS (Accommodation)

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the cost to the taxpayer to maintain someone in Department of Health and Social Services accommodation in the Newry/Armagh area.

Mr. Needham: Information is not available in the form requested. The average gross costs in the year ended 31 March 1986 of maintaining someone in the various types of accommodation provided by the Southern Health and Social Services Board in Armagh/Dungannon and Newry/Mourne units of management are set out in the table. These exclude income, capital and central administration costs.

£—per resident week

Childrens' Homes	264
Old Peoples' Homes	134
Hostels for Mentally Handicapped Persons	199
Home for Physically Handicapped Persons	231

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are living in Department of Health and Social Services accommodation in Newry urban area/Armagh urban area.

Mr. Needham: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The following figures show the number of people living in accommodation provided by health and social services boards, acting as agents of the Department of Health and Social Services at 31 December 1985. This includes homes and hostels for children in care, the elderly and mentally or physically handicapped people. The areas referred to are the health and social services units of management.

	Number
Armagh and Dungannon	209
Newry and Mourne	145

Housing

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses are to be built in the Newry urban housing area in 1987-88.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in the first instance, but I understand from the chairman that in the 1987-88 financial year the Housing Executive expects to start 16 dwellings and to complete three dwellings in the Newry urban area.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are on the housing waiting list in Newry urban area.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and I am advised by the chairman that at 28 February 1987 there were 371 applicants on the housing waiting list for the Newry urban area.

Mr. T. H. Kernohan (Successor)

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made to appoint a successor to Mr. T. H. Kernohan in the offices of Northern Ireland Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints.

Mr. Tom King: Her Majesty the Queen has approved the appointment of Dr. M. N. Hayes, who is retiring from his post as permanent secretary of the Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services, to succeed Mr. T. H. Kernohan in both posts with effect from 9 July this year.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Food Additives

57. Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the adequacy of testing procedures for food additives; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Yes. The independent expert committees that advices the Government on the health aspects of food additives has produced guidelines on the types of tests and information it requires and on the way in which particular tests should be conducted. The committees advises us that these tests provide the best means currently available to provide the data concerning the likely health effects of food additives.

Hearing Aids (Batteries)

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the hearing centre at Dudley road hospital in Birmingham is supplying batteries imported from Switzerland for use in hearing aids.

Mr. Major: Contracts for the supply of hearing aid batteries are held by a number of manufacturers. An international company based in Switzerland was awarded one of the contracts, to supply a quantity of mercury "button cell" batteries, as a result of competitive tendering carried out according to the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade code on Government procurement. The majority of mercury "button cell" batteries are supplied to the National Health Service by manufacturers in the United Kingdom and the National Health Service will continue to encourage competitive United Kingdom sources of supply.

Familial Hypercholesterolaemia

Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to publicise to the medical profession the need to screen and identify those at risk from coronary heart disease due to an inherited condition known as familial hypercholesterolaemia.

Mrs. Currie: Familial hypercholesterolaemia is the commonest inherited hyperlipidaemia (surplus of fatty substances in the blood). People suffering from this condition show an increased risk of heart attack and sometimes strokes, at an early age. They often also show certain distinctive clinical signs and a family history of the condition. It is for the clinicians responsible for the care of such patients to initiate whatever tests they consider appropriate but there is no professional or scientific consensus on the need for general population screening at this time.

In view of recent publications in the medical press and of the excellent work being carried out by the voluntary organisations in this field it is not considered necessary to undertake further publicity.

Familial Hyperlipidaemia

Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make available to the public a fact sheet on familial hyperlipidaemia giving information on how and where blood-tests can be taken for people with a family history of heart or blood-fat problems.

Mrs. Currie: I understand such fact sheets are available from the Family Heart Association. There is continuing research in this field, the results of which are made available to doctors. Estimates of blood lipid concentrations are available from National Health Service pathology laboratories when indicated on clinical grounds.

Pensioners

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what extent pensioners, in receipt of a supplementary pension, can apply for financial assistance to pay for locks and other protection to their homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: There is no specific provision in the supplementary benefit scheme for single payments for locks or other security devices. Help is available exceptionally under the regulation 30 "fall-back" provision. This allows a single payment to be made if it is the only means of avoiding serious risk to health or safety. Whether the "fall-back" provision would apply in an individual case is a matter for the independent adjudicating authorities to decide.

Patient Care

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 1985 for each region and for England as a whole the number of deaths and discharges among, and the number of beds occupied on 31 December by, patients receiving treatment under contractual arrangements with institutions outside the National Health Service; and if he will break down these figures into the categories of (a) medical (b) surgical, (c) pre-convalescent and post-operative, (d) convalescent, (e) geriatric, (f) diseases of the chest, (g) maternity, (h) mental illness, (i) mental handicap, (j) rehabilitation, (k) terminal care and (l) others.

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service in-patients received treatment in private hospitals in the last year for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 14 January 1987 c. 207-210]: I regret that the average daily bed occupation figures given for specialties in South-West Thames and Oxford regional health authorities were incorrect. Amended figures are as follows together with revised totals for England.

TRANSPORT

Safety at Sea

56. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures his Department is taking to improve safety at sea.

Mr. Moore: My Department has a wide range of measures in hand to promote safety at sea. As I have announced today in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. McQuarrie), my Department has today placed a contract with Bristow Helicopters Ltd. for the provision of a new Her Majesty's Coastguard search and rescue helicopter at Stornaway which will enhance search and rescue coverage on the north-west coast of Scotland; Her Majesty's Coastguard is extending its VHF direction finding network and is being provided with other equipment to improve communications with vessels in distress; consultations are proceeding on new safety requirements for fishing vessels following the Safety at Sea Act; new standards for lifesaving appliances for certain types of vessel will shortly be proposed; safety inspections of United Kingdom and foreign vessels in United Kingdom ports are continuing at a high level; and my officials are pursuing a range of initiatives within the International Maritime Organisation, all designed to promote greater safety at sea.

In addition, as I informed the House on 9 March, my Department has embarked on a programme of checks on roll-on/roll-of ships, and these checks will be repeated at six-monthly intervals, The formal investigation into the loss of the Herald of Free Enterprise opens on Monday.

When it reports, I shall give most urgent and serious consideration to its recommendations. If, as the investigation proceeds, it becomes clear that measures ought to be taken before the inquiry process has been completed, I shall not hesitate to do so.

Roll-on/Roll-off Ferries

Mr. Peter Rees asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans for further measures to improve the safety of roll-on/roll-off ferries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: As I informed the House on 9 March, my Department has embarked on a programme of checks on roll-on/roll-off ships, and these checks will be repeated at six-monthly intervals.

The formal investigation into the loss of the Herald of Free Enterprise opens on Monday. When it reports, I shall give most urgent and serious consideration to its recommendations. If, as the Investigation proceeds, it becomes clear that measures ought to be taken before the inquiry process has been completed, I shall not hesitate to do so.

Buyouts

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether, when a local management buyout is being contemplated for a National Bus Council subsidiary, it will be possible for a mortgage charge to be accepted in support of the payment.

Mr. David Mitchell: Those who provide finance for buyouts will form their own judgments on what security they need for their loans, and neither the National Bus Company nor the Government have any objection to a subsidiary's assets being mortgaged for that purpose. Moreover, where bids for National Bus Company subsidiaries, whether from managers or third parties, do not reflect the possible alternative use value of property, the NBC is prepared to consider selling the subsidiary subject to a mortgage charge under which further proceeds become due only if the property is resold or developed.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of the Zeebrugge disaster, he has any plans to review the regulations governing the carriage of hazardous or toxic wastes on passenger ferries.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The conditions under which dangerous goods may be carried at sea are contained in the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1981 as amended and the International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code. These conditions are subject to continual review both nationally and internationally and any lessons to be learnt from the Zeebrugge disaster will certainly be taken into account.

Mhari L

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to order the disentanglement of the wreck of the Mhari L from the undersea cable.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No.

Northern Region

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many enforcement officers are engaged by the Northern traffic commissioners to monitor the running of public transport provision within its areas; and how many such enforcement officers are allocated to Cleveland county traffic area.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Newcastle office of the north-eastern traffic area has nine traffic examiners to serve the various enforcement needs of the Department and to assist the traffic commissioner in carrying out his functions; four of these examiners are permanently based in Darlington and their responsibilities include the county of Cleveland. In addition the traffic commissioner can use the traffic area office administrative staff to support him in his statutory duties.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total number of reports on public transport operation within the Northern traffic region submitted by enforcement officers since effective deregulation; and how many such reports relate to public bus services within the Cleveland county traffic area.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Transport Act 1985 does not require formal reporting on public transport services. Where complaints are received by a traffic commissioner it is for him to decide whether any further investigation or action is called for. Any resulting reports to him by his staff are confidential.

Helicopter Rescue (Scotland)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 627-28, what further progress has been made in setting a date for the establishment of a search and rescue helicopter in north-west Scotland.

Mr. Moore: My Department has today placed a contract with Bristow Helicopters Ltd. for the provision of a search and rescue helicopter to be based at Stornoway. The helicopter will be a Sikorsky S61N Mk II aircraft, the civil equivalent of the military Westland Sea King. It is expected to be on station at Stornoway in early May.

Sea Passengers (Compensation)

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached a decision, following the consultation announced by his hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for aviation, on 25 March, on increasing the limit on compensation for death or injury of sea passengers carried by United Kingdom carriers.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Yes. Following consultations I have decided to increase the limit from its present figure of £38,173 to around £80,000.

The statutory instrument necessary will use a figure of 1,525,000 gold francs, because limits under the Athens convention are at present expressed in gold francs. The conversion rate from gold francs to sterling is adjusted from time to time; using the current sterling-SDR rate, the sterling equivalent of 1,525,000 gold francs is £80,009.

I intend to press for an increase in the limits in the Athens convention, and to keep the United Kingdom limit under review.

The new limit will come into effect on 1 June.

ENVIRONMENT

Agricultural Land

53. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State of the Environment if he will make a statement on the loss of agricultural land to housing development.

Mr. Waldegrave: The transfer of agricultural land to urban uses, including housing, is dealt with in the publication "Rural Enterprise and Development" issued on 10 March. The rate of transfer of farmland has fallen from over 15,000 hectares a year before 1975 to less than 5,000 hectares a year in England and Wales in the period 1980 to 1985. That recent rate is not expected to change significantly as a result of the adjustments to planning policy proposed in the draft circular "Development involving Agricultural Land".

Recording of changes in the use of land by Ordnance Survey, introduced in 1985, shows that under half of the land used for new housing in England is transferred from farmland. About 45 per cent. of the land developed for housing is on derelict, redeveloped or unused land in urban areas.

Right to Repairs Scheme

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of tenants who have (a) applied for and (b) received payment for repairs carried out under the right to repairs scheme; and what is the total cost of payments under the scheme.

Mr. Tracey: Provisional estimates are that about 800 applications under the right to repair scheme were submitted to English local authorities in 1986, of which 80 were accepted. In about 310 cases the landlord elected to carry out the repair within 28 days, 270 were rejected as outside the scheme and another 110 for other reasons. During the year, about 45 claims for payment were received by the authorities and 40 of these were agreed for a total of around £4,000.

Grant-related Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the local authority associations on developing grant-related expenditure assessments for local authorities personal social services expenditure; what steps he has taken to ensure that personal social services grant-related expenditures reflect need; and what proposals he has to develop personal social services grant-related expenditures in the future.

Dr. Boyson [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987]: The Secretary of State discussed the 1987 development programme for grant-related expenditure assessments with local authority representatives in the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 2 April. Proposals for development work on personal social service GREAs were put forward by the Association of County Councils and jointly by the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and the Association of London Authorities. However, as the Secretary of State indicated at that meeting, he does not propose to set up a group to review personal social service GREAs this year. In conjunction with the local authority associations research is proceeding on the GREA for children's services but we do not expect results from this to be available in time for the 1988-89 RSG settlement.

Housing Trusts

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department takes to ensure that the allocation of properties by housing trusts complies with the aims and policies of equal opportunity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987]: To qualify for public funds, housing trusts must register with the Housing Corporation, which issues guidance to ensure that allocations, which are made primarily on the basis of need, do not discriminate against particular groups.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Catering Craft Courses

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will make a statement on the standard of the catering craft courses in those universities and colleges which undertake such courses;

(2) if he has any plans to improve craft training in hotel and catering courses in those universities and colleges which organise craft training courses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Hotel and catering courses at craft level are part of the non-advanced further education provision and are not offered in universities. The standard of courses provided in colleges in England and Wales as described in the report of the survey carried out by Her Majesty's Inspectorate, "NAFE in practice", published on 8 April 1987 which includes a section on hotel and catering courses. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

The report says that NAFE has responded well to the needs of the hotel and catering and baking industry by providing a wide range of appropriate vocational courses all of which offer nationally recognised qualifications. Over 84 per cent. of the classes seen in the 34 colleges included in the survey were satisfactory, including 24 per cent. which were good. Students achieved particularly good standards in practical work.

The Department has no specific proposals for improvements in craft training in hotel and catering although, as with other craft courses, we are concerned that standards should not only be maintained but raised where possible.

Last year the NAB recommended and my right hon. Friend accepted an increase of 359 places on advanced hotel and catering courses. This represented an increase of 16 per cent., the greatest planned increase in any academic area for 1987-88.

School Closures and Amalgamations

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list showing, for each recent year, and for each set of proposals for the closure or amalgamation of schools that he has refused (a) the name of the local education authority, (b) the age range of children concerned, (c) the date that the authority first considered the closure of any school identified for closure in the set of proposals, (d) the dates of public consultation on the proposals, (e) the date of receipt of the proposals by his Department, (f) the approximate number of children in the schools identified for closure, (g) the date of refusal and (h) whether or not a replacement set of proposals has been approved subsequently; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Information is not available on (c), (d), (f) and (h). The following table gives the available information on closure or amalgamation proposals which were rejected by my right hon. Friend or his predecessor in 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list showing for each set of proposals for the closure or amalgamation of schools that he is currently considering (a) the name of the local education authority, (b) the age range of children concerned, (c) the date that the authority first considered the closure of any school identified for closure in the set of proposals, (d) the date of public consultation on the proposals, (e) the date of receipt of the proposals by his Department and (f) the approximate number of children in the schools identified for closure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what number of sets of proposals for the closure or amalgamation of schools approved by him since the publication of "Better Schools," Cmnd. 9496, have not met the guidance given on minimum size of schools contained in paragraphs 273 and 275; what number of such approvals there have been for primary schools; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what number of sets of proposals for the closure or amalgamation of schools approved by him since the publication of the 1981 circular "Falling Rolls and Surplus Places" have not met the guidance given on minimum size of schools, as repeated in paragraph 273 of "Better Schools" Cmnd. 9469; what number of such approvals there have been for primary schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: This information can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information has been received by his Department in recent years regarding schemes for school closures or amalgamation as to (a) the length of time since the local education authority first considered any part of the scheme and (b) the effects and consequences during that time on any school provisionally identified for closure, in particular changes in capital spending and pupil numbers; what studies have been made on any adverse effects which might occur during a lengthy period of uncertainty about the future of a school; what steps he has taken to mitigate any such effects and consequences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The information at (a) and (b) is not available. It is for local education authorities to consider the timing and consequences of any statutory proposals for closing or amalgamating schools; no studies have been made of these matters. My right hon. Friend has given an undertaking that once proposals have been made he will use his best endeavours to reach a decision within six months of their publication unless there are exceptional circumstances.

Educational Support Grant

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to extend the educational support grant for teaching mathematics in schools beyond March 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend expects to invite the views of the local authority associations on proposals for a programme of education support grants for the 1988-89 financial year shortly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Butter

3. Mr. Torney asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the quantity and the value in sterling of United Kingdom-produced butter going into intervention in the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: In the 12 months up to December 1986 the United Kingdom bought in 90,646 tonnes at a cost of nearly £174 million.

Alternative Land Use

9. Mr. James Lamond asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received concerning his published plans for alternative land uses; and if he will make a statement.

43. Mr. Beith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about his farming and rural enterprise proposals.

Mr. Jopling: I have received a number of representations from interested organisations and private individuals. In general these new initiatives have been welcomed.

Fishing Vessels

10. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on decommissioning grants for fishing vessels.

Mr. Gummer: Following consultation with the industry I hope to make an announcement shortly on whether we should continue to operate a decommissioning grants scheme for fishing vessels.

Fishing Industry

42. Mr. Dixon asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to improve the shore side infrastructure of the fishing industry.

Mr. Gummer: Responsibility for harbour infrastructure rests with individual harbour authorities. However grants towards harbour improvements, of benefit to the fishing industry, are available under the provisions of section 2 of the Fisheries Act 1955.

Community assistance is also available for marketing and processing in the fisheries sector and for improved port facilities under Regulations EC/355/77 and EC/4028/86 respectively.

Food Aid

15. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received on the operation in the United Kingdom of the European Community food aid scheme for the needy.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of letters from hon. Members, Members of the European Parliament and others about particular aspects of the scheme, which has now ended. Replies are being sent in the usual way.

16. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to which local authorities have been involved in the distribution of European Economic Community free food.

Mr. Gummer: I know from correspondence received in my Department that a number of local authorities have been involved in various ways in these distributions. However comprehensive information has not been compiled.

24. Mr. Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if there are any plans for the extension or repetition of the European Economic Community food aid scheme.

Mr. Gummer: The scheme came to an end in the United Kingdom at the end of March. Any repetition of the scheme would be a matter for the Commission: I know of no proposal at present.

26. Mr. Corbett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the amount of surplus European Economic Community butter, cheese and beef distributed to people entitled to receive it in Birmingham.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 11 March to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field).

33. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest information as to how many individuals have received free food under the European Economic Community food aid scheme.

Mr. Gummer: I do not have this information.

41. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his most recent information as to the amounts of cereal products distributed under the European Economic Community food aid scheme in the United Kingdom and other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Gummer: No cereal products were distributed in the United Kingdom under this scheme. The United Kingdom had no intervention stocks of milling wheat. Provisional information from the European Commission indicates deliveries in other member states totalling 11,680 tonnes of flour and 2,400 tonnes of semolina.

45. Mr. Cartwright asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the operation in the United Kingdom of the European Community food aid scheme for the needy.

Mr. Gummer: I have nothing to add to earlier statements on the operation of this scheme, which came to an end in the United Kingdom at the end of March.

Dairy Products

17. Mr. Adley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he plans to increase United Kingdom consumption of dairy products.

Mr. Gummer: The Government's aim is to encourage the improvement of marketing in the dairy sector through support for Food from Britain. We are encouraging renewed efforts by the MMB and we shall continue to ensure that consumers have sufficient information and choice to make their own decisions about a healthy and balanced diet in which dairy products should take a proper place.

North Norway Cod Fishery

18. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he makes of the implications for United Kingdom fishing interests of the current licensing arrangements for the north Norway cod fishery.

Mr. Gummer: I am satisfied that the licensing arrangements covering the North Norway cod fishery safeguard the interests of the British fishing industry.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

19. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future operation of hill livestock compensatory allowances in the United Kingdom in the light of discussions in the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Gummer: The normal autumn review of economic conditions in the hills and uplands later this year will as necessary take account of the various decisions of the Council including the new options regarding the operation of the hill livestock compensatory allowances. As our recent policy document "Farming UK" makes clear, the Government will continue to provide appropriate support to meet the special needs of the hills and uplands.

Green Pound

20. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy on the future valuation of the green pound; and when this matter is to be discussed by the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Jopling: In the course of the forthcoming price-fixing, the Government will be seeking an outcome on the green pound which is equitable to United Kingdom farmers, traders and consumers.

44. Mr. Baldry asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Council of Ministers on the current value of the green pound.

Mr. Jopling: I told the 30-31 March meeting of the Council of Ministers that the Government would finalise their position on the devaluation of the green pound at a later stage in the negotiations.

51. Mr. Marland asked the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effects of a devaluation in the green pound on United Kingdom farmers.

Mr. Jopling: A devaluation of the green pound would reduce United Kingdom MCAs and raise agricultural support prices and United Kingdom farm income. It would also tend to increase feed costs and consumer prices for food and add to Community budget costs and United Kingdom public expenditure.

Mr. Hunter asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received concerning the value of the green pound.

Mr. Jopling: I have received a substantial number of such representations.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the average percentage difference between the value of the pound sterling and the green rate for the pound sterling for each six months period since January 1979.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987]: The information is not available in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Monetary compensatory amounts reflect the difference between sterling's market rate and green rates. The following table shows the monetary compensatory amount percentages for beef and cereals during the first week in each six months period since 1979 as well as the latest figures available:

Date (week commencing)	Monetary compensatory amount (percentage)
	Beef	Cereals
1 January 1979	−27·0	−27·0
2 July 1979	−6·0	−17·6
7 January 1980	−3·5	−9·0
7 July 1980	+1·7	−1·0
5 January 1981	+12·1	+12·1
6 July 1981	+12·3	+12·3
4 January 1982	+8·0	+8·0
5 July 1982	+9·6	+9·6
3 January 1983	+1·4	+1·4
4 July 1983	+5·2	+5·2
2 January 1984	+7·6	+7·6
2 July 1984	+1·0	+3·9
6 January 1985	−1·9	−1·9
1 July 1985	+3·6	+3·6
6 January 1986	−3·5	−3·5
7 July 1986	−7·7	−8·9
5 January 1987	−18·4	−26·3
27 April 1987	−16·4	−24·1

Pigs

21. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the prospects for the pig sector.

Mr. Gummer: The increase in export refunds and introduction of aids to private storage have strengthened the United Kingdom pig market in recent weeks. The future prospects for our pig industry will depend upon its ability to balance supply and demand for pigmeat, to expand its share of the domestic market for bacon and other pigmeat products and to increase exports.

Rhizomania

22. Mr. Freud asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's most recent consultations on measures to contain rhizomania in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My officials held a very useful meeting on 6 April with representatives of trade and producer organisations about my proposal for statutory controls on the disposal to land of waste from the processing of imported potatoes and other vegetables. The possible reduction of the soil tolerance allowed on imported potatoes was also discussed. Further meetings are being arranged with representatives of some of the individual sectors concerned. I look forward to a positive outcome of these discussions.

Poultry (Salmonella)

23. Mr. Shersby asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of poultry sold in the United Kingdom are infested with salmonella; what processes are currently used to eliminate this bacteria; and what new techniques are currently being investigated by his Department with a view to use in the future.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is not uncommon for salmonella organisms to be present in poultry. Statutory hygiene controls apply at every stage of production and manufacture to reduce salmonella infection in live birds and poultrymeat and in animal protein intended for livestock feed. My Department is continuously seeking ways of further reducing the incidence of infection.

Hedgerows

25. Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the number and length of hedgerows which have been removed and of new hedgerows which have been planted with public support since 1982.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I regret that information is not available in the form requested. Grants for hedge removal were abolished in 1976 except where this was ancillary to drainage work. Grants of this kind remained available until 1983. United Kingdom expenditure on them since 1982 has been £10·13 million.

Separate statistics on expenditure on grants for hedge planting and laying (with associated gates) are only available from 1985. Since then United Kingdom expenditure has been £2·0 million on total investment of £3·9 million.

Agricultural Support

27. Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current net cost of agricultural support in cash terms and as a percentage of gross domestic product.

Mr. Jopling: I refer to the reply given to my hon. Friend on 16 March.

Food Additives

28. Mrs. Roe asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria govern the listing of food additives on the labels of food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: All food additives that perform a technological function in the final food must be shown on the labels of pre-packaged foods in the list of ingredients. The information must show the function that the additive performs in the food by specified category followed by the specific name of the additive or its approved serial number (or both). At present flavourings only have to be shown under their category name. Non pre-packed foods need declare in a label or notice only the main categories of additives present.

Bees

29. Mr. O'Brien asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received over the importing of bees into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the past year, my Department has received 17 letters about importing bees into this country. Seven of these sought a temporary relaxation of our bee import controls following the bad weather in 1986; the remainder sought assurance that there would be no relaxation.

The purpose of these controls is to safeguard bee health in this country and particularly to keep our varroasis. The regulations are shortly to be extended to control the import of bee pests. I have no plans to relax the controls.

Beef

30. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new proposals he has to assist the beef producing sector of agriculture.

Mr. Gummer: The reforms in the Community beef regime that were agreed under the United Kingdom presidency began to apply from 6 April. Under these, the Commission has scope to propose measures to deal with particular developments in the market. I will be ready to press the Commission to ensure that the United Kingdom market is supported if any undue weakness emerges. Meanwhile, producers continue to benefit from the beef variable premium scheme, worth about £120 million in 1986-87, and suckler cow premium scheme, worth about £28 million. Upland beef producers also benefit from hill livestock compensatory allowances worth around £50 million this year.

40. Mr. Bruce asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the prospects for the beef industry.

Mr. Jopling: The reforms of the beef regime agreed in December came into effect on 6 April. Reliance on intervention is generally being reduced but the Commission has the scope to institute extra support measures if the market is unduly weak. Meanwhile, the beef variable premium scheme has been secured until 31 December 1988. There is scope to increase the suckler cow premium by 35 per cent. to over £33 per head. Upland beef producers will also benefit from hill livestock compensatory allowances. In addition, the Community has recognised that beef producers will be affected by measures taken in the milk sector. The Commission has estimated that expenditure on aids for private storage and export refunds in the beef sector will as a result rise by 435 mecu over the next two years.

Cereals

31. Mr. Yeo asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding cereal surpluses.

Mr. Gummer: I continue to receive representations from a large number of sources about the need to take action to control the over-production of cereals.

Fishing Fleet

32. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what forecasts the Government have made regarding the future of the United Kingdom's fishing fleet.

Mr. Gummer: The future of the fleet will depend upon decisions taken by individual fishermen. They will take account of the available fishing opportunities and the recently agreed 10-year Fisheries Structures Regulation 4028/86 which will provide a basis for new investment in the industry.

In addition, I hope shortly to be able to make an announcement on a new capital grant scheme.

Processed Foods (Fat Content)

34. Mrs. McCurley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends to introduce regulations relating to the fat content of processed foods.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We have already circulated for public comment detailed proposals on the fat content labelling of foods. We are considering those comments and are involved in discussion with the European Commission at official level about the proposals.

Organic Farming

35. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures Her Majesty's Government are taking to encourage organic farming in Britain.

Mr. Donald Thompson: As described in "Farming UK" which was published by Agriculture Ministers on 10 March my Department is consulting the industry on the setting of production standards. In addition, the agricultural advisory services are equipping themselves to respond to demand for specialised advice from those producing organic food. Organic growers also benefit from the Department's overall research programme, which includes topics such as nitrogen fixation and biological control, as well as specific projects on organic farming.

Farm Incomes

36. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to improve the real level of farm incomes.

Mr. Jopling: The Government's policy of promoting a better balance in the CAP between supply and demand for surplus commodities and controlling CAP expenditure, while offering increased opportunities for enterprise in rural areas, offers the best prospect for the longer term viability of the agriculture industry.

Milk Quotas

37. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements have been agreed for the leasing of milk quotas for 1987-88.

Mr. Jopling: The European Commission have expressed serious doubts about the legality of our quota leasing arrangements. I am trying hard to change their minds on this and am in direct communication with the Commission on the problem.

52. Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he will give to the Milk Marketing Board over the allocation of milk for manufacturing purposes following the introduction of the quota system.

Mr. Gummer: The arrangements for making milk available to buyers are a matter for the joint committee of the Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Trade Federation to negotiate in accordance with the milk marketing scheme and relevant provisions of Community law.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is transferring milk quota bought under the outgoers' scheme from England to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987]: As I announced to the House on 31 March we are making an adjustment to the distribution of United Kingdom quota which involves the transfer of 30,000 tonnes from Great Britain to Northern Ireland with effect from 1 April 1987. It is hoped that this quota can be bought up under a national outgoers scheme, which we plan to open shortly, but in order to ensure that the required quota is available a provisional quota reduction of about 0·3 per cent. is being made.

Sheep Farmers

38. Mr. Kennedy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current prospects for sheep farmers.

Mr. Gummer: The sheep sector remains strong. Our breeding flock continues to expand steadily and our exports increased by 27 per cent. in 1986. My aim will be to ensure that the sector remains competitive and that sheep production can continue to play its important role, particularly in the economy of the hills and uplands.

Timber

39. Mr. Eastham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will say what effect he estimates his Department's published plans for encouraging woodlands will have on future timber import requirements.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is estimated that by the end of the next decade some 20-25 per cent. of our timber needs will be met from existing woodlands. The planting programmes now envisaged will further reduce our dependence on imports in the course of time, but it is not possible to put a precise figure on this as much will depend on long term levels of demand.

Tributyltin

46. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning his decision to refer the use of tributyltin to the Pesticide Advisory Committee; and if he will make a statement as to the committee's progress.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received a range of representations on this subject. The Advisory Committee considered the use of tribulyltin in the aquatic environment on 16 April and recommended that when antifouling paints are brought within the scope of the Food and Environment Protection Act on 1 July this year, products containing TBT should not be granted approval for use on small vessels or fish farming apparatus.

Common Agricultural Policy

47. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of dairy farming within the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: The outlook for dairy farming was poor before the package of measures adopted by the council last December, because of the threat posed to the support system by steeply rising surpluses. I believe that the industry now has much better prospects. The Community will soon need to consider the measures to follow the current quota system from 1989, and in discussion of them I will continue to seek better control of surplus production, through measures that respond to the needs of United Kingdom producers, traders and consumers.

Farm Produce (World Prices)

48. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the effect on agricultural employment of world prices for United Kingdom farmers' produce.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Employment in agriculture is influenced by many factors such as agricultural prices, the level of costs, investment, changes in technology and general economic conditions in the country. I have no reliable estimate of the effect of the kind of hypothetical circumstance envisaged.

Farm Businesses

49. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers went out of business in 1986; how many new farming businesses were started; and what was the net effect on the total number of farms.

Mr. Donald Thompson: These figures are not available. Data are not collected in a form which would allow the presentation of information on the basis requested.

Nutritional Labelling

50. Mr. Gregory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is yet in a position to issue guidelines on nutritional labelling.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No, but I hope to make a further announcement shortly.

Biotechnology

Mr. Gregory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the development of biotechnology designed to utilise agricultural and dairy products to the maximum.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department supports a wide ranging programme of research which exploits the potential of biotechnology across the agricultural, fisheries and food sectors. The aim of this programme is to improve product quality, develop novel products, improve production systems and combat animal and plant disease. Biotechnological work sponsored by my Department has an annual cost of around £7 million. Within this programme we are constantly alert to the possibility of developing cost-effective methods for greater utlilisation of agricultural products.

EC (Food Sales)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount of food, by commodity, and wine exported from the European Economic Community to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures in the comparable annual period 10 and 15 years previously.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested for 1976 and 1986 is set out in the table. Comparable information is not readily available for years prior to 1976.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the price at which butter, beef and sugar, respectively, were made available to traders, after the payment of export refund, to the Soviet Union, expressed in pounds sterling per pound, at the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Quarantine Kennels

Miss Fookes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the enforcement of the rule that no quarantine kennels should be left unattended at any time.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The statutory rabies controls do not require that approved quarantine premises should be constantly attended. However conditions of authorisation require the premises to be secure at all times and that certain welfare standards are met under the regular supervision of a registered veterinary surgeon.

Fish Catches (Reporting System)

Mr. Matthew Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to improve the speed and accuracy of the fish catch reporting system.

Mr. Gummer: The Government are proceeding with the further introduction of microcomputers into the port offices of the sea fisheries inspectorates which together with the re-organisation of the Inspectorates should lead to further improvements in the speed and accuracy of the fish catch reporting system.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 24 April 1987

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

State Security

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 6 April, Official Report, column 1, what information the Director of Public Prosecutions has as to the reasons for the length of the police inquiries concerning the possible prosecution of Lord Rothschild under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act; if the police have given the Director of Public Prosecutions any indication as to when those inquiries are likely to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The police inquiries have necessarily been lengthy and complicated. Unfortunately, these had not been completed when the officer in charge of the case had to undertake an entirely separate task. However, the Director of Public Prosecutions now expects to receive an interim report from the Metropolitan police by the end of next week.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Free Ports

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Customs and Excise review of the free ports procedures has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The main work of the review has been completed and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise will submit its report to me shortly.

EC Budget

Mr. Rowe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the European Commission's latest cash position and the implications for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke: The European Commission estimates that its spending obligations this month will again exceed available revenues under the budget for 1987.

The Commission therefore requested member states to advance from May into April the payment of own resources other than VAT in accordance with article 10(2) of Council regulation 2891/77: a similar advance was made last month. The Government are satisfied that this request is within the vires of article 10(2) and accordingly made an advance payment on 21 April of £150 million from the Consolidated Fund under section 2(3) of the European Communities Act 1972. The payment of levies and duties on 20 May will be reduced by the amount of the advance.

The Commission has also informed us that it has had to overdraw its accounts with members states in April in accordance with article 12(2) of Council regulation 2891/77. The amount involved for the United Kingdom is expected to be of the order of £155 million. The Government are meeting this obligation from the Consolidated Fund in accordance with section 2(3) of the European Communities Act 1972. Repayment of drawings made under this facility will be made by deduction from our May own resources payments.

Neither of these facilities involves increasing the total amounts which the Community is authorised to spend during 1987. There is therefore no net addition to public expenditure.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for East Berkshire, Official Report, 8 April, column 261, he will place a draft of the Value Added Tax (Cash Accounting) Regulations in the Library.

Mr. Brooke: A copy has been placed in the Library today.

Customs and Immigration

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions Her Majesty's Government are having about the extent to which the Channel tunnel international passenger train service operated from 1993 should conform to European Economic Community customs and immigration formalities and about how this is to be achieved.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987, c. 576]: None. Her Majesty's Government fully recognise that all customs and immigration formalities, including those for the Channel tunnel international train services to be operated from 1993, should conform to the requirements of relevant EC legislation in force at that time. In discussing any proposal for such legislation Her Majesty's Government will take full account of the special characteristics of the Channel tunnel services.

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what consideration his Department is giving to European Economic Community directives and proposals relevant to possible changes in customs and immigration formalities by the beginning of 1993; and what assessment he has made of their implications;

(2) what changes the European Commission has proposed for customs and immigration formalities for general passenger travel between European Economic Community member states, and between European Economic Community member states and other countries, by the beginning of 1993; and what changes at railway crossing points are implied in these proposals.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987, c. 576]: There is a draft frontier controls directive under discussion which, if adopted, would provide for selective rather than comprehensive checks on Community nationals at land frontiers including at railway crossing points. It would expire in 1990. There are further proposals, also under discussion, for the introduction of common border posts for customs purposes at internal Community frontiers.

More generally the Commission has indicated in its document "completing the internal market" that it wishes to arrive at a stage whereby checks on entry are abolished for Community citizens arriving from another Community country by 1992. Any proposal to that effect would be adopted only by unanimity.

It is not yet possible to make any realistic assessment of the implication of the above proposals which, for example, may be subject to changes arising from the discussions and negotiations.

No proposals for changes for passengers travelling between EC member states and other countries have been made.

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any customs and immigration checks for railway passengers travelling between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Eire are carried out on board moving trains; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987, c. 576]: No customs or immigration checks on railway passengers are carried out on board moving trains between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what information he has as to which railway crossing points within the European Economic Community require customs or immigration formalities;

(2) what information he has as to which crossing points within the European Economic Community require customs or immigration formalities and, of those, which offer such formalities on board moving trains or trains on board ferries, and which offer such formalities on board long-distance passenger trains where customs or immigration staff undertake their work beyond stations adjacent to the member states border.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987, c. 576]: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Defence Estimates

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1987.

Mr. Younger: I intend to publish this year's "Statement on the Defence Estimates" on Wednesday, 6 May.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Embassy, Moscow

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will make a statement about security arrangements for the new British embassy in Moscow.

Mr. Eggar: No. It is not our practice to comment about security arrangements at diplomatic missions overseas.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to apply the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Major: I understand that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has similar legislation under consideration and the consultative procedures have begun.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Facsimile Service

Mr. Onslow asked the Lord Privy Seal if he has any plans to improve the present arrangements for the receipt of facsimile messages by right hon. and hon. Members at the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Biffen: I have no plans to improve the present arrangements. In May 1986 the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee of the Services Committee examined the payments policy for the facsimile service and recommended that no changes be made. If my hon. Friend has a particular point in mind, perhaps he will write to me.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Visas

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for visas have been (a) made, (b) approved or (c) refused since the new arrangements were introduced in (i) Pakistan, (ii) India and (iii) Bangladesh.

Mr. Waddington: The information available centrally is given in the following table.

Electorate

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the most recent figure for the size of the electorate and the number of people in each category of persons unable to vote.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The total number of parliamentary electors on the 1987 United Kingdom electoral register, details of which were published on 22 April in OPCS Monitor EL 87/1, is nearly 43,700,000. This figure includes about 700,000 persons who will attain the age of 18 during the currency of the register who are entitled to vote at an election only on or after their 18th birthday. It also includes persons temporarily ineligible to vote for part or all of the currency of the register, that is persons serving sentences of imprisonment, non-voluntary mental patients and persons found guilty of corrupt or illegal election practices during the past five years—estimates of their numbers are not available. The main groups of people resident in the United Kingdom who are ineligible to vote and who should not be on the electoral register, with estimates of their numbers, are:

British and Commonwealth citizens and citizens of the Irish Republic aged under 18—12,600,000, excluding the 700,000 attainers on the register.

Foreign nationals, excluding citizens of the Irish Republic—700,000, 100,000 of whom are aged under 18.

Mr. John Cummisbey (Member's Correspondence)

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the letter from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, dated 24 February, regarding Mr. John Cummisbey, took seven weeks to answer.

Mr. Maller: The hon. Member's letter inquiring why his constituent had been transferred from Long Lartin prison to Gloucester prison was received by us on 3 March. Inquiries were necessary to establish the reasons for the transfer, but it should have been possible to reply by the end of March and I regret the additional delay.

SCOTLAND

Dog Excrement

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be able to announce the conclusions of the current review of the present legal provisions preventing dog excrement fouling public places.

Mr. Ancram: Consultation on this and other issues arising from a review of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 will commence as soon as possible. I cannot at this stage say when conclusions will be reached.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Brent

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to publish Her Majesty's Inspectorate's report on education in the London borough of Brent.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The report is being published today and copies have been placed in the Library. It shows that there are serious and deep-seated problems affecting education in Brent: the borough's education service has been gravely impaired by basic weaknesses of management and performance. I have asked the authority to take urgent and immediate action and to let me know by the end of June its action programme and timetable for dealing with the matters raised in the report so that those who live in Brent receive the sort of educational provision they are entitled to expect. I shall continue to monitor the position closely.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table grouping local education authorities into those controlled on 1 January 1986 by the Conservative party, those controlled by the Labour party, those controlled by the alliance parties and those with no overall control, showing for each authority, the average for each group and the overall average (a) the average primary school class size for January 1985 and January 1986, (b) the average secondary school class size for pupils under 14 in January 1985 and January 1986 and (c) the average secondary school class size for pupils over 14 in January 1985 and January 1986.

Mr. Dunn [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1987, c. 427]: The information requested for each local education authority in England for the years 1985 and 1986 is given in the following table. Authorities are grouped by the political control as at 1 January 1986. The analyses relate to classes taught by one teacher on a selected period within the day of the census count in January of each year and may not be representative of pattern of classes over the academic year as a whole.

TRANSPORT

Roads

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the results of his review of the national trunk road construction programme.

Mr. Moore: On 28 April 1987.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

United States (Perfume Imports)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the current volume of imports of perfumes from the United States of America; and what are the customs duties imposed thereon.

Mr. Alan Clark: For the first two months of 1987, 3,055 litres of perfumes and scents were imported from the United States under United Kingdom tariff heading 3306-2100. The rate of common customs tariff duty chargeable on that heading is 6·6 per cent.

Airbus

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any recent representations from employees or management at British Aerospace in Hatfield relating to future development projects proposed by Airbus Industrie; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Government have received representations from British Aerospace senior management, and from British Aerospace employees and union representatives at a number of sites, including Hatfield, about the company's application for launch aid in respect of the Airbus A330 and A340 projects. Discussions with the company are continuing, and the Government aim to reach a decision as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those United Kingdom companies which have been awarded contracts as part of current airbus programmes; and if he will state in each case the value and general nature of the contract concerned.

Mr. Pattie: On the information currently available to the Department, 98 United Kingdom companies, in the following list, have been awarded contracts as part of current programmes. These contracts relate to the supply of materials, components and parts for airframes and aeroengines, avionics and equipment. In addition, United Kingdom companies are involved in the supply of furnishings and fittings to airlines purchasing Airbus aircraft. It is not possible to give the values of these contracts, as orders are placed in batches and the total values cannot be determined until the production programme, and in some cases, spares demand, has ended.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has considered any estimate for the number of jobs which will be created by the airbus project in each of the next 10 years and; if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: Estimates currently available to the Department indicate that the numbers of jobs which could be directly generated in the United Kingdom by the Airbus A330/A340 programme in each of the next ten years are as follows:

	Number
1987	750
1988	1,350
1989	2,600
1990	1,550
1991	550
1992	1,200
1993	1,000
1994	1,000
1995	—
1996	—
	10,000

These estimates relate to jobs which would be either maintained or created within British Aerospace and companies supplying equipment and materials to the Airbus A330/A340 programme. British Aerospace have further estimated that, taking account of jobs which would be maintained or created within the wider community, the total number of A330/A340 related jobs could amount to 20,000.

The significance of the potential employment benefits to the United Kingdom of participation in the Airbus A330/A340 programme is fully recognised by the Government.

British Aerospace

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the value and percentage of product cost which was represented by Government funding for British Aerospace's (a) design and development costs and (b) production costs for each of the following projects (a) 125-800, (b) Jetstream 31,

(c) ATP, (d) 146-100, (e) 146-200, (f) 146-300, (g) A300 B2/B4, (h) A300-600, (i) A310-200, (j) A310-300 and (k) A320-200.

Mr. Pattie: The Government are not funding British Aerospace's production costs on any current civil aircraft programme. The Government have agreed to provide launch aid of up to £250 million, representing 54 per cent. of British Aerospace's estimated development costs on the A320. The Government also provided financial assistance of £7·8 million to Hawker Siddeley Aviation for development work on the 146 project, before that company was incorporated into British Aerospace.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning total British Aerospace investment in current civil aircraft programmes; and how much this works out at (a) per British Aerospace employee and (b) per employee in the United Kingdom aerospace industry.

Mr. Pattie: On the information currently available to the Department, the cumulative investment in civil aircraft programmes, comprising launch costs and production work in progress, by British Aerospace out of its own funds since 1979 is of the order of £1,300 million. This represents some £17,300 per British Aerospace employee and some £6,500 per employee in the United Kingdom aerospace industry. In addition, £196 million has been spent on launch costs, which was financed by Government launch aid.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total amount of funds made available by the Government to British Aerospace for current civil aircraft programmes in the form of (a) interest-free loan, (b) grant and (c) interest-bearing loan.

Mr. Pattie: The Government have agreed to provide British Aerospace with repayable launch aid of up to £250 million in respect of one civil aircraft programme. Since January 1981, the Government have offered British Aerospace regional development grants and regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act amounting to approximately £18 million, from which current civil aircraft programmes have derived benefit. In addition, the Government's investments in British Aerospace between 1977 and 1985 included public dividend capital from 1977 to 1980, a holding of ordinary shares from 1981 to 1985, and interest-bearing, repayable National Loans Fund advances. These investments were not directly related to individual civil aircraft programmes.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the revenue to be generated to the United Kingdom by (a) Airbus Industrie's forecast sales of 1,000 aircraft and (b) only 60 per cent. of their projected sales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: On Airbus Industrie's current forecast of 1,000 sales of A330 and A340 aircraft to the year 2005, it is estimated that the revenues, expressed in outturn values, generated to the United Kingdom in respect of airframes would be in order of £16·5 billion. The corresponding figure for 600 aircraft sales would be in the order of £10 billion. In addition, it is expected that further substantial revenues would accrue from the supply of equipment and aero-engine components, but no estimate of the value can be given until the supplier selection procedures by Airbus Industrie and the engine manufacturers have been completed.

The Airbus A330/A340 programme would, in common with other civil aerospace programmes, contribute substantially to the United Kingdom's export earnings.

Japan

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about trade relations with Japan.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 22 April 1987, c. 552]: During his recent visit to Japan, my hon. and learned Friend, the Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), underlined the importance that this Government attach to the introduction of real and effective market opening measures by the Japanese authorities.

At present, we are specifically concerned with two important objectives. First, in the financial services sector, we have laid down a timetable to secure access for British firms to the Tokyo stock exchange; second, in telecommunications, we have made it clear that we attach the highest importance to the equitable treatment of Cable and Wireless and the IDC consortium bidding to supply alternative international telecommunications services in Japan.

We are also looking at Community safeguard measures which may prove necessary in the event of substantial diversion of Japanese exports following the implementation of recent United States protectionist measures.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 114

SESSION 1986–87

6th April–24th April 1987

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
